Formal Reich Protest Calls on U.S. to Arrest 'Insulters' of Swastika

Note Asks Punishment of Participants in Bremen Affair.

Lehman Ordered To Report on Case

Phillips Expresses His Sympathy for 'Victims' of Nazi Regime.

The German Situation.

Germany formally protested to this country against the action of a mob in New York in tearing the Nazi flag from the liner Bremen, as Acting Secretary of State Phillips expressed sympathy for those reported suffering religious persecution.

Nazis renewed their drive against "state enemies," dissolving the Steel Helmet veterans' organizations in Saxony and disbanding many church youth groups in the Saar.

Paul Kress, alien masseur denied a license by Mayor LaGuardia, indicated he would take his fight to court.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As Acting Secretary of State William Phillips expressed sympathy for those reported to be suffering from religious persecution in Germany, the Nazi regime yesterday lodged a formal and emphatic protest with this Government against the assault made Friday night on the German flag aboard the North German Lloyd liner Bremen in New York Harbor.

Asserting the action of a mob in violently tearing the German Swastika from the bow of the Bremen and throwing it into the water constituted an insult to Germany, the note demanded that those who participated in the demonstration be arrested and punished. The note did not ask an apology.

The State Department immediately requested Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York to ascertain the facts and report them as quickly as possible. Meanwhile Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, standing less than 100 feet away on the White House steps, asserted those involved in the assault on the German flag would be prosecuted and criticized the officers of the Bremen for failing to co-operate in advance with New York police.

Views in Letter.

Phillips' expression of sympathy for those subjected to religious activities in Germany was contained in a letter to spokesmen for four national Jewish organizations, who Friday petitioned the State Department to protest against Germany's "racial and religious persecution."

The letter, while deploring religious intolerance, was general in its terms and although the Germany situation was twice mentioned, there was no direct condemnation of anything that has happened in Germany. Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), New York, after a conference with the President, said the White House fully approved the Phillips pronouncement and had suggested that he obtain it to read at a mass meeting of Jews in New York last night.

The situation created by the deep-seated hostility in this country toward Germany's antireligious campaign did not alone occupy State Department attention, but the department also had its eye cocked on the Italo-Ethiopian controversy, which may create a crisis in world affairs today when the League of Nations council meets at Geneva to discuss that prblem.

Neutrality Issue.

The threatened Italo-Ethiopian war afforded a concrete example of the type of controversies which the United States wishes to steer clear of and it gave particular point to the meeting of Phillips and other State Department officials with members of a Senate foreign relations committee to discuss steps for making this country's neutrality invulvnerable in the event of conflict abroad.

Bill Advancing 5,000 in Army Passes House

Minor Amendment May Delay Effective Pending Conference.

By James D. Secrest.

Nearly 5,000 Army officers will be promoted before the end of the summer, and the way will be opened for the promotion of more than 5,000 more as the result of the passage by the House yesterday of the Senate bill to alter the Army promotion system. The final vote was 220 to 99.

Aided by a gag rule which aroused the wrath of Representative Hoeppel (Democrat), of California, the House Military Affairs Committee almost railroaded the measure through without a change. That would have sent the bill to the White House for an expected signature.

Because of a minor amendment, however, the bill will have to return to the Senate and may go to conference, thus delaying its effective date.

The bill will place the Army promotion system on a basis somewhat similar to that in operation in the Navy and Marine Corps. It will clear the way for promotions of several thousand officers at present handicapped by being below what the service calls "the hump;" that is, they entered the service since July 2, 1920.

Taxpayers Aided.

One section of the bill, which was vigorously contested by Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, will enable World War officers in the regular service to retire at once if they have between 15 and 29 years' active duty behind them.

Blanton and Hoeppel vainly pointed out that the provision will make possible retirement on nearly three-fourths base pay at the age of 37 or in the early forties. Actual retirement pay will be 2½ per cent of annual pay multiplied by the number of years of active service up to 29.

Hoeppel's successful amendment—the only one adopted out of a score submitted—provides that the act does not become effective until the first of the month following enactment instead of July 1, 1935, as in the Senate measure.

Hoeppel said his amendment would save the taxpayers $100,000. The estimated cost of the new promotion system for the fiscal year 1936 is $705,000.

The bill increases the number of

League Test On Ethiopia Opens Today

Britain Set to Oppose Mussolini's Demand for Parley Limits.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

Statesmen gathered at Geneva for the opening of the League of Nations' conferences on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. It was believed the future of the league might hinge on the outcome.

French authorities strengthened their military forces in East Africa, fearing a general uprising of natives against European Colonial rulers should Italy meet reverses in the fight with Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, July 30.—With peace in Africa and possibly the future of the League of Nations at stake, statesmen of many nations gathered tonight for tomorrow's extraordinary session of the League of Nations Council.

Preparations for efforts here to settle peacefully the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel contrasted sharply with apparent preparations for war.

Italy sent more troops to join the tens of thousands already massed on the Eritrean Plateau, while Ethiopia's field army, 10,000 strong, marched away from Addis Ababa, reportedly en route to the front.

League officials said conflict was almost sure to develop around the council table.

Italy, they pointed out, wants to limit the discussion sharply, confining the council's procedure to reviving the Italo-Ethiopian conciliation commission. Britain, on the other hand, desires full investigation of all issues, and may demand forceful league action. Scandinavian states are reported determined to seek league protection for small states, such as Ethiopia.

Concessions Sought.

(A dispatch from London said the British government's program involved efforts to bring Benito Mussolini to accept economic concessions, instead of armed conquest, of Ethiopia.)

While Anthony Eden, Britain's secretary for league affairs, stopped over at Paris to confer with Premier Pierre Laval, expecting to accompany him to Geneva, Il Duce sent seven representatives, headed by Baron Pompeo Aloisi, to the council's session. Ethiopia's spokesmen were already upon the ground.

(Eden and Laval were reported trying to find some satisfactory phraseology to cover Ethiopia's eventual submission to Italy, in an eleventh hour effort to avert war. Rome withheld comment on the council's chances for success, but 500 more officers and men sailed from Naples for East Africa.)

Eden apparently was slated for the role of "leading man" in tomorrow's drama.

"Velvet Gloves" Opposed.

He brought with him the draft of his government's carefully worked out peace program, expected to prove an obstacle to continuance of the league's current program of handling the African dispute with velvet gloves.

Ethiopian spokesmen, too, were insistent that the council get to the bottom of the dispute, instead of limiting itself to discussion of the causes of frontier clashes and resurrection of the conciliation commission, which collapsed recently at Scheveningen, the Netherlands. Most Geneva sources agreed mere

Double Leave Bill Snagged In the House

Technicalities Force Indefinite Delay Upon Ramspeck Measure.

Author Gets No Action on Plan to Assist U. S. Employes.

Through parliamentary technicalities opponents yesterday forced indefinite delay of a House vote on the Ramspeck bill to double the annual leave of Federal workers.

As action was postponed at least until next week Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, emphasized the measure did not contemplate any additional vacation this summer.

"Our only reason for asking the House to vote on the bill right away," the chairman said, "is so we can get it to the Senate in time for passage before adjournment.

"I'm sorry many workers have gotten an erroneous impression of the bill. They needn't count on it for any extra vacation this summer.

"All the bill does is provide that leave shall accrue at the rate of two and a half days a month from July 1 of this yer.

Time Off in Winter.

"That, of course, may mean that if a worker wants to take time off next winter and can get the permission of the administrative officers of his department, he can do it. For all practical purposes, however, the 30-day annual leave won't be effective until next summer."

Ramspeck made plain the proposal would not deprive any Federal employe of leave already accumulated.

Both the Ramspeck bill to increase annual leave from 15 to 30 days and a kindred measure to fix the sick leave of Government workers at 15 instead of 30 days a year were due to have been called up yesterday under a special rule.

In an effort to make possible consideration of the two leave proposals Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee sought to delay until today a final vote on an Army officers' promotion bill.

Despite repeated appeals from O'Connor, Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, declined to withdraw his point of no quorum, raised to force immediate roll call on the Army measure.

Unanimous Consent Fails.

After the roll call it was too late to call up the rule on the leave bills. As a last resort Ramspeck sought to obtain unanimous consent for consideration of the first of the leave proposals. Had that succeeded he would have called up the sick leave bill.

Representative Young (Democrat), Ohio, at once objected and declined when asked to withdraw his protest.

"State employes in Ohio," Young shouted, "only get two weeks' vacation and they work eight hours a day instead of seven hours, like the Federal employes.

"I haven't heard of any Government employes resigning their jobs because they only have two weeks' vacation like hundreds of thousands of persons privately employed in this country.

"The Federal employes certainly are in a more fortunate position than thousands who have no jobs at all. I realize there is a lobby working for this bill, but it is an important bill and I object to hasty action. It needs careful study."

Ramspeck defended the bill as justified.

"These Government workers," he

Prober's Kin Paid $25,000 By Big Utility

Roosevelt Ex-Partner, Brother of O'Connor, Hired by A. G. E.

Black Warns Federal Agents May Help Seek Witness.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate lobby committee learned yesterday that Basil O'Connor, former law partner of President Roosevelt and brother of Representative John T. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, was paid $25,000 for legal advice by the Associated Gas & Electric Co.

Representative O'Connor is chairman of the Rules Committee, which is conducting the House utility lobby investigation.

From F. S. Burroughs, vice president of that company, the Senate investigators drew an assertion that the company knew O'Connor was a member of President Roosevelt's former law firm but hardly expected to obtain any influence at the White House through its selection of a lawyer. It was testified that O'Connor was employed about six months ago and never had been employed previously by A. G. & E.

Hope of Influence Denied.

These disclosures followed a threat by Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, to equip every United States marshal and "G-Man" with a subpena for Howard C. Hopson, millionaire main spring of the A. G. & E. system, unless he appears soon for questioning.

While the company spent $791,000 in campaigning against the Administration utilities bill, Burroughs was uncertain whether O'Connor was retained in connection with such activities. He thought his services had to do with the merger of some up-State New York companies or a recapitalization plan.

The Senators skated carefully about the relationship between the attorney and the chairman of the House Rules Committee. For a fortnight the Capitol has chuckled at reports of rivalry between the two lobby committees.

Black merely asked Burroughs whether his company had ever retained Basil O'Connor, and the witness agreed that it had. Black produced the $25,000 figure from company files, but Burroughs would not confirm it definitely.

Later Senator Gibson (Republican), Vermont, asked Burroughs if O'Connor "had any kin in the Government service."

Hurley Got $25,000.

"We knew he was related to somebody down here," Burroughs replied. "We knew too that he was a member of the President's law firm, but we didn't expect to obtain any influence that way."

Other testimony by Burroughs disclosed that the persistently missing witness, Hopson, holds a virtually dictatorial power over the A. G. E. structure, extending downward through a bewildering maze of sub-holding companies to others which supply electricity, gas and water to 2,000 communities.

At the same time the committee received investigators' reports showing the cost of A. G. E.'s fight against the Administration utility bill and its abolition for "unnecessary" holding companies had mounted to $791,000. The company originally reported an outlay of $700,000, a figure repeated Monday in a statement by Burroughs.

The day's evidence also brought in the law firm of Patrick J. Hurley,

Minority Report Holds Tax Bill Is Political; 'Gag' Plan Abandoned

Minority Report on Tax Bill

Following is the complete text of the minority report on the tax bill, filed last night by Ways and Means Republicans:

We, the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee, are opposed to the enactment of this bill.

That it is nothing but a political gesture seems to be universally conceded. That it will fail to raise any appreciable amount of revenue can not be denied.

If this bill serves no other purpose, it will at least demonstrate to the country that the extravagant and wasteful expenditures of the Democratic Administration can not be met merely by "soaking the rich." Although it imposes rates of taxation which border on the point of actual confiscation, its proponents estimate that it will produce only $270,000,000 of revenue. This amount would pay the running expenses of the Government for less than two weeks, and it falls $3,305,000,000 short of meeting the deficit for the last fiscal year. Even as a redistribution of wealth measure, it would provide but $2.25 for each of our 120,000,000 people.

The bill makes it perfectly obvious to the great masses of our people that in the last analysis they, and not the rich, are going to be required to assume the greater portion of the cost of the Administration's profligate expenditures. As they become painfully aware of the fact that a part of every dollar the Administration spends is eventually going to be collected from them in burdensome and oppressive

Senate Finance Group Questions Parker on Measure.

House to Debate Plan Tomorrow

Means Committee May Add Gift Exemption Amendment.

By Robert C. Albright.

Assailed by Senate Democrats for its broad deviation from the President's recommendations, and ridiculed by House Republicans in a blistering minority report, the Ways and Means Committee's $275,000,000 "tax the wealthy" bill was formally reported to the House last night.

The committee vote, along strictly partisan lines, was 17 to 7.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton plans to call it up for House consideration tomorrow, under open procedure, with a moderate debate limitation. It was definitely determined last night not to impose a "gag." Passage by Saturday night, with few if any amendments, was the goal set by House leaders.

It was learned last night that the Ways and Means Committee may yet propose an amendment exempting corporation gifts to charity from taxation, up to 5 per cent of a company's net income. Despite the President's stand against such an exemption, the matter is still being discussed in committee, with strong Democratic sentiment for the change.

In preparation for his appearance today before the Senate Finance Committee, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday reviewed the entire tax situation with the President at the White House.

Accompanying Morgenthau to the White House were Herman Oliphant, Treasury general counsel; Robert H. Jackson, counsel for the Internal Revenue Bureau, and George C. Haas, technical assistant to Morgenthau.

Administration Keeps Out.

Various provisions of the House bill were under discussion, but Morgenthau said there was no attempt to agree on or indorse any specific rates. He indicated the Administration is following a hands-off policy as applied to detailed tax provisions.

The minority report filed last night by House Ways and Means Republicans reiterated minority charges that the House bill is "nothing but a political gesture" and "will fail to raise any appreciable revenue."

"The bill makes it perfectly obvious to the great masses of our people that in the last analysis they, and not the rich, are going to be required to assume the greater portion of the cost of the Administration's profligate expenditures," the minority report read.

The Republican statement quoted two former Democratic Secretaries of the Treasury, Carter Glass and David F. Houston, in opposition to "excessive surtaxes;" declared the President's proposed graded tax on corporate incomes was designed to "break up the large corporations;" insisted industry is not sufficiently recovered to bear a steep excess-profits tax; and declared the new inheritance taxes if "followed over a period of pears would automatically take us into socialism."

Democrats Question Parker.

Without mentioning his name, the hypothetical case of Henry Ford, and his automobile plants located throughout the country, was cited as an example of how the inheritance tax might work. The report raised the question of how, in the event of Ford's death, Federal inheritance levies might be collected "without the Federal Government taking over the plants."

Coincident with the first official printing of the tax measure in the House, Lovell H. Parker, Congressional tax authority, who collaborated with the House committee in preparation of the measure, was called before the Senate Finance Committee.

Parker faced a veritable bombardment of questions by committee Democrats, led by Chairman Pat Harrison, who wanted to know why it was the House committee thrust aside the President's advice

Tugwell to Cut 7,000 Workers Off Pay Roll

Resettlement Chief Irked as Transfers Swell Staff to 16,600.

By the Associated Press.

Troubled by the mushrooming pay roll of his new Resettlement Administration, Director Rexford Guy Tugwell yesterday planned to discharge between 7,000 and 8,000 of his employes.

This decision, it was disclosed, followed completion of an inventory showing the Resettlment Administration now is paying 16,600 workers—about three times as many as the NRA employed to rule all industry.

Tugwell plans to dismiss 2,500 of his employes within two weeks. Somewhere around 5,500 more are slated to receive notice within a few months.

The Undersecretary of Agriculture, who heads the administration, was authoritatively reported to have decided upon pruning his rolls because of a determination to spend as much as possible on projects and as little as necessary on salaries of employes. This is just the reverse of the theory employed under the main wing of the work relief set-up.

1,711 Employes in Capital.

The Tugwell inventory disclosed that of the total, more than 15,000 employes were absorbed by the Resettlement Administration in taking over sub-divisions of the AAA, the FERA, and subsistence Homesteads Division of the Interior Department. The new administration itself has employed about 1,500 persons.

Since the bulk of the absorbed employes were on the pay rolls of the Rural Rehabilitation Division of FERA, it is from these ranks that the principal slashes will be made. This division handed to Tugwell a pay roll of approximately 12,500 persons.

It was learned that the Administration has 1,711 employes in Washington. Of this number, 123 are

Security Bill's Conferees Due To Vote Today

End of Deadlock Seen With Exemptions to Be Set Next Winter.

Conferees on the President's social security bill yesterday predicted adoption of a compromise proposal today to end the deadlock between the Senate and House over the Clark amendment, which would exempt industries with private pension systems from the Federal old-age pension tax.

While the conference adjourned without any formal announcement save that another meeting would be held at 1 o'clock this afternoon, it was learned that a plan is being considered to delete the Clark amendment on condition that the way be left open for exemptions when the pension becomes operative in 1937.

One conferee, who asked to remain anonymous, said that a special committee from the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee might be authorized to make a study of private pension systems and to report at the next session of Congress with recommendations on legislation to exempt deserving industries.

President Roosevelt has declared his opposition to the Clark amendment, stating that all corporations should be placed in one class. He said he feared human temptation under the Senate amendment would be for private companies to lead old employes into the Government system and retain young workers in their private insurance set-ups.

Only the Clark amendment, which the House definitely has disapproved by a 269-to-77 roll call vote is holding up the entire social security program. All other controversial features of the omnibus measure were agreed to almost two weeks ago.

House conferees, while adamant in their opposition to the amendment, have indicated a willingness to accept a compromise rather than en-

Inquiry on Nudism.

AN illustrated book on nudism was waved in front of Lawrence W. Cramer, newly appointed Governor of the Virgin Islands, by a member of the Senate Territories Committee debating over his confirmation, so the Associated Press reported.

"Do you believe in nudism?" asked Senator Metcalf (Republican), Rhode Island, of the 37-year-old former Lieutenant Governor of St. Croix, recently named by President Roosevelt to succeed Dr. Paul M. Pearson.

"No sir, I do not," came the emphatic answer.

"Then why is your name mentioned in the foreword of the book?" Metcalf asked, amid general laughter.

Cramer, asked by Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, Territories Committee, to appear in defense of his qualifications as Governor, said he could explain that.

"I have known the people who wrote that book for many years," he said in a clear voice. "They went to Europe to write about labor conditions and on their return they stayed at our apartment in New York and wrote the book there, without asking our consent for the use of our names."

The foreword was read into the record by Senator Metcalf. Signed by Frances and Mason Merrill, authors of the book, "Among the Nudists," it said:

"We wish to express our gratitude to John T. Flynn for invaluable advice regarding our manuscript and to (Mrs.) Aline and Lawrence Cramer for assistance and for moral encouragement in facing the disgrace of the scandalous public confession."

"The only thing we did," said Cramer, "was to criticize the philosophy that people could fix up the world by taking their clothes off. I never indorsed the book."

He said he was "not a nudist, never had been a nudist, never been in a nudist camp and don't want to be."

Amid general laughter the subject was dropped.

'Publicity,' Replies Governor To Writers' Story of Shooting

By the Associated Press.

Montgomery, Ala., July 30.—Gov. Bibb Graves said tonight that the reported firing on a party of New York writers at Clanton, Ala., was "one of the plainest frame-ups for publicity purposes that ever was perpetrated in Alabama."

The Governor issued the statement from the executive mansion tonight after receiving a report on the alleged shooting from Sheriff J. R. Hardy of Chilton County and Winston Huddleston, solicitor for the circuit that includes Chilton County.

The party of writers reported to Sheriff Hardy that they were fired upon from another car 10 miles from Clanton, and asked for State police protection.

"It's the plainest frame-up for publicity purposes ever perpetrated in Alabama," the Governor declared. "I had Mr. Huddleston go there and question the people. They didn't know how many men were in the other car, didn't know what kind of a car it was, didn't know what color it was," the Governor said. "They said they were fired upon by men that blockaded the road.

"They said they were warned in Birmingham they were going to be fired upon when they attempted to come to Montgomery, but that's nothing but a cock-and-bull story.

"They asked for a police escort for their car and I gave instructions for the request to be denied, for they will get no further publicity out of that stunt if I can help it."

The party included Bruce Crawford, of Norton, Va., Miss Shirley Hopkins, of Truro, Mass., Alfred Hirsch, of New York; Emmett Gowin, of La Vergne, Tenn., and Jack Conroy, of Moberly, Mo.

They were on their way to Montgomery to protest against the anti-sedition bill now awaiting the Governor's signature.

Tugwell Agency Is Acquiring Famous Southern Plantations

By the Associated Press.

Lovers of the Old South and its traditions felt a twinge of regret yesterday when they learned that Rexford G. Tugwell's men have figuratively hung a sign "all washed out" on several famous plantations.

Once-rich Carolina land that produced countless bales of cotton and supported some of the flower of the Southland's aristocracy is passing into the hands of the land utilization division of Prof. Tugwell's resettlement administration.

The bureau declared that the soil is so eroded and worn out that it is no longer worth cultivation. It will be used in erosion-control projects.

Once the land produced cotton for such families as the Calhouns, the Ravenels, the Pickenses, Andersons, Cherrys and Claytons—all distinguished in history.

The land utilization division said it had accepted options on 10,000 acres for use and that it had authorized the purchase of 35,000 more acres in the same vicinity.

These properties lie on both sides of three small rivers in up-country South Carolina—the Keowee, Twelve-Mile and Seneca, and they center about Fort Hill, the home of John C. Calhoun.

The plantations of the Revenels and the John Ewing Calhoun family, both included in the project, once were among the most flourishing in the South. The Italian marble mantlepieces in the Revenel ma[illegible] were said to have been hau[illegible]y ox-cart all the way from C[illegible]on, 250 miles away.

John Ewing Calhoun, a relative of his neighbor, John C. Calhoun, was a Senator from South Carolina and his wife, Floride Calhoun, was one of early Washington's wittiest hostesses.

Fletcher Talk Stirs Answer By Robinson

Arkansan Chides G. O. P. Chairman for 'Assisting His Own Party.'

By the Associated Press.

Political stallions were exercised freely in the Capital yesterday following Monday night's Republican projection of "The New Deal vs. the Constitution" as a 1936 campaign issue.

Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, was the medium through which the Democratic national committee made a chiding reply to Republican Chairman Henry P. Fletcher's radio talk.

Listing Republican Senators who voted for the Wagner labor bill, one of the measures cited by Fletcher in his argument that the Administration is trying to "subvert or pervert the Constitution," Robinson said:

"As a Democrat, I am not surprised at the Republican chairman declaring my party as lawless, wicked and generally vicious, but I must protest that Mr. Fletcher should not assail honored members of his own party."

Hastings Cites Vote.

In the Senate, however, replying to a speech which Robinson made recently in Arkansas, Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, called the roll of Democrats who had voted against the Administration this session.

Meanwhile, in the House, Representative Fish (Republican (New York), charged the Administration with repudiating the Democratic platform and rushing through unconstitutional legislation.

"I'm beginning to believe I'm a little better Jeffersonian Democrat than some New Dealers," Fish added.

When Fish concluded, Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, suggested getting down to business "after we have been so thoroughly castigated by that great Jeffersonian Democrat from that great Jeffersonian country, the banks of the Hudson."

Asserting that "a Republican stop-gap chairman needs no legal background to arraign a democratic administration," Robinson said:

"I notice that among those who voted for this (Wagner) bill is that wild radical, my friend Senator Barbour, Republican, of New Jersey. Also Senator Borah, of Idaho, whom his fellows of the G. O. P. describe as the greatest constitutional lawyer in the Senate; Senator McNary, Republican leader, who some people think will be the Republican nominee for President next year, and that firebrand, Senator White, of the reckless old State of Maine. I might add Capper, of Kansas; Hiram Johnson, of California; La Follette, Shipstead, and Steiwer, of Oregon."

Sees No Compromise.

Hastings, who earlier had declared "there can be no compromise with the New Deal," took the floor to respond to Robinson's Arkansas charge that some "disgruntled Democrats" and regular Republicans were in a conspiracy to discredit the Administration.

Asserting that "complaints" against Roosevelt policies went "very much deeper than that," Hastings said 19 "disgruntled Democrats" voted against the Administration in the prevailing wage-relief fight, 18 on final passage of the holding company bill, 29 on the direct issue between dissolution and regulation of holding companies, 20 on the World Court and 9 on the AAA amendments.

In an earlier statement, Hastings said he thought the Republican presidential nominee should be a Middle Western conservative, adding that if next year's G. O. P. chances aren't good, "it will be too bad for the country."

Representative Crowe (Democrat), Indiana, vice chairman of the Democratic congressional committee, meanwhile forecast that Mr. Roosevelt would be renominated without opposition, and said that reports that the executive "should or would not" be nominated "are scarcely worthy of notice."

Republican headquarters reported a "very favorable telegraphic response" to the Fletcher talk.

LEADERS in Congress are getting set for an adjournment in three weeks if possible and by Labor Day surely. President Roosevelt has been advised of this expectation and is making his autumn travel plans accordingly.

This adjournment schedule includes final enactment of the tax bill, utilities regulation, the bank bill and probably several minor measures and—they won't fail to put this one through—restoration of the full general pension for Spanish War veterans. Former Senator Rice Means, of Colorado, was on the Senate floor lobbying for it when it came up.

Washington is in the full cry of another one of its frequent lobby hunts. At least once a year, sometimes oftener, the Capital goes on a lobby hunt. Many of the prospective victims are familiar figures here the year around. Most of them are widely known. Senators and Representatives know them, listen to their stories, meet them at parties, often play golf with them, for many of the lobbyists belong to the best clubs and have good liquor in their lockers and are good guys. During most of the year they are taken for granted in Washington. But when the time for the lobby hunt comes around it puts the fear of God into them.

For the most part there is no secret about their activities. They are frankly what they are. Mostly they chase around Government departments, getting copies of regulations, and make appointments for their employers to see officials. They obtain copies of bills and amendments in Congress, ask Senators and Representatives where they stand, explain propositions which they hope to see put into law or kept out. Nothing very exciting about them. Their effect upon legislation is vastly over-rated.

But the lobby hunts also turn up another species—the lobbying lawyers. Customs in the legal profession are such that a member of the bar in his capacity as attorney can get away with things that a plain lobbyist could never handle and for which a newspaper reporter would be thrown out of his profession. It is all highly ethical in the eyes of the bar.

This is the second time that a Senate committee has tried to find H. C. Hopson, the big shot of the Associated Gas & Electric. Once before a Senate committee sent out a call for him and he couldn't be located for days. Finally his lawyer was heard from, and who should he be but former Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley. After due consultation by long-distance telephone with the Senate committee, Hurley, who was at that time in Chicago, with the missing witness, promised to produce him.

Now again Hopson is missing and the Senate lobby committee has been broadcasting for him several days. Meanwhile the committee discovers that Secretary Hurley is again working for Hopson's concern, and has drawn a salary of $25,000 in fees for work against the utility bill.

Basil O'Connor, former law partner of President Roosevelt and brother of Representative J. J. O'Connor, chairman of the House Rules Committee, drew $25,000 in legal fees from Associated. Brother O'Connor is chairman of the House committee investigating utilities lobbying, which committee has been considerably slower than the Senate committee in getting under way.

Former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson is a lawyer, and his firm has just produced, for a handsome fee, it is assumed, a legal opinion that the utilities bill is unconstitutional. Newton D. Baker and James M. Beck recently were hired to render an opinion on TVA and, sure enough, they found it unconstitutional.

The American Bar Association has been holding a convention at Los Angeles. Some of the speakers were severe in their treatment of what they call lawyer-criminals. Corporation lawyers have a tendency to look down upon criminal lawyers as being rather of a lower order, whose consciences have been blunted from associating with criminal clients. Some of the speakers complained that in many localities the disciplining of unethical lawers was lax. They denounced the lawyer-criminal who "counsels and advises in the commission of a crime and uses his knowledge of legal process to protect enemies of society from the hand of the law, and who has led many to think the object of lawyers is not to uphold but to thwart and defy the law."

Then the Bar Association proceeded to re-elect as its secretary William P. MacCracken, who a year ago last winter, while secretary of the Bar Association, was charged with refusing to produce correspondence and permitting destruction of records sought in the Senate air-mail investigation. He was fined for contempt of court and went to jail for contempt of the Senate after the Supreme Court upheld the sentence.

Another phase of the lobby hunt is the agitation to keep Government employes from accepting dinners and other courtesies from lobbyists. The Communications Commission, now investigating the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., issued an order prohibiting the commission's employes engaged in the inquiry from accepting favors or gifts from telephone company people. Luncheon, theater, golf or club engagements or introductions to clubs or amusement places should be courteously declined, the commission said. What about drinks?

Senator Frazier has a resolution pending requiring Government employes to register their private stock holdings and corporation affiliations and those of their families with the Federal Trade Commission. One official recently returned a box of cigars tendered by a concern having business with his office and warned his secretary to accept no favors from the slickers.

All of that is chicken feed. It might stop some of the small-time moochers, but it has nothing to do with the real problem. Pigeonholes of Congress are cluttered with bills and resolutions to register lobbyists and to in one way or another strike at abuses. It is just as well.

There isn't much that anyone can say about the problem unless he wants to set himself up as a moralist for others. Every lobby investigation shows that the country is full of wealthy corporation officials who are easily parted from their money; who would bite a nickel before giving a raise to one of their crack salesmen, but who would shell out thousands to some four-flushing member of the bar who alleges he has big influence in Washington. The real lobby evil is the boobery of the suckers who put up the cash for it.

Few Senators and Representatives are bought and fewer still are paid for. Only a sap would attempt to offer a bribe and only a sap would accept one. The main difficulty lies in the shadowy field of campaign contributions, help back home, promise to bump off a rising rival and such twilight zone considerations which are beyond the reach of law or anything much except a man's own conscience. That's why, although everybody is always talking about the lobby evil, nothing is ever done about it—or will be.

A newspaper reporter rushed up to Senator George, of Georgia.

"Gov. Talmadge has been bitten by a snake," the reporter said.

"You don't say!" said Senator George. "What happened to the snake?"

said, "are from all parts of the country. At present they don't have enough leave to visit their homes.

"Every minute they are absent from their offices is charged up against them. If they go out to cash a check, visit the dentist or attend a funeral the time is charged against them. The bill has had very careful consideration in committee and I hope the gentleman won't object."

Later Ramspeck said it would be next week before the two bills could be called up under the rule.

"I didn't know Mr. Young was against the bill," Ramspeck explained. "We talked to a lot of members we thought might raise some objection, but I didn't know he was particularly interested."

Ramspeck reiterated he expected both measures to be passed by House and Senate and signed by the President.

Direct Relief Cut for August, Works to Start

WPA Will Provide Jobs for Thousands in Belated Launching of Setup.

By the Associated Press.

Hinting that the long-delayed work relief program finally is about to get under way, the work relief allotment committee yesterday pared down the sum set aside for direct relief in August to $95,000,000.

With 19,250,000 persons supported wholly or in part by Federal funds, the recommendation compared with $120,000,000 allotted for June relief and $115,000,000 in July.

Officials said seasonal occupations were reducing the number on relief. It was added, however, that Works Progress Administration projects are expected to provide jobs for several hundred thousand during the coming month. At the same time, officials explained that few jobs would be created because 2,500,000 already have work under the relief administration and half of these must be transferred to the new type of projects.

Youth to Get 28 Millions.

The National Youth Administration, promised $50,000,000 when it was set up, was put down for $28,000,000 in a $370,056,258 spending list sent to the President's desk. Officials said this would be spent on $6 a month jobs for 250,000 relief family high school students, on $15 a month jobs for 100,000 college students, and $30 a month jobs for 4,000 scholars doing post-graduate work.

Approval of the program coincided with announcement by Harry L. Hopkins that the relief administration would provide instruction for 2,000,000 adults—and jobs for about 40,000 needy teachers—in the education program, which it will resume this fall.

Following conferences between Mr. Roosevelt, Comptroller General J. R. McCarl and Secretary Ickes, whose department administers Puerto Rico, the committee also recommended expenditure of $35,000,000 by the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Corporation in improving conditions on the island.

$200,000,000 for CCC.

Other recommendations included $200,000,000 for the Civilian Conservation Corps, whose 400,000 members make up almost all the jobs so far provided by the $4,000,000,000 program; $6,642,603 for projects in 13 States; $6,765,197 for grade-crossing elimination work, and $5,498,000 for highway and street improvements in Michigan. These sums already had been allotted, but approval of specific projects was necessary before funds could be released.

During the day the President allotted $3,450,000 to the Public Health Service for a survey of chronic diseases, and $2,696,714 as donations on 29 non-Federal projects. The Public Works Administration revolving fund will loan $1,335,500 to cover the remaining 55 per cent of the cost on 25 of these.

Ickes at his press conference said he could not estimate the extent of the new PWA program, explaining that its magnitude would depend upon PWA's success in selling securities it accepted as collateral.

Plane Drops Bomb In Rumanian Town

Police Fail to Identify Nationality Markings.

By the United Press.

Bucharest, July 30.—A bomb, which dug a crater 25 feet deep, was dropped from an unidentified airplane near Curbuldesus, Rumania, today. Constanta police, investigating the incident, said the plane disappeared too swiftly for the markings to be sighted.

Official explanation of the incident has not yet been issued. It is known that Rumanian military airplanes were flying in the Corbuldesus neighborhood this afternoon.

A German military speed plane, not a bomber, which landed here last night without proper papers was allowed to continue to Istanbul today. Rumanian authorities denied reports they had forced the plane to land.

It was understood the plane will be delivered to the Emperor of Ethiopia.

Berlin, July 30 (U.P.).—The propaganda miniistry tonight categorically denied that Germany is sending airplanes to Ethiopia. The government has no knowledge of German consular intervention in connection with the landing of any German plan in Rumania.

Aunt Mary's Snake Is Victor in Death

Excelsior Springs, Mo., July 30 (AP).—The rattlesnake in Aunt Mary Michall's house is dead but his death appeared tonight as a reptilian victory.

Orville Cox, 19-year-old grandson of "Aunt Mary," dispatched the snake today and this is how:

Following the sound of the rattle, young Cox took up the entire front porch, plank by plank.

Then he attacked the side of the house and tore off four planks before he found the rattler. A hasty thrust with a pitchfork only irritated the snake so Orville blazed away with both barrels of the family shotgun. The snake died, about half the wall disappeared, Aunt Mary's china cupboard, sitting just inside, was demolished and every dish the family owned was broken.

working in the Rural Resettlement Division, 202 in the Suburban Resettlement Division, 257 in the Land Utilization Division, 130 in the Management Division, and the remainder in the headquarters staff, which includes Planning, Finance, Legal, Information, Personnel and similar divisions.

The Administration has four operating divisions in the field—Land Utilization, Rural Resettlement, Suburban Resettlement and Management. Almost all of the employes of the Land Utilization Division were absorbed from the Land Planning Division of AAA and the Land Program of FERA. This unit originally had 2,700 employes in the field and this number already has been reduced to approximately 1,900.

Approximate figures were said to have been used because many persons are working on a per diem basis, and because additional reports are being received daily from local units in the field.

The new Rural Resettlement Division has taken over most of the State rural rehabilitation corporations and many parts of the State relief organizations. It is this unit which handed to Tugwell 12,500 employes. It is from these rolls that 2,500 employes will be dropped within two weeks.

danger the whole social security program. It is believed that in this attitude they have Roosevelt's consent.

Agreement on the national measure will enable the Senate District Committee to report the Ellenbogen unemployment insurance and the Norton old age pension bills for the District, as these measures have been held up for several weeks so they might be made to conform to the final draft of the Federal legislation.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, chairman of a sub-committee which has charge of the District bills, said he would report them to the full committee almost immediately after the conference report is filed on the Wagner-Lewis bill. A special Senate District Committee meeting will be called to rush the measures.

McAdoo's Gold Proposal Hits Snag in Senate

Half-Year Suit-Filing Limit Is Branded Discrimination.

By the Associated Press.

A half-year period for filing gold-clause suits against the Government was proposed by Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, yesterday as an amendment to the complete and immediate ban asked by President Roosevelt.

His suggestion, however, rn into such sharp protests from some Senators—Adams (Democrat), Colorado, termed it "distrimination"—that the Senate Banking Committee deferred action on the amendment until today.

Before the committee is the House-approved bill to outlaw all suits for damages founded on the Government's refusal to pay on more than $10,000,000,000 of outstanding gold obligations a number of dollars sufficient to represent the gold weight of the original investment.

Must Show Damage.

In present-day dollars, $1.69 is required to represent the same gold weight as the old dollar. The Supreme Court has held "damages" must be proved to warrant payment of more than the dollar-for-dollar offered by the Treasury. McAdoo's amendment would allow recovery only to those who could show actual damage.

Adams contended the amendment would benefit only those whose gold-clause bonds were already due and deny the right of suit to holders of bonds maturing years in the future.

With Senator Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma he began preparation of a substitute amendment which would permit any holder of a gold bond to bring suit any time within six months after its maturity.

Adams emphasized, however, that the amendment would not mitigate his own opposition to the proposal to outlaw suits.

Comment Is Declined.

Chairman Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, declined to comment on what attitude the committee would take on either the amendments or the original bill. From one source came a prediction the committee would report the measure to the Senate "unfavorably." This would serve to register the committee's opposition to it and yet give the Senate an opportunity to vote on it.

The committee foiled an attempt by church organizations to get authority to borrow RFC money for refinancing their obligations. This bill was "indefinitely" postponed.

West Confirmed In Senate Move

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday confirmed Charles West, former Representative from Ohio, as Undersecretary of the Interior.

West was defeated when he ran for Senator in the last election. Recently he has been on the pay roll of the Farm Credit Administration and has served as "contact man" for President Roosevelt in Congress.

The Senate also confirmed Cleon A. Summers as United States attorney for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, succeeding W. F. Rampendahl, resigned, and Edward D. Bolger as United States marshal for the Western District of Michigan, succeeding Martin Brown, resigned.

New Dutch Cabinet To Guard the Guilder

The Hague, July 30.—Premier Hendrik Colijn today resolved the Netherland's one week cabinet crisis when he formed a new ministry to succeed the government which resigned because of the Catholic party demand for devaluation.

The new cabinet does not follow party lines. It was chosen without consulting parliamentary groups. Many members of the Colijn cabinet which resigned last week remain but there has been a redistribution of portfolios.

State Fights Spread Of Sleeping Sickness

Harrisburg, Pa., July 30 (AP).—Pennsylvania threw the full force of its health department tonight into the fight to check an epidemic described as sleeping sickness in the Windber coal center of Somerset County.

Dr. Edith MacBride-Dexter, secretary of health, announced the State's mobile laboratory had been sent to Somerset County so that tests can be made on the spot.

The secretary said that some 30 cases have been reported from the hospital in Windber.

House to Act Upon Tax Bill Without Gag

Measure Formally Reported From Committee; Debate Set for Tomorrow.

on corporation income levies, imposed excess profits taxes not asked by the White House and dipped into the middle surtax brackets for additional revenue.

To such questions Parker replied in effect that the House committee considered excess profits levies a fairer basis of taxation than graded corporation taxes proposed by the President. Only by dipping into the lower surtax brackets, he observed, could substantial revenue be gained.

While Senate wealth distributionists of the La Follette and Huey Long schools withheld fire, several conservative Democratic members of the committee took issue with the stiff inheritance imposts, corporation income levies and House proposals to "freeze" corporation capitalization for excess-profits taxation.

Meanwhile, Ways and Means Committee Democrats, given House permission to file their report before midnight, sat far into the evening drafting the text. Sitting apart, a group of committee Republicans, headed by Representatives Roy O. Woodruff, of Michigan, and Thomas A. Jenkins, of Ohio, compiled the minority report. They acted with the assent of Representative Allen T. Treadway, ranking minority member.

"Gag" Rejected.

Speaker Byrns and Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, attended the Ways and Means Democratic session. Over the objections of some members, who contended it would be folly to bring a tax bill into the House without a closed rule, the "gag" plan was rejected. No rule at all may be asked if unanimous House agreement can be reached on a time limitation.

At yesterday's Finance Committee session Senator Harrison closely questioned Parker on the House bill's deviations from the President's "tax the wealthy" recommendations.

"The President," said Senator Harrison, "suggested a graduated corporation tax ranging from 10¾ per cent to 16¾ per cent, instead of the present flat rate of 13¾ per cent. You haven't carried that suggestion out at all, have you?"

Parker replied:

"The President suggested going down 3 per cent on small corporations and up 3 per cent on large ones. The Ways and Means Committee went only one half of 1 per cent in each directoin. The committee felt that the excess-profits tax was more related to the ability to pay."

Parker was pressed closely at this point by Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, who asked whether the excess-profits tax was not a more equitable levy than the graduated corporation tax.

The tax expert avoided a direct answer.

"There is practically no history on the graduated corporation tax," he said.

Again Harrison persisted:

"Why did the committee disregard the President's suggestion with regard to the corporation tax? Whether it was for lack of revenue, the injustices or whatever it was, tell the committee here frankly just why they did it."

Parker said he thought it was because the committee preferred the principle of the excess-profits tax. Although they were ready to approve the "principle" of the corporation tax as well, he said they were not willing "to go too far with it."

"Fairest" Way Chosen.

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, wanted to know if it wasn't because they decided the excess-profits tax was the "fairest, and only just way."

"That is correct," said Parker.

Out of 508,636 corporations in the United States in 1932, only 82,645, or about 15 per cent, made a profit, Parker testified.

"There is a surprising number of corporations that have net incomes of less than $15,000," the witness continued, "and a surprisingly small number that have net incomes of more than $15,000 under present conditions."

The House bill makes $15,000 the dividing line between the 13¼ and the 14¼ per cent tax, with the higher figure applied to the larger incomes.

Questioned as to Senator Tom Connally's proposal to re-enact the war-time excess-profits tax, with rates of 20 per cent on profits above 8 per cent and 40 per cent on all over 28 per cent, Parker estimated the tax if applied today would yield only $300,000,000 a year. Its former yield ranged from $2,505,000 in 1918 to $335,000,00 in 1921, he said.

The House bill's excess-tax proviso starts at 5 per cent on profits of between 8 and 12 per cent, and ranges upward to 20 per cent on over 25 per cent profit. The estimated yield is $100,000,000.

Figures Are Asked.

Parker was requested by Senator Peter G. Gerry (Democrat), Rhode Island, to supply figures on the number of stockholders in United States corporations. Gerry brought out that the proposed House inheritance levies are far more incisive than those in effect in Great Britain, and that total interest of 12 per cent a year might be collected on deferred payments during the settlement of the larger estates.

A period of eight years is now permitted for payment of the existing estate tax, with interest at 6 per cent during the first 18 months. Under the House bill, there is a ten-year maximum extension of time on the inheritance tax. Interest would be at 3 per cent after the first two years, and at 6 per cent after the first five years.

"Double Interest."

Gerry commented:

"In other words, after 5 years, the interest would be 12 per cent; that is, 6 per cent on the estate and 6 per cent on the beneficial interest. On some of these estates, the combined tax would be more than 100 per cent. The most England collects on the estate tax is 50 per cent, and the highest on inheritances, if it goes to a stranger, 10 per cent. We now collect a maximum of 60 per cent on the estate, and we propose to collect 75 per cent on the inheritance."

Similarly, Senator Gore pointed out that the proposed House increases in surtax brackets of over $50,000, reaching a 75 per cent maximum on incomes over $5,000,000, would multiply to a total of 101 per cent once the 4 per cent normal income tax and the New York State maximum of 22 per cent were added.

Here Senator Harrison again protested that the House committee had not followed the President's recommendations. He said he understood the President to mean he wanted higher surtax rates on incomes in excess of $1,000,000, while the House committee had dipped to $50,000. Emphatically, Harrison declared:

"What I want to do is follow the President's message."

"Of course," retorted Parker, "there is no substantial revenue to be derived by increasing the rates only above the $1,000,000 mark. That would give only a matter of $5,000,000 or $6,000,000, whereas, by starting at $50,000, you get about $45,000,000."

"I understand that," said the Finance Committee chairman. "Of course, we could go down still further and get more revenue. Haven't you always contended that you couldn't get a great amount of taxes when you reached up into the $1,000,000 bracket?"

Revenue in Low Brackets.

"That is correct," replied Parker. "It is surprising how little there is above $50,000. The real revenue is in the lower brackets."

The staff expert pointed out that of the 4,000,000 returns filed for 1933, half of which were non-taxable, only 7,974 showed incomes of $50,000 or more.

Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, argued that there should be a revaluation of corporation capital before any such excess-profits tax as is proposed by the House is levied. He brought out that the corporations were permitted to declare their own value for the purposes of the capital stock tax. The House bill would "freeze" this valuation, and Byrd pointed out this would seriously affect corporations which had established a low capitalization.

"With higher rates now, you are not carrying out the theory of an excess-profits tax," said Byrd. "What we are proposing to do now is to put an excess-profits tax on a fictitious valuation, not that it was illegal, because the Government told them they could do that."

Bill to Advance 5,000 in Army Passes House

colonels in the Army by 158, the number of lieutenant colonels by 364, the number of majors my 890. Second lieutenants will be promoted to first lieutenants after three years, and first lieutenants will be carried to the rank of captains after seven more years.

Immediate promotions will comprise 4,918 out of 10,460 promotion list officers, and the former will include 1,057 second lieutenants and 1,769 first lieutenants. All other officers, below the rank of colonel, will be advanced on the promotion list from 20 to 6 years, and some cases 7 to 8 years, earlier than at present.

The modernized promotion system does not increase the present authorized strength of the commissioned personnel, but it offers a more logical distribution in grades.

Representative Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, who piloted the measure through the House, pointed out that the Army is now in a state of promotion stagnation.

Fail to Advance.

"Thousands of officers with fine World War records have not advanced in 15 years beyond the grades in which they were originally commissioned in the Regular Army subsequent to the war," he said.

Representative McFarlane (Democrat), of Texas, joined Blanton and Hoeppel in opposing the bill on the ground that it did not go far enough. He proposed a promotion system similar to that used by the Navy in which unfit officers are weeded out.

Hill pointed out that in the Army at present there are 3,288 captains and 253 first lieutenants 39 years of age and over, who under normal conditions should not hold the rank of majors.

There are 1,103 majors, 1,398 captains and 17 lieutenants 44 years of age and over who should now be lieutenant colonels, he said, while there are 445 lieutenant colonels, 232 majors, 391 captains and 2 first lieutenants, 50 years of age and above, who should be colonels.

The bill carries no benefits whatsoever to colonels or generals.

taxes, we believe they will insist with us that this orgy of expenditure be speedily terminated.

In opposing this bill, we are not taking a stand inconsistent with our previously expressed attitude in favor of a balanced budget, which we still favor, but it should be balanced by reducing expenditures and not wholly by increasing taxes. The Administration has no right to increase the tax burden on either rich or poor until it has first adopted a sane spending program.

Political Gesture.

We have said that this is a political gesture. By that we mean it was intended to catch votes. Only last January, in his budget message, the President said that he did not "consider it advisable at this time to propose any new or additional taxes for the fiscal year 1936." What caused the President to change his mind between January 7, when he presented the budget, and June 19, the date of his so-called "Share the Wealth" tax message?

The Secretary of the Treasury was asked this direct question during his brief but unilluminating appearance before the Ways and Means Committee, but under the protection of the Democratic members he avoided an answer. The fact is that the President's tax message came at a time when the Administration's popularity and prestige were rapidly on the decline, and it served to divert public attention from the criticisms which were being leveled at the President and his policies. It doubtless had a secondary purpose of undermining the increasing political strength of the two chief exponents of the "Share the Wealth" and "Soak the Rich" philosophy by making a bid for the support of their large army of followers.

It will be recalled that when the President attempted to force the enactment of his tax program within a period of five days by having it included as a Senate amendment to the nuisance tax extension bill, a storm of public indignation expressed by the press throughout the country forced him to abandon this scheme and rely upon the Ways and Means Committee to report out a separate bill.

It is generally known that Democratic members of the committee were not only indifferent, but actually hostile to his proposals. That the bill now comes before the House with their approval is further evidence of the fact that the majority are not guided by their convictions but by the orders they receive from the White House.

The Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee are bound under the unit rule which results in a majority of their members binding the minority. There is no question that the Democratic minority was sufficient in numbers when joined with the Republicans to have rejected important portions of the bill.

Representative government ceases to exist under such a system.

Bill Is 'Face-Saver.'

The Democratic majority, in order to avoid a direct slap at their own Administration with a Presidential election in the offing, have reluctantly tried to pull the President's political chestnuts from the fire. Their effort bears all the earmarks of being a mere face-saving gesture. They will undoubtedly make every effort to justify the bill as a revenue measure, but a casual reading of the President's message clearly indicates that it was not so intended, and it certainly was not so interpreted by the country. The Secretary of the Treasury, in his statement before the committee, indicated that the Treasury's "primary interest" in the legislation was in the revenue which it might raise, and the majority members tried to infer from this statement that revenue was its primary "purpose." The references in the President's message to the "very sound public policy of encouraging a wider distribution of wealth" and the duty of Government to restrict large incomes "by very high taxes" prevent any such purpose being ascribed.

Harris & Ewing.

REP. THOMAS A. JENKINS helps draft minority report.

Hearings Were Farce.

We can not criticise too vehemently the procedure by which this bill has been proposed, considered, and is now being rushed to passage. Brief hearings were conducted by the committee with nothing before it but the President's message. As his proposals were rather nebulous, and as no tentative draft or outline of a bill had been prepared, the hearings were more or less of a farce. Unlike his predecessors in office, the Secretary of the Treasury failed to make any definite suggestions for carrying out the President's proposals, or even indicate how much revenue the bill should raise

At the close of the hearings, the chairman definitely stated that when the committee met in executive session "the minority will be called in and will know everything that goes on, so far as the preparation of the bill is concerned." Nevertheless, after two or three preliminary meetings, the minority were excluded and the Democrats proceeded to write the bill behind barred doors. We do not doubt the good faith of the chairman in making the foregoing statement, but in view of the political character of this bill, and the fact that there was considerable difference of opinion among the Democratic members as to the expediency of the President's proposals and certain provisions in the bill, they doubtless excluded the minority in order that they might iron out their differences in private, and thereby work the will of a minority of the committee.

Bill Drawn In Secret.

The minority members saw a copy of the tentative draft of this bill for the first time yesterday morning. The introduced copy first became available today. Hence it is not possible for us to make any definite analysis of the bill. However, we shall make a few general comments.

We concede the equity and fairness of making those with large incomes contribute their fair share of the tax burden, but we do not think it is good business for the Federal Government to increase the progressive rates of the income tax to the point where they are productive of decreased, rather than increased revenue. The law of diminishing returns is as immutable as the stars, and there is no way in which the laws passed by Congress can escape its operation.

Glass Is Quoted.

In this connection, it is interesting to note the observations of a former Democratic Secretary of the Treasury, Carter Glass, upon the effect of excessive surtaxes. In his annual report for the fiscal year 1919, Secretary Glass said:

"The upmost brackets of the surtax have already passed the point of productivity and the only consequence of any further increase would be to drive possessors of these great incomes more and more to place their wealth in the billions of dollars of wholly exempt securities heretofore issued and still being issued by States and municipalities, as well as those heretofore issued by the United States. This process not only destroys a source of revenue to the Federal Government, but tends to withdraw the capital of very rich men from the development of new enterprises and place it at the disposal of State and municipal governments upon terms so easy to them (the cost of exemptions from taxation falling more heavily upon the Federal Government) as to stimulate wasteful and nonproductive expenditure by State and municipal governments."

The following year, another Democratic Secretary of the Treasury, David F. Houston, who succeeded Secretary Glass to that office, also commented on the adverse affects of the higher surtax brackets, and said:

"It seems idle to speculate in the abstract as to whether or not a progressive income tax schedule rising to rates in excess of 70 per cent is justifiable. We are confronted with a condition, not a theory. The fact is that such rates can not be successfully collected."

Since, as Secretary Houston has said, excessive surtaxes "can not be successfully collected," and since their tendency is to drive investments from the channels of trade and industry into tax exempt securities, the result of their imposition actually will be to decrease, rather than increase, revenue, and necessitate the imposition of additional burdens on the less well-to-do. Thus, the "soak the rich" proposal of the President will in the end result in unloading an increased tax burden on those of small earnings.

Theory Is False.

We believe that the fallacy of the theory that exorbitantly high income taxes put the burden of taxation on the rich and relieve the poor has been clearly demonstrated. We commend to the large masses of people to whom this bill is intended to appeal, the wise words of the present occupant of the White House when he was a candidate for the Presidency, which evidently he has since forgotten. Speaking at Pittsburgh on October, 19, 1932, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors because they are a burden on production and can be paid only by production. If excessive, they are reflected in idle factories, tax-sold farms, and, hence, in hordes of the hungry tramping the streets and seeking jobs in vain.

"Our workers may never see a tax bill, but they pay in deductions from wages, in increased cost of what they buy, or as now, in broad cessation of employment.

"There is not an unemployed man—there is not a struggling farmer—whose interest in this subject is not direct and vital."

The President in his message suggested that corporations be taxed according to their size, instead of the present flat rate of 13¾ per cent. He indicated that the rate for smaller corporations "might well be reduced to 10¾ per cent, and the rates graduated upward to a rate of 16¾ per cent on net income in the case of the largest corporations."

Stockholders Hit.

The obvious purpose of this proposal was not to raise additional revenue, but to break up the large corporations. It was universally criticized on the ground that it failed to look beyond the corporate entity to the millions of stockholders, most of them of small means, who actually make up the larger corporations. It was pointed out at the hearings that this proposal would penalize a small stockholder who might own a few shares of stock in a large corporation, while a wealthy stockholder owning a large share of the stock of a small corporation would be greatly benefitted. Moreover, it completely disregards the fact that a large corporation might be taxed heavily on a small rate of return, while a small corporation might be taxed lightly on a large return.

We deem it a mistake not to have provided an exemption from the corporation income tax on gifts made by corporations to community chests and other charities. It is the announced policy of the Administration to throw the burden of caring for unemployables back on the States and local communities. When this occurs there are only two ways they can be provided for. One is by direct taxation on the people of the local communities through taxation of homes, farms and other real estate; the other is through private charity. If corporations are public spirited enough to make contributions to charities, we believe their contributions for such purposes should be exempt from taxation exactly as is done in the case of individuals.

The bill increases tremendously the present excess profits tax by lowering the allowable rate of return on the declared value of the corporation's capital stock to 8 per cent, and taxing profits in excess of that return at graduated rates ranging from 5 per cent to 25 per cent.

The expediency of making so radical a change in the present excess profits tax, even if a redeclaration of value were allowed, is at least questionable. Businesses have beeen operating at a loss for many years. The losses which they have suffered in past years are not deductible in computing their taxable income in current years. Hence, it would seem unfair to make them pay so great an excess profits tax on these earnings at this time in addition to the regular corporation income tax. The time to impose an excess profits tax is when conditions are prosperous, not when industry is struggling to get on its feet. What the country needs is not more tax on income, but more income to tax.

Inheritance Tax Assailed.

In response to the President's demand for a "wider distribution of wealth," there has been included in the bill a proposed new tax on inheritances, to be levied in addition to the present Federal and State taxes on estates and inheritances. The existing death taxes take as much as 60 per cent of an estate before distribution, and the pending bill proposes to take up to 75 per cent of what is left when distributed to the beneficiaries.

The adverse effect of such a tax in the case of an estate such as that of a certain well-known automobile manufacturer is quite evident. This gentleman has plants in various parts of the country employing thousands of people and indirectly giving employment to thousands of others. His wealth consists almost exclusively of physical properties. Assuming for the sake of argument that their value was $100,000,000, and of course they are worth many times this amount, the present Federal and State death taxes would amount to a little less than $60,000,000. Assuming, further, that an only son were the sole beneficiary of the estate, the $40,000,000 which he would be entitled to receive would be taxed a little less than $30,000,000, leaving a balance of approximately $10,000,000 out of the $100,000,000 estate. How the $90,000,000 tax could be paid without the Federal Government taking over the plants is problematical. This tax policy followed over a period of years would automatically take us into socialism.

Any tax which practically confiscates private capital is fundamentally wrong, unless we are to adopt the communistic system. It is private capital that makes up the national wealth. It is private capital that gives employment to labor. If this capital is to be consumed in paying the running expenses of the Government, then the pending tax measure becomes not a bill to redistribute wealth, but a bill to redistribute poverty.

Burden on People.

As we have previously indicated, this bill is a political gesture at social reform. It is not a revenue bill.

We regret that the tax issue has been raised at the present session of Congress by means of a bill of this sort. The fact is that the Democratic Administration does not have the courage to present a comprehensive tax program, and it has made no step in that direction since it assumed control of the Government in March, 1933.

In closing, we wish to emphasize again that this bill is not going to relieve the great masses of the people of the ultimate burden of paying for the Administration's extravagant expenditures, including the interest and service charges upon the national debt. The people are already aware of the fact that this Administration has spent more money in 2½ years than was spent to run the country in the 124 years from the Administration of Washington to that of Woodrow Wilson. They are beginning to wonder where this wild spending will end and who is going to pay the bill.

The necessity of re-establishing confidence in the minds of the American people is apparent—and no more heartening message could be sent to them than that a genuine attempt to balance the budget was being made by the Congress. This could be done if, in connection with a thorough revision of the tax structure all along the line, this Administration would radically reduce its spending program, which threatens the credit of the national Government.

"Things As They Are"

SAMUEL CROWTHER, internationally known American author and critic, tomorrow contributes the first of a series of articles discussing the American business and economic scene. This series will appear in The Washington Post three days a week.

Mr. Crowther will examine current public questions which confront the American business man and citizen. His ability to distinguish between basic truth and confusing propaganda, his honest and instructive comment, his common sense approach to the problems of today, have given millions of Americans a clearer, more understanding view of things as they are.

The first of the series, which is entitled "Things As They Are," will appear tomorrow morning in The Washington Post.

State to Urge 2 Women Die In Murder Case

Extreme Penalty Will Be Asked in 'Torso' Slaying at Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 30.—The State announced today it would demand the death penalty for Mrs. Evelyn Smith, who allegedly confessed she garroted and butchered Ervin Lang for a paltry $500, and for Mrs. Blanche Dunkel, accused purchaser of the killing.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty, who reported that Mrs. Smith, scrawny laundry worker and former burlesque entertainer, had admitted she alone had strangled Lang and cut off his legs, made known the State's intention.

If convicted and given the extreme penalty, the two women would be the first of their sex to go to the electric chair in this State.

Dougherty said he will go before the grand jury tomorrow and ask for murder indictments against both women.

"The case is practically closed," said Dougherty. "By the time the indictments are returned, the investigation will be finished."

Calmly Signs Record.

The gaunt, 47-year-old Mrs. Smith arose shortly before noon, ate a breakfast of ham and eggs and calmly signed the typewritten record of the alleged confession, which had been prepared while she slept from 4 a. m.

Dougherty refused to make public the text of the document. He said, however, that Mrs. Smith had admitted strangling Lang to death with a knotted rope and cutting off his legs with a butcher knife and a hacksaw.

After the killing, Mrs. Smith and her Chinese husband, Harry Jung, disposed of the body in a swamp near Hammond, Ind., the prosecutor said Mrs. Smith told him.

The alleged confession was made nine hours after Mrs. Smith arrived at 4:30 p. m. (Central daylight time) by airplane from New York yesterday.

Her only consideration, Mrs. Smith was said to have confessed, was the promise of $500 for the killing. Mrs. Dunkel, she related, agreed to pay her that amount, but she received nothing. Mrs. Dunkel was quoted as insisting she paid $100 of it.

Dougherty said he expected the arrest of Jung soon. He asked that the inquest be delayed until the Chinese is taken into custody.

Both Races Join in Lynching Of North Carolina Ax-Slayer

By the Associated Press.

Louisburg, N. C., July 30.—As National Guardsmen and a large force of State highway police raced to beat the fury of a mob, Govan Ward, 25-year-old colored ax slayer of a white farmer, was lynched today.

The mob which earlier had seized the prisoner from Sheriff J. T. Moore was said by the sheriff to have included some colored men.

A half-mile from the scene of the ax-slaying of C. G. Stokes, the killer, said to have been mentally deficient, was hanged to an oak tree and his body perforated with bullets. The lynching occurred about four hours after the slaying of Stokes and while guardsmen and State police were seeking the mob to prevent violence.

The sheriff who, fearing violence, was taking Ward from the county, said he was forced to surrender him to the mob 10 miles from here.

Moore said there were about 25 men in the armed group which halted his automobile and took Ward from him and a deputy, T. J. Bean, as they were taking him to Rocky Mount for safe-keeping.

The mob took Ward back to Hayesville Township, about halfway between Louisberg and Henderson, and lynched him while National Guardsmen and State highway patrolmen, ordered out by Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, sped to halt the mob violence.

While a crowd of several hundred curious milled about in the grove where Ward was hanged and his body filled with pistol and shotgun slugs, Coroner R. A. Bobbitt took the body down and held an inquest. The verdict, rendered in five minutes, was death at the hands of parties unknown.

Solicitor William Y. Bickett, of Raleigh, prosecuting officer for this judicial district, and County Attorney Charles Green both attended the inquest and said their offices would make all efforts to prosecution of the mob members if they could be identified.

Ward ran wild early in the day, first hitting his sister with a rock and then striking another farmer, Sturgeon Ayscue, with a bottle.

Stokes, in a nearby field, rushed to Ayscue's assistance and attempted to reason with Ward, who knocked Stokes down with a rock, then seized an ax and decapitated him.

Other colored men overpowered him and turned him over to authorities.

He attempted to escape while a doctor was examining him and was subdued only after he had broken up office furniture.

He then was taken to jail and later removed by the sheriff, who planned to transfer him to Rocky Mount to prevent mob violence.

Peoria Killer's Diary Banned; Friends Hissed

Court Is Jammed as Trial for Slaying of Hostess Nears Its End.

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., July 30.—The lurid diary of Gerald Thompson was barred from evidence late today and the defense rested in his trial for the slaying of pretty Mildred Hallmark, 19, cafeteria hostess.

Possibility that the diary—which authorities said gave detailed accounts of attacks upon 16 other girls—would be introduced had resulted in a jammed courtroom as spectators fought to get to the hearing.

The defense, seeking to prove the youthful toolmaker was insane, asked that the little black book be admitted to bear out contentions of witnesses that Thompson was a maniac.

State's Attorney Edwin Champion objected on the ground that it was immaterial and "merely an account of depravity." Judge Joseph Daily sustained his objection and Champion started calling rebuttal witnesses with prospects that the case soon would reach the stage of final arguments.

Rebuttal witnesses were asked questions to refute contentions Thompson was insane.

Amid noisy courtroom scenes Thompson's attorney, Ren Thurman, put several witnesses on the stand to testify they believed the young mechanic is a mad man, who gave but little attention to anything except girls.

"He was always talking about women, and sometimes described his methods," Samuel Sprinkle, of Morton, Ill., one of Thompson's fellow workmen, told the jury trying Thompson in Judge Joseph Dailey's court. "I heard him tell how he twisted their arms."

There were hisses from the spectators who fought their way into court when Sprinkle and the other witnesses for the defense had finished. So boisterous was the crowd that the judge warned he would clear the courtroom if there were more demonstrations.

Spectators had jammed into the courtroom in the belief that Thompson's diary would be offered by the defense.

"He told me," said Sprinkle, "that during the year he intended to pick up 52 girls—one a week—and keep a record of it."

Sprinkle's son, Harold, 19, and Harry Huttleston, told the jurors, as did the elder Sprinkle, they considered Thompson was "insane."

The defense apparently received a surprise, however, when John Manias, who testified for the State Monday, refused to give testimony that Thompson was insane.

"Didn't you tell me that Thompson was crazy as hell?" shouted the defense attorney.

"I did not," the witness replied.

In his previous testimony Manias told how he had seen a man pick up a girl in his car on the spot where Thompson confessed he met Miss Hallmark, comely, auburn-haired cafeteria hostess and convent school graduate, on the night of June 16.

Her battered, semi-nude body was found the next morning in a cemetery ditch. Thompson was arrested several days later.

Laurel to Weigh Sunday Film Vote

Legion Post Back of Move for Referendum.

A special meeting of the Laurel (Md.) Town Council will be held tomorrow night to consider an ordinance calling for a referendum on the question of permitting Sunday moving pictures.

The ordinance, the third of its kind drawn up this year, was requested by the local American Legion Post, headed by Commander Vinton D. Cockey.

The post, at a meeting Monday, pointed out the local theater corporation has promised it 50 per cent of the net profits from Sunday shows if the performances are allowed before next October 1.

John Stanley, representing the theater corporation, and Kent Mullikin, representing the legion, told the council it was agreed such funds be made available would be used for a home for the post.

From Fragrant Saazer Hop Gardens comes this WORLD-FAMOUS TASTE

Hops from old Bohemia cost more, but hops from the Saaz district cost most of all. The choicest of Saazer hops are skillfully blended with the finest American hops to give BUDWEISER that distinctive can't-be-copied taste.

Character begins with the ingredients. So, BUDWEISER must have—and gets—the cream of the barley crop. It costs more, but BUDWEISER'S character demands it. Every bit of barley malt is made in our own brewery by a thorough and costly process to guarantee constant uniformity.

Character is reflected in quality! BUDWEISER costs us more. It costs your dealer more. It costs you more. It's worth it!

Reasons why BUDWEISER is the Most Famous Beer in the World:

1. Its distinctive taste and delightful tang have made it America's first choice for three generations.
2. Its quality has made it the biggest selling bottled beer in history and built the largest brewery in the world.
3. Brewed by the same formula since 1876—always uniform—everywhere.
4. Not artificially carbonated—Budweiser is twice fermented for natural carbonation and sparkle.
5. Brewed from the cream of the barley crop and the choicest selection of domestic and imported Bohemian hops.
6. One brewery that makes its own Malt—Anheuser-Busch never buys it from outside sources.
7. Pioneers in pasteurization of bottled beer—every bottle sterilized.

These are but a few samples—you will find a page of them opposite comics.

You see an automobile depreciates just as much in price whether it is on the road or in a dealer's show room or on a dealer's lot.

That is why, when the end of the month comes, used car dealers all over the District cut prices drastically so as not to carry over too large a stock into next month.

Turn to the page opposite the comics now—there's a whole page of this month's money savers there, and they are all catalogued by price and make.

Fire Destroys Postal Building At Poolesville

Century-Old Log Structure in Ruins; Blaze Imperils Business Section.

Hand-hewn timbers that had withstood more than a century of weather succumbed yesterday to flames which for a while threatened the business district of Poolesville, Md.

The Poolesville postoffice building, the attached residence and a store, as well as several small outbuildings, were burned to ruins early yesterday morning, despite the valiant efforts of Rockville and Gaithersburg - Washington Grove volunteer fire departments.

Three persons in the postoffice building narrowly escaped death when they were summoned from their sleep by a next-door neighbor, Mrs. Fannie Williams, whose valuable collection of more than two-century-old antiques was threatened.

Clothes and $100 Are Lost.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry White and Mrs. White's brother, Arthur Bowman, managed to escape but all their property was lost. Mr. White failed to save his trousers which contained $75 and another $35 which was under Mrs. White's pillow was lost. Neighbors provided clothing for the trio and they were taken to the near-by home of Mrs. White's daughter.

The Whites had retired from farming and had moved from their farm at Dickerson with the intention of passing their remaining days in peaceful quiet of the postoffice building the day before the fire. The building is owned by a sister of Mrs. White, Mrs. Clara Norris, of Mount Rainier, Md. It is believed partly covered by insurance.

Poolesville's business section probably was saved by the heroic efforts of Mrs. Charles Kohlhoss and Mrs. Dora Hall, who awakened the slumbering residents and the town and called the fire departments. Mrs. Hall didn't discover she was barefoot until the excitement died down.

Two Sacks of Mail Saved.

The men of the town attempted to save the postoffice and residence furnishings, but managed to save only two sacks of mail and the cancellation stamp. Charles Kohlhoss was severely burned on the face when a neighbor kicked out the screen door of the postoffice into his arms.

The flames in the postoffice building drove them out and they turned their attention to the almost priceless antiques of Mrs. Williams. Her home was saved without damage, except by smoke.

Six elderly persons became hysterical and were given first aid by Dr. E. W. White, of Poolesville, who also tended minor cuts and burns for firemen. Circuit Court Judge Charles W. Woodward, who lives nearby, aided in quieting the older persons and in salvaging.

Mrs. Fannie Price, 90, probably oldest resident of Poolesville proper, stood on her nearby porch and shouted encouragement to the firemen and citizens.

Lack of Water Hampers Crews.

The Rockville Volunteer Fire Department was at the scene of the fire, nearly 20 miles from its base, within 21 minutes of the time the alarm was sent, residents said. Gaithersburg - Washington Grove followed within a few minutes.

The firemen were hampered by lack of water. They pumped eight wells dry saving nearby buildings and keeping the fire from spreading. The well-seasoned timbers of the old building burned like tinder, and with the lack of water there was little chance of saving it.

Two Silver Spring volunteer firemen—Ernest Brandt, 709 Fairview road, and Charles B. Woodson, son of Justice of the Peace Woodson, of Silver Spring—narrowly escaped death when their car ran from the road, turned over twice and came to rest standing on its nose in a ditch. They were severely bruised and cut on the face and body, but were believed not seriously injured. The car failed to make Wattle's Curve, about 3 miles from Poolesville.

1923 Blaze Recalled.

The business section of the town was completely destroyed by fire in 1923 and at that time the postoffice was moved into the Norris Building, which was one of the two oldest houses in Poolesville. Mrs. Hall discovered the other fire and awakened the town, but a high wind and lack of water precluded any saving of the buildings. Damage was estimated at $80,000 in the 1923 fire.

Ernest G. Willard, postmaster, announced that he would open a temporary postoffice in the store of H. L. Willard, which is in the first story of the old Poolesville dance hall.

A fund of several hundred dollars was collected after the 1923 fire to provide a water tank and other fire protection for the town, but the money was lost in the crash of the Central Trust Co., of which the Poolesville bank was a branch.

The postoffice building, which was built of hand-hewn logs more than a century ago by one of Poolesville's pioneers, had been covered with clapboard. The fire revealed the old logs with the marks of the hewer's ax still apparent. Damage was estimated at more than $5,000.

Sandwiches and hot coffee were served the firemen and residents battling the flames, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Beall, near the fire scene.

New Deal Foes Are Denounced By Woodrum

Representative Hits at G. O. P. and Misguided Democrats.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.

Phone Clarendon 126-J.

"Republicans and newspaper editors" are the only two classes of persons who never make mistakes, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, Va., told the political rally at Herndon, Va., during his attack on the foes of the New Deal.

Woodrum was the principal speaker at a rally sponsored by the Herndon Chamber of Commerce and the Young Democratic Club, of Fairfax County. He classified opponents of the New Deal as "Republicans, misguided Democrats and newspaper editors" and declared that during the presidential campaign next year all issues and party lines will give way to the one question "are you for Roosevelt or against Roosevelt?"

Former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, was the principal target of Woodrum's verbal gunfire against the "misguided Democrats," whom he rapped for deserting the party. Inferentially, Senators Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, were placed in the misguided class.

Other speakers at the rally were State Senator John W. Rust and his two opponents, Hugh Reid, of Arlington County, and L. C. Painter, of Hybla Valley; Judge Paul E. Brown and George B. Robey, of Fairfax, candidates for Commonwealth's attorney; Dr. F. W. Hudleston, of Fairfax; Orlando Whitley, of McLean, and C. C. Carr, of Fairfax, candidates for county treasurer, and George F. Harrison and E. E. Gillette, of Herndon, and Miss Edith Rogers and Turner Wamsley, of Florida, candidates for the board of supervisors from Dranesville magisterial district.

Two youthful bandits held up the store of Jesse R. Harlow, about 3 miles west of Alexandria, yesterday afternoon and escaped with about $10.

Mrs. Harlow was alone in the store when the two youths came in and asked for cigars. She waited on them and as she came from behind the counter, one of the youths jabbed a gun in her side and demanded money. She directed them to the cash box.

Peery to Speak At Alexandria C. of C. Outing

Governor to Be Honored at Fort Washington on Friday Evening.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Plans for the second annual outing of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, featured by an address by Gov. George C. Peery, Friday evening, have been completed.

Gov. Peery will arrive at the Ford Motor Co. wharf at 4:45 p. m., and at 5 o'clock the U. S. S. Rucker, bearing approximately 325 members of the trade body and their friends, will get under way for Fort Washington.

On approaching the fort, a salute of 19 guns will be fired in honor of the Governor. A military guard of honor, of a company of the Twelfth U. S. Infantry, and a drum and bugle corps, will escort the Governor to the post, where retreat will be held, followed by an Army dinner.

At 7 o'clock the program will be taken over by Clarence J. Robinson, president of the Chamber of Commerce. Col. J. C. Ord, commanding Fort Washington, will deliver an address of welcome, which will be followed by the Governor's speech.

At 7:30 o'clock the party will embark for a trip down the Potomac, during which there will be dancing aboard the Rucker. The party will return to Alexandria at 10 o'clock.

The guests of honor, in addition to Gov. Peery, will include the adjutant general of Virginia, the chairman of the State corporation commission, the chairman of the commission on conservation and development, the president of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, the director of the State division of motor vehicles, the commanding officer of Fort Myer, Capt. Welch, of Fort Washington; Mayor Emmett C. Davison and City Manager Emmett C. Dunn, of Alexandria.

Mount Vernon Council, No. 1, Daughters of America, was the guest last night of District No. 1, at a meeting in the Elks' Hall, Prince and Royal streets.

The district embraces all councils of the order in Northern Virginia, including the four councils in Alexandria. Mrs. Ethel B. Foland, district deputy, called the meeting to order and presided pending the installation of the new officers, when the new district deputy, Mrs. Mary E. Robey, presided.

A denial of rumors that the annual convention of the Virginia State Firemen's Association, to be held at Clifton Forge, August 13 to 16, would be canceled owing to the infantile paralysis epidemic, has been received by Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr., from A. L. Robinson, general chairman.

Arlington Road Bids Approved By Board Action

Resurfacing of 100 Miles in Prospect; Playground Is Approved.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Authorization was voted by the county board yesterday for calling bids for resurfacing 30 miles of country roads where sewers have not been installed and more than 70 miles where sewers have been installed.

Bids on the 30 miles will be opened in the office of County Manager Roy S. Braden the morning of August 12. Those on the 70 miles will be opened September 11. Bids for construction of the sewage disposal plant also will be opened September 11.

The board will act on bids received August 12 at its meeting to be held August 14. Those received September 11 will be acted upon September 14.

Appearing before the board, Mrs. Harley G. Gibson requested cooperation to have a playground provided on the grounds of the new Clarendon Citizen's Hall and obtained board approval to take the matter up with County Superintendent of Schools Fletcher Kemp.

Seeing Kemp later in the day, Mrs. Gibson was assured of the support of the school board and was advised that as soon as the grounds are ready a playground will be provided.

Expenditures totaling $28,651.76, of which $15,226.56 represented the monthly pay roll, were approved by the board.

A request by Frank Lyon that he be permitted to have only one tap for water to serve the apartments he is constructing in Clarendon was disapproved by the board. The request was refused by a vote of 3 to 1 on motion of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder. W. E. A. McShea voted that the request be granted.

To raise funds to begin construction of a hospital in Arlington County the Woman's Auxiliary of the Arlington Hospital Association will hold a lawn festival tonight at the Lyon Park Community House.

A program of games, fortune-telling and other amusements has been planned. The festivities will open with an old-fashioned cold-plate dinner, with home-made cake and ice cream.

Nurses of the county are co-operating with the auxiliary and will operate a first-aid tent on the grounds. They will give an exhibit of first-aid equipment and explain its use.

Chairmen of various activities named by Mrs. Joseph Haley, general chairman, are: Mrs. Joseph Boss, vice chairman; Mrs. Arthur Orr, games; Mrs. Harley G. Gibson, ice cream and cake; Mrs. W. D. Martin, music and dancing; Mrs. Carlton K. Lewis, candies; Mrs. Heys, soft drinks; Mrs. A. Burton Colman, grab bags and fortune telling; Mrs. Walter K. Handy and Mrs. L. C. Carr, supper; Mrs. Presley Griffin, lights; Mrs. Bessie Butterfield, first aid. Miss Helen Samuels is treasurer for the festival.

Addressing the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County in the Cherrydale Methodist Church yesterday, nine candidates for membership on the county board all declared for a business form of county government.

Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder and William E. A. McShea, both seeking reelection, said that they stand on their records and that they will, if elected, continue to serve the best interests of the county.

Among other speakers were George M. Yeatman, Freeland F. Chew, Thomas R. Mecham, Edward Duncan, James C. Buchanan, Leo Lloyd and C. W. Lee.

Mrs. Jesse Roberts, president of the women's group, presided.

While there have been no new cases of infantile paralysis reported from Arlington County, Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, warns against attending gatherings and making visits either to neighbors or outside the county, as much as possible.

Dr. Chichester says that careful sterilization of eating and drinking utensils should be observed.

Dr. Thomas R. Johnson, of the Carnegie Institute, is announced as speaker at a luncheon of the Arlington Kiwanis Club today. Dr. Johnson will give an illustrated lecture on the region formerly inhabited by the Inca Indians. Dr. Lamar Harris will be in charge of the program.

The Arlington County Civic Federation last night went on record as indorsing the recent action of the county Chamber of Commerce in opposing the closing of Military road through the Washington Airport by the Federal Government until a substitute road is provided.

Meeting in the Lyon Park community house at Clarendon, the group also held an election to fill vacancies caused by the recent death of Fred E. Mann, treasurer and delegate to the Inter-Federation monthly conference. Mrs. Wilda McNemar, of Clarendon, was chosen treasurer, and Victor Meyers, delegate.

Grange to Hold Its Field Day At Beltsville

Several Hundred Maryland Farmers to Inspect Field Station.

Hundreds of farmers are expected to attend the annual field day of the Maryland State Grange tomorrow at Beltsville, Md.

The program, which will be held on the reservation of the Beltsville research center, will feature several prominent speakers. T. Roy Brooks, State master of the grange, will be in charge.

Following a luncheon, the grange members will be conducted on a tour of buildings devoted to the dairy industry and animal husbandry. The horticultural field station also will be open for inspection.

Delegates are being selected throughout Maryland for the seventeenth annual 4-H Club week, to be held at the University of Maryland beginning Thursday, August 8. More than 350 young people are expected to attend.

H. C. Byrd, acting president of the university, will welcome the young people August 9.

Others who will address the group during the week will include Dr. Harry J. Patterson, director of the university experiment station; Charles B. Potter, Miss Florence Hall, and A. B. Graham, of the Department of Agriculture.

A three-day meeting of the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council will be held at the university, beginning Wednesday, August 14.

Nationally known authorities on every phase of the poultry industry, including production, marketing, organization, and standardization of products, will speak at the meeting.

The speakers' list will include Dr. A. L. Sullivan, State food and drug commissioner; W. D. Termohlen, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration; Dr. W. I. Myers, governor of the Federal Farm Credit Administration, and others.

War Reporter In Africa Sees French Arming

Guns, Troops Are Sent to Somaliland in Case War Spreads.

Edward W. Beattie, of the Berlin bureau, United Press, is the first American Press Association correspondent to reach the scene of the threatened Italo-Ethiopian war in east Africa. Following is his dispatch filed just before he entrained from Djibouti for Addis Ababa.

† Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Djibouti, French Somaliland, July 30.—French authorities today unloaded troops, guns, barbed wire and ammunition in readiness for possible unrest among natives of this torrid, dusty port in sympathy with their fellow blacks in Ethiopia.

Senegalese soldiers marched off a French transport to reinforce the Djibouti garrison against possible manifestations against Italy's threat to conquer Ethiopia. Should the tide of battle go against Italy in Ethiopia, authorities fear a general uprising of blacks against European colonial rulers.

Djibouti talks only of the coming war. Uncertainty over Ethiopia's future has made its predominant trade crumble. Arms, munitions and war supplies are not moving through the sun-baked, wind-swept port until the League of Nations decides who may sell to Ethiopia.

Italy Sends Arms.

While Emperor Haile Selassie waits for the arms he says he needs so sorely, the situation is vastly different at Massawa, Eritrea, one of the Italian transport depots.

There 25 ships are riding at anchor waiting to berth at the quays to unload their arms and sinews of war.

The speed with which Italy is preparing for war was evident as this correspondent passed through the Suez Canal. In the last five months Italy has sent 98 passenger ships, 18 freighters, 103,000 troops and 7,900 civilian workers through the canal.

The Italians are preparing under difficulties, however. European residents of Djibouti heard 20 Italians are dying daily in Eritrea of the terrific African summer heat.

The busiest spot in Djibouti is the Italian consulate. There the attaches seem to confer perpetually. Constantly they send carefully guarded messages to Rome.

Cruisers in Harbor.

Two Italian cruisers roll in the harbor. Occasionally an Italian plane soars overhead.

Much speculation here centers on possible repercussions of a war between whites and blacks. Many Europeans fear frankly that the natives of East Africa will rise in revolt against all whites if the warriors fighting under the standards of the conquering lion of Judah inflict reverses on Italian forces now concentrating for an invasion of Ethiopia's frontiers.

Besides Italy, France, Britain and Belgium hold huge colonial stakes in Africa, and Spain and Portugal have smaller colonies.

By the United Press.

Paris, July 30.—Military preparations to guard British interests in the Lake Tsana region of Ethiopia were reported from Egyptian sources today.

Anglo-Egyptian troops and British Sudanese were reported ready to cross the Ethiopian frontier and occupy the Gonda region near Lake Tsana if Italian legions invade Ethiopia.

Observers pointed out the Italians, advancing on Gonda, would find the British already in occupation.

Echo De Paris compared possibilities of the situation with Fachoda when French and British forces clashed over possession of the Soudan.

Britain long has sought concessions in the Lake Tsana area, but they have been declined by Emperor Haile Selassie.

revival of the commission would lead nowhere.

Though the Italo-Ethiopian issues overshadowed everything else, early arrivals had these other developments to discuss:

1. Czechoslovak circles indicated that nation would grasp the opportunity to press for early convocation of the proposed Danubian conference, believing it should be held before the Italo-Ethiopian dispute grew more acute. A new basis was said to have been reached whereby signatories, instead of signing mutual assistance pacts, would agree not to help any aggressor.

2. The journal of the German association for league questions predicted Russia and Rumania soon would come to an agreement permitting Soviet planes to fly over Rumania toward Germany in case of war.

Reich Protest Calls on U. S. To Arrest 'Insulters' of Flag

mittee, including Senators Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, and Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, authors of neutrality measures, appeared to have increased greatly the prospects of definite action at this session of Congress. If passed, the proposed neutrality legislation will be the first since the World War.

"I think it likely there will be neutrality legislation, although the draft of the proposed legislation has not been completed yet," asserted Democratic Floor Leader Joe Robinson, a member of the neutrality sub-committee.

There were indications the Administration and Congress may get together on a measure which would clothe the President with authority to place an embargo on arms shipments to belligerent nations and, possibly, to forbid the use of American flag ships for the transportation of articles listed as contraband into war zones.

Some restriction on loans to belligerents, in addition to those contained in the Johnson act, also was being seriously considered, with the possibility that a "cash and carry" policy might result, that is, a policy under which any belligerent might trade with the United States only if it paid in cash for what it purchased and carried the purchase away in its own or a third nation's ships.

Davis Attends.

Those who attended the meeting, in addition to Phillips, were Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore; Green Hackworth, legal advisor to the State Department, and Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador-at-Large and authority on neutrality and disarmament measures.

It is understood that this group took with them to the State Department copies of the principal neutrality measures now pending before the Senate in order to study them and propose amendments to make them more adaptable to situations which may develop in the future. The State Department group chiefly pointed out to the committee some of the difficulties which might be encountered under the various proposals.

Meanwhile demands for neutrality legislation were heard in the House and among peace organizations. Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, declared that immediate action was imperative in view of the threatened Italo-Ethiopian hostilities.

"We are telling people to get out of Abyssinia, but not Italy," said Maverick; "either we ought to tell both nations to protect our citizens or we ought to tell our citizens to get out of both countries.

"From the very start, we are condemning one country by saying 'you're not going to protect our citizens.' We ought to treat both nations alike."

Seven organizations dedicated to promoting world peace, in a petition to the State Department, asserted that "we feel it is vitally important that neutrality legislation should be passed at this session." The petition urged "positive legislation without delegation of power," which was taken as opposing the granting of discretionary powers to the President.

The German protest over the Breman flag incident was sent to the State Department by Dr. Rudolph Leitner, Charge d'Affaires at the German Embassy. The State Department did not make the text of the note public, but it was learned that it was vigorously worded.

As soon as Gov. Lehmann reports the facts in the Bremen case to the State Department, it is expected this Government will make its reply, setting forth what happened, the precautions taken by the police and expressing regret over the incident. This, it is believed, will end the incident.

LaGuardia to Act.

Mayor LaGuardia, on leaving a meeting of the works allotment committee at the White House, said that those who participated in the tearing of the German swastika from the bow of the Bremen "have been arrested and they will be prosecuted." He added that Morris Solomon, an American police officer, was injured trying to protect the Nazi emblem.

The New York mayor, however, said the incident would not have occurred had the officers of the Bremen co-operated with the police. He said that New York police had advance notice that the Communists planned a demonstration at the hour of the Bremen's departure and had suggested to the Bremen officers that none except passengers on the ship and their friends be permitted to come aboard and that police be permitted to patrol the decks of the ship.

The Bremen's officers, he said, rejected these suggestions, asserting their crew would police the ship and that the municipal police should confine their activities to the docks. Those who tore the flag from its staff slipped through the police cordon, but were quickly taken into custody when they revealed their intentions, the mayor explained.

May Go to Court.

Meanwhile the mayor seemed somewhat weary of being the center figure in international complications. News dispatches from New York reported that Paul W. Kress, the German masseur who was refused a business license by Mayor La Guardia on the ground that Germany was discriminating against Americans, revealed he was planning a court fight to force granting of the permit. It is likely he would succeed in such action, because this country is bound by a treaty with Germany not to discriminate against the latter's citizens.

The mayor's troubles, moreover, seemed to be on the increase, as the anti-Nazi federation in New York complained to him that the police who dispersed the Bremen demonstrators were abetting the "barbarous reign of Nazi terror," and that they should censured.

Cables from Berlin also reported that Hitler's government also were having trouble in moderating the drive on Jewish and Catholic groups, since anti-religious hotheads were ignoring the governmental decrees and operating on their own initiative in the German provinces.

Those who urged this government last week to protest against Germany's actions and to whom Phillips replied yesterday were spokesmen for the American Jewish Committee, the American Jewish Congress, B'nai B'rith and the Jewish Labor Committee.

Studied Views.

Phillips stated he had given "careful study to the views" expressed by the group "with respect to recent occurrences in Germany affecting various religious and racial groups there."

"I fully understand your solicitude regarding the experiences which these groups are reported to be suffering in Germany," he continued. "The concepts of religious freedom and liberty of conscience for all constitute the most fundamental principles of our own civilization and political faith. This being so, the American people are always sympathetic to the maintenance of these concepts in the United States as well as in other nations."

7 Men, $1,200 Held.

Texarkana, Ark., July 30 (AP).—Seven men, including three Negroes, were arrested here today by Federal agents who announced confiscation of more than $1,200 in counterfeit $10 bills. Officers said the arrests culminated an investigation launched last Friday.

Nazis Deliver Further Blows At 'State Foes'

Jews, Catholics, Veterans Again Target Despite Plan for 'Soft Pedal.'

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 30.—Swiftly struck blows against "state enemies" of two kinds increased apprehension among Jews, Catholics and war veterans despite yesterday's authoritative report that the drive on "reactionaries" was to be modified.

In Saxony, the interior ministry dissolved Steel Helmet war veterans' organizations, banned their insignia and uniforms and forbade meetings on the ground that members had transgressed against state and people.

In the Saar, recently reannexed to Germany, Governor Joseph Buerckel disbanded all church youth groups with sport, political and military aims, and ordered the youth organizations henceforth to abandon uniforms, insignia and banners.

Some authoritative quarters professed to believe the new developments, together with minor activities of the same sort throughout the Reich, indicated Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's reported decision to cure extremist tactics had not been taken wholly to heart by Nazi underlings.

Much Confusion.

Nazi Germany tonight presented a puzzling picture as various ministries gave divergent versions of future policies, reflecting the cleavage of opinion in high quarters.

One set high in officialdom stuck to its story that sensational phases of the "state enemy" campaign were to be throttled as a result of pleas from those who fear foreign repercussions.

However, in the face of these customarily reliable reports, came the dissolution of the Saxony Steel Helmets and the anti-church decree in the Saar.

Major developments of the anti-Jewish and anti-Catholic struggle have dwindled, nevertheless.

One of Hitler's major problems was said to be the reconciling of conservative and radical elements. The Fuehrer in the past has been known to have wavered when faced with the necessity of choosing between loyal factions.

Hitler and his collaborators were reliably reported anxious to halt individual action against reactionaries, this for diplomatic and economic reasons in view of the storm of protest created abroad.

However, authoritative quarters said the force of popular passions aroused against "state enemies" was so great that it was difficult to restrain. Reports from the provinces indicated the movement, though ebbing, still persisted.

11 Are Jailed.

Seven Jews and six Gentile women were jailed in Halle for alleged "violation of racial principles;" the Nurnberg burgomaster decreed that the Nazi flag only be displayed, though the government also recognizes the black-and-white-and-red imperial flag; the burgomaster of Quedlinburg declared Jews might not enter museums or Cathedrals there, and Recklinghausen police announced ten lay brothers of the congregation of the "Brothers of Mercy" had been arrested for alleged immoral practices.

At Hassloch Germans demonstrated against Emil Adoln, publisher of the Hasslocher Tageblatt who, an official version said, "berated the people of the fatherland in shameless fashion." The newspaper was closed indefinitely, and Adolf taken into "protective custody."

In the Coblenz district many towns took measures to prevent an influx of Jews, while Magdeburg, Charlottenburg and Baden courts took steps to limit practice of Jewish lawyers.

In Danzig Monday Storm Troops rode through the city on buses to which were attached signs such as: "The Jew is also a man?—the bedbug is also an animal!"

Canal's Closing To Italy's Ships Talked in Paris

League Might Grant Mandate to Powers to Block War Supplies at Sea.

Paris, July 30.—Closing the Suez Canal to Italian troop ships and other vessels carrying war material in event of war with Ethiopia, is being actively advocated once again on the eve of the League of Nations council meeting at Geneva.

The suggestion is that if the League is anxious to find means of stopping hostilities in event of failure of conciliatory methods, both through diplomatic channels and the Geneva institution, the council could grant a mandate to Britain or a group of powers authorizing a ban on all war materials passing from Italy through the isthmus.

If this is considered likely to increase animosity between London and Rome it has been suggested the League issue a mandate forbidding passage of war material of any description for any destination or of any origin passing Port Said.

Such a mandate could be carried out legally without running counter to the international convention under which the canal is operated.

By the Constantinople agreement made with the Sultan of Turkey, the company is obliged to keep the canal open for free trading by all nations for the duration of the mandate which expires in 1965.

Technically neither the French nor British governments could influence the present crisis. Under international law, however, both Italy and Ethiopa aire signatories of the Briand-Kellogg pact and if one of these parties declares war in violation of the pact it is believed the league council is entitled to request the canal be closed to war material.

James Roosevelt Cited In Jersey Court Case

Newark, N. J., July 30 (AP).—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, has been president of National Grain Yeast Corporation, of Belleville, about a month. Today he has been directed to appear in court in connection with his plant's operations.

Acting on the complaint of a woman who lives across the street from the yeast company, Vice Chancellor Alfred A. Stein ordered young Roosevelt and other officers to show cause next Monday why the plant should not be restrained from making so much noise and causing so much vibration 24 hours a day.

Mrs. Theresa Muller alleged the vibration caused the plaster in her house to fall and the doors and windows to rattle. She was represented by James J. Farley—not the Postmaster General, but a Newark attorney.

Kidnapers Held In $25,000 Bail For U. S. Court

Leader Is Paroled Slayer With Long Record of Crimes.

George Hewitt and Warner W. Wood were arraigned yesterday in Baltimore on charges of kidnaping Benjamin H. King, 65-year-old Arlington Cemetery worker, while Federal agents here were delving into Hewitt's criminal record.

It was disclosed by Federal agents, who completed investigation of the case after Prince Georges County police arrested the men at Marlboro Tuesday, that a search is being made for a third man alleged to have fleeced King of $3,000 a month ago by posing as a Federal tax official.

A complete check of the Bureau of Investigation's fingerprint files revealed that George Tarbutton, alias George Hewitt, not only is a paroled murderer from Virginia, but that he once broke out of the Richmond City jail and served two terms in Maryland for manslaughter and false pretenses.

He and his confederate were ordered held under $25,000 bond each by U. S. Commissioner James K. Cullen in Baltimore yesterday. Accused of violating the Federal kidnaping statute, or "Lindbergh law," they will receive a hearing August 8. The pair have confessed, according to the authorities.

Bureau of Investigation records show Tarbutton, or Hewitt, was arrested in Baltimore in 1906 on a manslaughter charge. He was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. In August of the following year he was arrested again and received an 18-month term for false pretenses.

The next notation has him breaking the Richmond jail in July, 1918, while awaiting trial for murder. He was captured by Schenectady police 17 days later and returned to the Virginia capital. The following January he began serving a life sentence and was paroled in June, 1934.

Befriends Man, Robbed.

New York, July 30 (AP).—Mrs. Lena Schotland, 88, was robbed of two diamond rings today by a man whom she had given $1 a few minutes earlier on the plea that he was penniless and hungry. Mrs. Schotland was beaten about the head and face by the intruder, who forced his way into her Bronx apartment.

Divorce Milling, Silver Mining Bring Prosperity to Carson City, but Create Housing Problem.

By Maxine Davis.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Carson City, Nev., July 30.—There's a building boom in Carson City. Housing is a serious problem.

The capital of Nevada, which prides itself on being the smallest capital in the world, is taking prosperity pretty earnestly. The city's population is normally 1,800 and any rapid growth constitutes a situation.

The condition is due to an improvement in the divorce business and in mining. It's this way:

Reno lawyers, some of them, anyway, have been bringing some of their clients down here. Carson City, in a supreme civic effort to help business pick up, offers inducements which differ from its nearby rival-Reno. For one thing, you can get a divorce here without publicity. The newspaper, the Daily Appeal, has obligingly adopted a policy of no report of divorce cases which the principals prefer to keep from public attention.

Then, Carson City has been taking advantage of the fact that some judges now sitting are likely to give the woman in the case the benefit of the doubt. That doesn't obtain here. A man can get a fair hearing, at the very least!

Lately, silver mining has begun to improve. Silver City and the famous Comstock Lodes are expanding. There's talk of a big merger. People are moving in. When the son of John Raskob announced his intention of living here and looking after his father's interests, the City Fathers were put to it to find him a suitable home.

New Activity.

The silver boom is just beginning. Until lately, there hasn't been much confidence in the stability of the price of silver, in spite of the fact that the State, which, in contrast to its leviathan neighbor, California, brags of having the smallest population per square mile of any State in the country, has two of the most powerful Senators in Washingon. Now, however, there are signs of activity all over the State.

Gold mining, of course, has been on the upgrade ever since the depression. Yon can still see placer mining on every stream anybody ever thought might have gold.

This is the most romantic country I have ever seen. Its scenic beauties, which haven't had the advantage of New Mexico's and Arizona's ballyhoo, easily rival them. And it's rich in romance. Outside of Reno is a cheap summer resort in a house once built by a mining millionaire, where not only the plate and the statues were, it's said, pure gold, but the doorknobs were too.

I passed the ranch home of Lord Wellesly, an Englishman, who, while getting a Reno divorce, became so enamored of a hat-check girl that he preferred to marry her than go home. He raises blooded horses now.

You have to get natives to point out the ghost cities for you. Where Washoe City, a town of 5,000, once stood for instance, there isn't even a shack or a tablet today.

The train that takes the mail and the oil to Battle Mountain is a cunning little thing with a funny funnel top. It's the original magnificent locomotive that once astonished the sightseers at the Philadelphia Exposition in 1876.

Geronimo's grand-daughter, who looks every inch your idea of an Indian princess, is a social worker, striving side by side with the whites her ancestor, the famous Apache outlaw, attempted to destroy.

Feuds Still Live.

Memories of famous feuds still live. Carson City, which has no excuse, in water or position, for existence, was founded because a miner wouldn't pay as much as $1,000 for the land he wanted in Genoa.

Minden and Gardenville, twin towns not a half a mile apart, are bitter enemies. The railroad, controlled by a Minden man, doesn't go as far as Gardenville. The people there have to come and haul their gasoline and other heavy freight by truck.

This is Mark Twain country and the people show with infinite pride souvenirs and places where he camped.

The fire department in Carson City is a volunteer one, and more exclusive than an old New York Club. It's efficient, too. When the Indian School at Stewart, three miles away, had a fire recently, all the members of the fire department were at a banquet. They deserted en masse and 10 minutes after the alarm came in were fighting the flames, in full evening clothes! Afterward, the school gave them a fine dinner, with speeches.

Gambling is one of the major industries of the State. I have never seen anything like it. You are immediately infected with it. Every drugstore has its slot machines. I hadn't been here ten minutes before I had already lost $1.

On a Saturday night the main street gambling houses in Reno are something to see! The people are out of an old Wild-West dime dreadful. In one house, the dealer at the faro table looked like every villain you can remember. The croupier at a roulette wheel was a suave, silver-haired, moustached, dissolute-looking character, just as you'd want him to be. There were cowboys in flaming red shirts and high heeled boots; and Chinese, far gone with dope; ladies with cast-iron faces and marvelous coiffeurs; toughened denim-overalled miners rubbing shoulders with weak-chinned playboys from the dude ranches, and flippant cuties from the divorce colony—all mutually engaged in losing their money. At roulette, twenty-one, keno, faro slot machines, dice, and even a wheel of fortune, badly named. Stakes aren't as high as they used to be. But the tension is.

The Wild West is still wild, and much better than the movies.

Farley Sees Depression Ended by Next Summer

Reno, Nev., July 30 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley predicted today the depression will be ended and that conditions in general in the United States will be "in good shape by next summer."

En route with Mrs. Farley and Ambrose O'Connell, his executive assistant, to Honolulu for a vacation, the Postmaster General stopped here this afternoon before proceeding to San Francisco.

"We are further out of the depression right now than most people realize," Farley said. "In my opinion we will be in good shape by next summer. Large corporations are again reporting profits. I think the whole Public Works Administration program has been in a large measure responsible for this."

Slayer Denied Her Freedom, Breaks Down

New Hearing Set Today for Woman Who Killed Husband.

Appearing before Judge Joseph C. Mattingly in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court yetserday, attorneys for Mrs. Dorothy Jean Smith, 26, of Laurel, Md., were told habeas corpus proceedings could not be obtained until tomorrow.

Waiting in an outer room of the Upper Marlboro Courthouse, the pretty brunette beautician, who is said by a coroner's jury to have killed her husband, Wade L. Smith, a former State policeman, broke down when told she would have to return to the Hyattsville Jail.

Her father, A. S. Dodd; her attorneys, J. Wilson Ryon and Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate, and County Police Sergt. Ralph Brown attempted to comfort her.

Tomorrow at 10 a. m., they will take her to Upper Marlboro again for the habeas corpus hearing before Judge Mattingly.

With them will come several of he principal witnesses, who Monday night told a coroner's jury at Laurel what they knew of the quarrel that preceded the fatal shooting early Sunday.

State's Attorney Alan Bowie said late yesterday he was preparing to issue the formal warrant charging Mrs. Smith with murder. The coroner's jury, presided over by Acting Coroner James L. Vawter, recommended a second-degree murder charge.

Happy Motoring!

Easy as A,B,C!

Here's a simple formula . . but one that never fails . . for getting the fullest possible enjoyment out of your car:

A- Next time you need motor fuel, drive in at the nearest Esso sign and have the tank filled with high-powered Aerotype Esso or super-smooth Essolene . .

B- Have the crankcase drained and replenished with just the right grade of fresh, long-lived Essolube—the premium quality oil that sells at regular price . .

C- After that, make it a point to rely only on Esso dealers and stations for refillings and any wayside service you may need.

Then, watch your car perform! You'll have more power than you'll ever need. Pick-up so swift you'll skim away from traffic like a flash. Speed that will let you show your heels to the fleetest. And as for economy . . you'll find that no other fuel and oil you've tried ever gave you such generous mileage . . kept your car so free of trouble . . and enabled you to enjoy so fully the pleasures of "Happy Motoring."

THE SIGN OF Happy Motoring!

If Esso dealers and stations were placed only a mile apart, they would reach eastward from New York around the world and across the Atlantic again. Little wonder, when travelling from Maine to Louisiana, you seldom lose sight of the familiar oval Esso sign—the identifying emblem of these Esso Marketers.

RECOMMENDED FOR Happy Motoring! :: Aerotype ESSO—endorsed by over 1,500,000 users as the outstanding premium fuel . . As Reported To The House.

In writing its tax bill the Ways and Means Committee followed the general policy outlined by the President, but could not bring itself to indorsement of some specific provisions favored by the White House and the Treasury. Undoubtedly the committee was eager to please Mr. Roosevelt. Yet it was impressed by the logic of the criticism that has been aimed at the Administration's loose tax proposals. The result is a measure that pleases very few.

Secretary Morgenthau wanted the committee to "earmark" revenue from the proposed levies for retirement of the public debt. The most optimistic estimate places the yield of this bill at approximately $275,000,000. No doubt members of the committee visualized this relatively meager sum in the special Treasury drawer, to which Mr. Morgenthau refers, alongside the deficit which for the fifth consecutive year will run to several billions of dollars. Why should they expose themselves to needless ridicule by writing into the bill a piece of fiction that would only emphasize its shortcomings as a revenue producer?

Not all of the compromises made by the committee, however, were so carefully reasoned. That body recognized the unsoundness of the President's plan to graduate corporation taxes according to size. It devised a schedule of excess profits taxes to avoid the discriminatory levies suggested by the White House. Having thus virtually repudiated a vicious principle, the committee nevertheless agreed to apply that principle in restricted form. To the excess profits tax was added a 14¼ per cent levy on corporate net incomes above $15,000, with a rate of 13¼ per cent for incomes below that figure.

Revenue from this change would be negligible. And the differential is so small that it is of little apparent practical importance. It is in recognition of a thoroughly unsound principle that the danger lies. If Congress should approve the theory of taxing "bigness," the rates could then be easily adjusted for punitive purposes. In cases of this kind there can be no compromise. Levies that are destructive in theory and practice must be rejected regardless of how innocuous they may appear in the initial stages.

Specific application of this principle in the committee bill to insurance companies affords an excellent illustration of the issue involved. It is common knowledge that the most trustworthy insurance companies are the large institutions which spread their activities throughout the country. In these companies the savings of millions of Americans—mostly individuals of small means—are invested. If Congress should penalize institutions of this kind in order to encourage small fly-by-night companies, suspicion of the inanity of the present tax bill would be emphatically confirmed.

The chief concession to the plea for a balanced budget is more amusing than important. After a struggle with its conscience, the committee agreed to reach all the way down to $50,000 incomes with an increased tax of 1 per cent. This is what it calls drawing upon the "middle brackets."

And Now The Danes.

Copenhagen reports that special trains have been rolling into the city with peasants from rural districts bent on laying their demands for better agricultural conditions before the king. A mass demonstration of 50,000 men and women was staged to emphasize the need for better farm prices and more sympathetic consideration for the economic difficulties of agriculture.

Many an economic text book will have to revise its chapters if this proves more than a flash in the pan. For years Denmark has been held up as the world's outstanding example of agricultural success through co-operation, a procedure for some reason hateful to most other farmers' ways of thinking. Thanks to its highly developed co-operative system, in which practically every farm from the largest to the smallest participates, Denmark has enjoyed a degree of economic stability making the little country the envy of all the world.

Every branch of agriculture and animal husbandry, including sales and purchases, is managed through associations stemming from two national organizations, De sammirkende danske Landboforeninger and De sammirkende danske Husmandsforeninger, which work with the Landbrugsraadet (Agricultural Council) to promote the interests of agriculture in dealings with the royal government, foreign countries and other Danish industries.

Notwithstanding all, however, farmers are now up in arms in Copenhagen. With experienced Denmark failing to solve the riddle of agriculture, what hope is there for the AAA?

The Council Meets.

The Council of the League of Nations meets today, the twenty-first anniversary of Russia's mobilization against Germany, for an emergency session foreordained to be momentous in the history of our times. It must either find a formula which will prepare the way for settlement of the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia, or confess bankruptcy as an effective agency for the preservation of peace, even between the members of the Geneva organization.

The spokesmen of the 14 nations which compose the council confront a most difficult task. The league is not a super-state and the diplomats now assembled at Geneva have in few cases any authority to bind their own nations to any positive course of action, let alone competence to speak for the 40 league members not represented on the council. As one of the permanent council members, Italy is in a position to impede concerted action by that organ, while the diverse interests of those not parties to the dispute make it exceedingly difficult for them to agree on a common front in advance of consideration and authorization by their governments. Furthermore, three of the most influential world powers—the United States, Japan and Germany—are unrepresented at Geneva, greatly weakening the council's claim to speak for world opinion.

On the other hand there are a number of factors which will assist the council in its complicated problem. As the prospect of actual warfare between Italy and Ethiopia draws closer the overwhelming desirability of averting that outcome becomes increasingly apparent. Italian opinion is not yet so hysterical, and so blind to the shadows across its contemplated path, as to make Baron Aloisi contemptuous of any compromise which will save his master's face. Italy's financial troubles are rapidly mounting, her heretofore powerful diplomatic position in Europe is being undermined, her troops in East Africa have already met with difficulties and diseases which not even close censorship can altogether conceal. It is now clear that the Ethiopians are not going to be bluffed out of their independence and that war will entail for the Fascist regime risks altogether incommensurate with any fruits from military victory.

Mussolini can not have failed to notice that his enemies would like to see him engage in this war, while the real friends of Italy are trying to avert it. The story comes that anti-Fascist exiles in Paris are doing what they can to assist Ethiopia. This report may be utterly false, but its significance lies in the fact that it is plausible enough to be believed. The German press has kept very silent on the proposed Italian campaign. That shrewd Russian commentator Karl Radek asserts this is "in order not to frighten Italy." There are powerful elements in Austria, Yugoslavia, perhaps even France, which would be by no means displeased should megalomania carry Italy into an irretrievable disaster. And that such disaster lurks somewhere deep in the Abyssinian mountains is certainly not improbable.

The moral pressure of civilization is overwhelmingly against the proposed Italian aggression. No official propaganda can explain away the flagrant treaty violations which are threatened, nor obscure the fact that in 1923 Italy strongly supported Ethiopia's application for league membership and minimized the slavery pretext with which Rome now seeks to disguise her real objectives. The argument that Italy has a high mission to "civilize" Ethiopia has aroused ironic laughter throughout the entire world. Enlightened opinion everywhere is strongly opposed to a war which at best would upset the unstable balance in Europe and which might very conceivably plunge Italy into the anarchy always threatened by the overthrow of a dictatorship.

So the Council of the League of Nations is by no means entirely impotent as it assembles in Geneva today. Strong as are nationalistic ambitions, weak as is the machinery for safeguarding peace, yet on the side of the latter is aligned the commonsense as well as the moral instincts of mankind. History gives no great confidence that this combination is sure to triumph in human affairs. But the council of the league, as its agent, may be expected to put up a sturdy battle against the forces operating to disintegrate western civilization. The league will not really fail unless it weakly betrays this trust.

Dean Williams.

Probably not one in a hundred readers of newspapers know much about Dr. Walter Williams, who died Monday in Columbia, Mo. But to the fraternity of newspapermen he was both widely known and very deeply respected.

Time was when American journalism was best known for its frayed and seedy representatives—complete with slouch hat, loud ribaldry and a brazen lack of scruples. Dr. Williams, as much as any other one man, was responsible for the improved complexion and attitudes of much of the national press today. As the first dean of the school of journalism of the University of Missouri, he worked an honest and high-principled influence on hundreds of men now high in newspaper ranks. Much of the credit for the outstanding coverage of Far Eastern affairs, and the consequent better understanding of transpacific points of view in this country, goes in the last analysis to Dr. Williams. For an unusual number of his students either have served or are now serving in the Orient as foreign correspondents, concentrating particularly in Tokyo.

The success of his journalism courses, which followed a laboratory technique of publishing a complete daily newspaper for the town of Columbia, inspired the establishment of similar schools in other institutions throughout the country. But his conception of proper newspaper training was not confined to considerations of reporting or accounting alone. He was an advocate of the liberal arts as the ideal background for a newspaper aspirant. Accordingly, though he had no more than a high school education to recommend him as a scholar, he was named president of the University of Missouri.

The boy who had started as a devil in the print shop of a small weekly became the recipient of many honorary degrees and a member of numerous national and international societies. By his death, journalism loses a leader of high ability and the country loses a citizen and educator of notable integrity and accomplishment.

This Is No Time To Quit.

Rumors that the Department of Justice is trying to secure the services of E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel for the District, follow close upon reports that Mr. Prettyman is working out an extensive program of local legislation. Regardless of what his qualifications for the Federal post may be, it would be a pity if he should be influenced to leave his present position in this critical period.

Mr. Prettyman's appointment as corporation counsel, after he had resigned as general counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, seems to have been an accident of politics. Nevertheless, he has won the confidence of the public as well as that of the Commissioners. With unusual energy and intelligence he has devoted himself to the District's numerous legal problems and achieved highly commendable results. A number of his bills designed to modernize obsolete statutes and rationalize the local governmental system are before Congress. Others are in the course of preparation.

The bill now being drafted by the corporation counsel to divest the Federal Budget Bureau of control over local finances is of very great importance. Washington can not function as a normal community so long as its fiscal policy is cut to the pattern of a Federal bureau. There is not much chance, for example, of supplying the need for more school facilities, playgrounds, swimming pools, etc., until emphasis is shifted from marble halls and elaborate parks. This can only be done by giving the responsible heads of the local government some small measure of control over the municipal purse.

If Mr. Prettyman were drafting no other legislation, there would be ample reason to let him be undisturbed until this particular task has been finished. As a matter of fact, he is a motivating force behind numerous reforms that are long overdue in Washington. To entice him away for a temporary assignment defending the Government against AAA suits would be an inexcusable disservice to the District. It is to be hoped that Mr. Prettyman will place the community welfare ahead of any personal inducements, at least until the projects he has begun have come to fruition.

Starlings: Here And There.

To be noted in the works program due to begin in the District as soon as the Commissioners can cut through the red tape of accounting and disbursing formulas is an item of $10,805 to be used to employ "between 4 and 49 persons" in a campaign against starlings. Whatever else may be charged against these oft'-maligned birds, it can never be said that they have not been a boon to boondogglers.

But, hold! In the New York Times appears a letter written from down Wiscasset, Me., way. It reads, in part:

> Believing that the starling is unjustly condemned, I am observing his habits. There are more young birds on our lawn this year than formerly. This acquits the starling of murder. Since the invasion of the gypsy moth I have not seen a native bird eat one nor destroy a cocoon or caterpillar. Starlings not only catch moths on the wing but hunt cocoons under our fence rail. The starlings, therefore, should be acquitted of all unproved charges and given legal protection.

How now? Is the starling the innocent victim of an unscrupulous press which periodically stirs up resentment against him? Would we could write so. The explanation of the difference in opinion must lie in the fact that Wiscasset is not a place of many ledges and parked automobiles, being a country town. Moreover, it must offer more abundant and less public trees to the starlings as roosting places.

Still, there is one possibility that the Bay Stater is entirely justified in his argument. Isn't there a Latin adage saying something about "other places, other habits?"

The Argentine Censorship.

From the Chicago Daily Tribune.

The censorship imposed on newspapers, news agencies, and foreign correspondents in the Argentine constituted a serious mistake on the part of the government. The decree can not fail to be regarded as an evidence of weakness. If the censorship is allowed to continue, the civilized nations will enevitably conclude that the government in Buenos Aires is seeking to hide something disgraceful and fears not only the public opinion of the world but its own people as well.

Censorship is the distinguishing mark of an enslaved people. The Argentine decree has lowered the people of a once-free American republic to the level of Hitler's slaves and Mussolini's serfs. Surely the Argentine government by this time has realized its mistake and will take prompt steps to correct it.

Voice Of Experience.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As I was shelling peas for dinner this afternoon, I looked at the newspaper, on which I had put the hulls and read the "Marriage Clause" letters of Annie Hunt and "Justice For All."

I have some definite ideas on the subject of married women working because of my experiences of the last decade.

Briefly my experience has been as follows: I gave up a $2,000 Government position to marry. My husband and I became estranged and he secured a divorce in a State which allows no alimony.

Only after months of hard studying and the taking of several examination have I again obtained a Government position here at a salary better than the previous one. What have I learned by this experience? Just this: that women ought to retain their jobs after marriage to guarantee their own economic futures. If I had a daughter I would train her to be economically dependent upon herself. I would lead her to see that economic independence is the greatest insurance against misery and unhappiness that anyone, male or female, can possess. I would exhort her never to yield it up.

EXPERIENCE.

Washington, July 24.

Earlier "Persuasion."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In this day when we are having an investigation of "accelerated" congresional persuasion by the pro's and anti's of legislation, it brings to life the memory of the eventful life of the late Capt. Charles Gee, of Petersburg, Va.

While a member of the State Senate during the reconstruction period after the Civil War, Capt. Gee administered a sound thrashing on the streets of Richmond to a member of the lower house of the Legislature for voting on a bill pending in that body without consulting him.

Not A New Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

On July 29 another account of an accident at Queens Chapel road and Bladensburg road northeast was given by your paper, and Coroner MacDonald insists that Queens Chapel road be closed. The District government knows, if others do not, that another outlet must be provided for residents of Langdon and Woodridge if this road is closed, to say nothing of commercial interests between the bridge across the B. & O. Railroad and Bladensburg road. This is not a new problem, but another one which the District Commissioners have sidestepped.

A street could be cut across from a point on Queens Chapel road to Twenty-fourth place to provide an outlet for the commercial concerns to Bladensburg road. If Queens Chapel road from the bridge north to Twentieth and Evarts streets is also closed, however, another outlet farther west must be provided. Twentieth street should be cut through, and the bridge across the B. & O. and Pennsylvania railroads to New York avenue should be built, a project which citizens of this vicinity have been waiting for for several years. The District has the authority to order this crossing, whether bridge or underpass, and has had it since the terminal act of 1903 was passed, regardless of the pending legislation to reduce the number of crossings (over both railroads) from three to two. The railroads are obligated to provide these crossings, while, of course, the District must provide the approaches.

Negroes And The New Deal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Gov. Roosevelt's first important announcement after he became candidate for the Presidency was of his intention to place chief stress of emphasis on the forgotten man. The Negro in many ways is not only forgotten but despised and rejected. President Roosevelt's policies which, generally known as the "New Deal," have laid no special emphasis on the complaints of the Negro or of any other group grievances. They have been broad and comprehensive in scope and application, but in no instance has there been any specific discrimination on account of race or color.

President Roosevelt has been more generous in recognizing the race by way of appointive office than any of his predecessors since the World War. He has just restored the ministership to Liberia which was withheld on account of diplomatic entanglements under Hoover's Administration. A distinguished Negro Democrat has been made recorder of deeds and another has been appointed local municipal judge. Specially qualified colored men have been assigned as special assistants to the Secretary of the Interior, Secretary of Labor, Secretary of Commerce and to the Attorney General. Never before has the race received this type of recognition on so wide a scale.

Although President Roosevelt is laboring heroically under burdens as heavy or heavier as ever fell upon administrative shoulders, yet he is holding an even racial keel and is doing his utmost to make the "New Deal" a square deal.

Green Mansion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Theodore Roosevelt Island, so your editorial of July 22 stated, will not be completed for some years. In the interim let me offer the lady in New York my sylvan retreat.

She wanted to live with books, sunlight and privacy. Your editorial said that Washington could give her the first two requisites. I should think it would not be the supreme sacrifice to do with less sunlight just now, especially when I can offer her the privacy so essential to complete enjoyment of trees. Or self-communion. Or reading. Or just looking.

There are log steps that lead down a steep embankment just back of my place; and by the time you reach the last log you are wrapped in the quiet, the peace and stillness of a forest. Down the hill and across the creek thickly covered hills offer rough going for those who find the trails too tame. Leaves from last fall in some places carpet the ground so thickly that no sound is heard as you walk along; and you can stretch on the ground—if you can find a place without too many stones—and there is small need to shield your eyes from the sun's glare even at midday.

It is with regret that I add that workmen are even now at the task of opening up a road through this section of Rock Creek Park, which will be an artery connecting outlying districts with the downtown section. But until then, it is my very own forest, my private domain, my retreat from the world that is too much with us late and soon. It is my woods where I go and sit "and look and look."

The Bootlegger And The Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Treasury, through its witnesses in both the House and Senate committee hearings on the alcohol control bill, has cried aloud over the proposal to permit sales of liquor in bulk on the theory that it will be necessary to station guards at the bung of every barrel to assure payment of the Government tax.

This is, of course, sheerest nonsense. In the first place, the handlers of bulk liquor will not have an opportunity to buy anything in wood except tax-paid spirits. The idea that the bootlegger will fill up the empty kegs as fast as they are emptied of tax-paid spirits may have some merit. Obviously, the stationing of Treasury officials here and there would not much affect that situation. They are unable to cope with the present one, in which the packaging of spirits is confined to bottles. Director Choate, of the defunct FACA, estimates that more bootleg is being sold than tax-paid. Selling in wood will not affect that situation. The facts are that the reason the bootlegger keeps pace with the legitimate dealer lies in two things: Some people prefer to patronize the bootlegger; and they will continue to do so; others are forced to the bootlegger on account of price. Of the two, the latter reason accounts for by far the greater percentage of illicit selling—or buying. Since the price of whisky tax-paid is too high, the buyer is forced to buy bootleg.

The proposal to sell liquor in wood is the first important step toward lower liquor prices. If, in addition, we could have a sane tax policy, the bootlegger would disappear, because his market would be gone.

The bootlegger undoubtedly prefers the present law, since the Treasury is more or less lulled into a false security by thinking it has gained pretty fair control of the situation. Then, too, he has only the high-priced bottled goods against which to compete—a natural set-up for him. He is not anxious to compete with bulk liquor, and especially if there is any thought of lowering taxes. High taxes and expensive packaging of tax-paid spirits guarantee him a continued prosperity in the sale of cheap bootleg.

Only through a wide distribution of tax-paid spirits can we hope to defeat the bootlegger. The bulk sales provision of the new law, permitting both wholesale and retail sales in kegs, will go far toward giving the consumer the best spirits at a price he can afford, and bring about a much to be desired more liberal drinking policy in the homes, thus further restricting the saloon evil and other unfavorable conditions so frequently attending public drinking at open bars.

The Post Impressionist

The Elder Juveniles.

Post Office, Wednesday.

WHERE are the boys' books of yesteryear?

Mr. D. Z. Jergain wants to know—and that makes the Post-Impressionist want to know, too.

Moved by our recent confession of a preference for de Laboulaye over Hans Andersen, Mr. Jergain writes us that there should be drawn up a list of those boys' books which have been shamefully forgotten. And this list should, we add, be posted in every public library and to every parent. Then, perhaps, it would eventually evoke reissues from the grievously responsible publishers.

"Your reference to de Laboulaye," writes our Column-friend "has awakened a train of delightful reminiscences. Why, you are the first American, outside my immediate family, that I have heard mention de Laboulaye for three decades at least!

"How vividly, for instance, I recall my first acquaintance with Abdullah! At five, I could do my own reading, so I must have been ill when my twenty-year-old sister read me the tale of The Four-leaf Clover. That gripping scene wherein Abdullah perishes in the desert, but sees the hand reached out from Paradise to bestow upon him the diamond-leaf: I can still taste the salt tears and remember how my throat was choked so that I had no answer as my sister, closing the book, asked whether I liked it.

"But," Mr. Jergain continues, "in any worthy catalogue of unworthily forgotten books-for-the-young, you should certainly place well up to the front 'Davy and the Goblin.' Davy is a rightful heir-at-law to Alice of Wonderland.

"Could I draw, I should reproduce for you the illustration of him and the dismal Cockalarum sitting on the rim of the sky-riding straw hat. And the barley sugar skylight! Having been brought up in Cincinnati, I marveled at barley sugar. With barley in soup or mutton-stew we Cincinnatians were as familar as with pretzels and German coffee-cake. But barley sugar? How could sugar be made from barley—and how could it be made sufficiently transparent to serve as a satisfactory skylight?

"Then," says Mr. Jergain, "there is—alas, I mean 'there was'—Stanley, too: Henry M. Stanley."

Modern newspapermen think of Stanley as just a great newspaper-correspondent—poof! Other moderns think of him as just a great explorer—poof-poof! He did do some newspaper work. He did find Livingstone.

But Mr. Jergain is one of those who have the happiness to know Stanley's greatest achievement: His "Kalooloo"—and "Selim starving in the jungle because his religion restrained him from eating the carcass of the beast he had shot."

Says Mr. Jergain: "Perhaps Mark Twain's 'Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court' ought not to be included among forgotten books. But are its original illustrations remembered? I mean the pictures Dan Beard drew for it, long before he became the first Boy Scout. They were something which too few illustrations are: they belong to the text—and the text belongs to them:

"Without Dan Beard, the 'Yankee' is only half a masterpiece."

These many years has Mr. Jergain haunted second-hand bookshops, "hoping to find a copy of one of those volumes, but hoping in vain. They must," he says, "be out of print as well as out of mind."

Well, the Post-Impressionist can go most of the way with Mr. Jergain.

We did reread "Davy and the Goblin" a couple of years ago and found it a bit too calculatedly like "Alice." We prefer to remember Guy Wetmore Carryl for some of his verse. Still, Davy stands inside the Great Tradition.

As for the "Yankee," we feel that no boy should read that story until he has learned to love Malory (or some juvenile version thereof) too well ever to cease to love him. But we feel that then no boy should fail to read the "Yankee." Of course the Beard pictures are as much a part of the story as the beard of Merlin. . . .

And, O Mr. Jergain, did you never stay home from school to visit "The Lost City" with as good a newspaperman as Henry M. Stanley—to wit, with David Kerr?

"What," sighs Mr. Jergain, "do the lads of 12 to 15 read nowadays, I wonder. Hemingway, no doubt. Ursula Parrott, probably. Krafft-Ebing, to be sure. But are they too sophisticated to feel the thrills we had from Jules Verne and Henty, not to mention the surreptitious delights of Diamond Dick and Nick Carter? Style was not a strong point with the dime-novelists—but, at that, their style was as good as Edgar Wallace's or the style of many a pulp-magazine author."

* * *

Indeed yes! We'll add on our own responsibility: And as good as that of many among their subsequent betters.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Townsend Barrage.

BEING a composite response to a column doubting the feasibility of the Townsend plan:

Dear Sir: I have read in your dirty, cowardly, Wall-Street-owned lying sheet where you claim that the Townsend plan, the most constructive and most 100 per cent American plan humanitarian recovery plan, can not be worked and if you are wise you will "change your tune" in regards to this matter as the Townsend plan is the only 100 per cent constructive American plan of all. Your lying, Wall Street-owned, contemptible sheet had better not print any more articles like that with regard to the Townsend plan as we are now 50,000,000 strong and we believe in a free press which will tell the true facts and not a pack of lies dictated by J. P. Morgan and Wall Street. We will not stand for abusing the freedom of the press to print distorted versions of the true facts and poison the very keystone of American institutions with your corrupt propaganda to undermine the glorious principles of Old Glory like a vulture.

Any fair-minded person, if they are fair and honest and not receiving bribes from the rich brokers and international bankers, can not help knowing that the Townsend plan will restore prosperity through spending money, thereby giving work to the unemployed, so it is up to you to take an honest view of this plan and boost instead of knocking, you pin-headed, pen-pushing, ignorant Wall Street tool. So wake up.

I AM not selfish in regards to this plan as I am only 48 years old and my wife is 45, but my father and mother are both alive and so are her's and it would be a 100 per cent American God-send when they are able to receive $800 a month between them as the way matters stand now we have to contribute to support them whereas with $800 a month they can support themselves and if they wish they can support I and my wife, too, out of their pensions and I will be glad to make the sacrifice of retiring from active life thus releasing my job to someone that has had the misfortune to lose their father and mother, and thus no pension coming in. And when I am 60 I will retire again on my own pension. Any God-fearing man or woman worth the name would be willing to make the sacrifice to retire from active life in their parents' pension thus providing jobs for those who have had the misfortune to lose their father and mother if their own father and mother and their wife's are receiving $800 a month under this great recovery, humanitarian plan.

This will reduce unemployment by removing millions of men and women from jobs because they are too honest and too American to keep hogging the work from unfortunate orphans as long as their parents are receiving $200 a month each, even if they have only one parent between them as $200 a month will support a small family in comfort, including the parent. When this happens all those who have had the misfortune to lose their parents will have good jobs and they will be so glad to be employed that they will be willing to gladly pay any taxes that are necessary to keep the Townsend plan going. So this is an orphan recovery plan, too.

YOU are beneath the contempt of every right-thinking American with a drop of decent humanitarian blood in their veins. How does such ignorant "tripe" ever get on the "iditorial page" when it belongs in the "obituary column" with the rest of the dead ones? Why don't you go off and die somewhere as you are a paid hireling of a kept press and nothing that drips from your slimy pen will serve as a smoke screen to conceal the true facts.

Your lying, Wall Street-owned sheet is only hurting itself in publishing such dishonest articles as all true Americans will refuse to patronize any corrupt big-business bribe-taker who attempts to prevent this great recovery step by printing downright lies under the privilege of a free press. If you had any honesty you would get behind this plan and give it a boost because otherwise you are going to lose your job writing false junk about something you are too ignorant to understand.

Vitriolically yours, you Wall Street tool,
100 PER CENT AMERICAN.

Daly Article

By William Lyon Phelps

WHILE I was traveling in Germany last April, I caught a bad cold, and was confined for a few days to my room. One of my friends discovered that in a book shop in Munich, there were German translations of murder stories by Edgar Wallace, Phillips Oppenheim, Agatha Christie, and best of all, by Carroll John Daly. Now of all the writers of detective fiction, Carroll John Daly is my favorite; because I read such novels for diversion, I do not care much whether they are well written or not. I ask for only one thing—continuous excitement.

You may be surprised when I tell you how rare, how very rare, that quality is. The majority of murder stories, like the majority of other books, are dull. The vast majority of stage plays are dull; they do not hold the attention of the spectator. And when they do, they run a whole year and deserve to. It will not do to treat with contempt plays and novels that have no redeeming quality except excitement; for it is a redeeming quality indeed, and most welcome.

• • • •

My hat is off to any playwright who can hold my tense interest from first curtain to last, and to any novelist who can clutch me on the first page and not let me go until the last.

Well, in my room in Munich there was brought to me a novel which I presume in English is called "An Eye for an Eye"—in German it is "Auge Um Auge," and the author of it is Carroll John Daly.

• • • •

The private detective in Mr. Daly's novels is called Race Williams, and if I were in a dangerous country or in a tight fix, I would rather have Race Williams by my side than any other person I can think of. Race is always killing somebody, and the nice thing about it is that he kills only those persons by whose elimination the world gains.

Hurrah for Race Williams and for his creator, Carroll J. Daly! In the latest edition of "Who's Who in America," I find no mention of the name of Carroll J. Daly. But I will mention him in this column, and in many other places, in season and out of season.

Today the publishers send me a new novel. It is called "Murder From the East," and the author is Carroll John Daly. Don't you envy me?

This is one of my Daly articles.

The New Tax Program

Proposed Inheritance Levies Would Fail To Share Nation's Wealth.

The Post presents herewith the third of a series of seven analytical articles on the tax proposals now under congressional consideration. The author is professor of finance at New York University and an outstanding authority in this field.

By Dr. Jules I. Bogen,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE "share the wealth" philosophy implicit in the President's new tax plans is nowhere so emphatically illustrated as in the proposal to levy a tax on inheritance to supplement existing estate taxes.

The principle of inheritance taxation, while new to our fiscal system, is not nearly as revolutionary as the graduated corporate income tax proposal. Heavy and steeply progressive taxes on estates an inheritances have become the rule in Western nations. However, even without the imposition of the proposed inheritance levies, the United States now taxes estates, more particularly large estates, about as heavily as any country in the world.

The estate levy in this country compares with the total death duties of Great Britain, as follows:

Size of Net Estate	Amount of tax: United States	Great Britain
$100,000	$ 1,500	$ 8,000
150,000	3,600	15,000
200,000	11,400	24,000
400,000	14,400	72,000
500,000	19,600	123,000
1,000,000	139,100	340,000
2,000,000	461,100	600,000
5,000,000	1,672,600	1,900,000
10,000,000	4,172,600	4,800,000
50,000,000	28,386,600	25,000,000
100,000,000	58,386,600	50,000,000

In fact, only two countries, Germany and Bulgaria, tax any part of an estate or inheritance at a rate higher than our present maximum Federal rate of 60 per cent. Furthermore, among these two, the higher rates (70 per cent in Germany and 62 per cent in Bulgaria) apply only to shares in an estate received by heirs who are not related to the decedent.

• • • •

THE combination of estate and inheritance taxation would bring these levies nearer to the confiscatory limit than any other regular feature of our taxation system. On a net estate of $100,000,000 which is to be passed on to one heir, the existing taxes and the rates of inheritance taxation proposed by Treasury experts would make death duties of all kinds approximately 87 per cent. Since some necessary expenses incident to the passing on of wealth may not be deducted in arriving at the size of the net estate, it is probable that the heir would obtain barely $10,000,000. Even an estate of $10,000,000 would shrink to some $3,800,000 in the hands of one heir if the proposed inheritance levies are imposed.

All this assumes, however, that it is possible to take a large estate and turn it largely into cash within a reasonable time without loss to meet the inheritance tax bill. Now this is simply impossible in all but exceptional cases.

Estates are valued at time of death. Securities, realty and other assets can dwindle in value very sharply during the subsequent period in which the estate is being settled. Furthermore, many kinds of property, such as real estate, closely held business enterprises and even large blocks of listed securities, can not be sold at all without considerable sacrifice of values in the effort to attract a buyer. Even at the existing rates of the estate taxes, there are recorded instances where the liquidation of an estate has failed to yield sufficient cash to meet taxes and other expenses.

The addition of the inheritance taxes would make the settlement of the average estate of any size and out-and-out gamble. If values happen to be rising during the period of settlement, it may be possible to salvage a moderate fraction for the heirs. If the settlement must be effected during a period of defiation, on the other hand, the assets may frequently prove insufficient to cover the tax bill, leaving nothing for the heirs.

The one method of avoiding estate taxes, the making of gifts during the lifetime of the donor, is also to be shut off in part. New gift taxes, proposed along with the inheritance levies, are to equal 75 per cent of the latter.

• • • •

SUPERFICIALLY, of course, such virtual confiscatory estate and inheritance taxation looks like a plan for sharing the wealth par excellence. However, we are here looking at only one side of the picture. Any good wealth-sharing scheme must not only take away from the few, but also spread the benefits among the many.

The chief sufferers from these high rates will be the large estates that will have to undergo a process of forced liquidation in order to meet the back-breaking imposts to which they are subjected. This will bring about wholesale forced sales of the assets by such estates upon the death of the principal. However, only those possessed of substantial resources will be able to acquire these assets, as a rule. Regardless of whether real estate, business concerns or large blocks of stocks and bonds are being thrown overboard in order to raise money for estate and inheritance taxes, persons of large means will usually be found on the buying side.

Hence, we are likely to have here not a redistribution of wealth in any true sense, but merely a transfer of ownership within a relatively small group of wealthy persons. One generation of the well-to-do will be able to pick up cheaply the assets of the previous generation at forced sales. As a means of sharing the wealth, therefore, a system of sacrifice sales is particularly ineffective.

• • • •

WHAT of the economic background of such extremely graduated inheritance taxes?

It is necessary to distinguish carefully, in answering this question, between taxes on wealth and taxes on income. Actually, the Government does not and can not tax wealth in any material sense. It does not want to take over stocks, bonds, real estate and business concerns. It merely wants each year a sum of cash, constituting a claim on part of the current income of the Nation, so that it can defray its own outlays.

Income taxation, which diverts to the Government a portion of the current flow of revenue of the Nation, reflects the true situation. Taxes on wealth, on the other hand, tend to make necessary the liquidation of a portion of the property taxed, so as to permit the payer to meet his obligation to the Government. Thus, other people must use their income, and liquid resources obtained in other ways, to buy property which is being thrown on the market to pay taxes on wealth.

The situation is very similar to that which exists when a home owner finds his income very severely curtailed or eliminated, and yet he must pay taxes on his realty. In the long run, his only resource is to permit the Government to take over his house and sell it for taxes.

• • • •

WHAT are the effects on business of such sacrifice sales? Among other things, such confiscatory imposts on inheritance:

1. Introduce a new element of uncertainty and confusion in the markets for securities, real estate and other types of fixed property. The death of a wealthy man, more than ever before, would then be a signal that the market for the classes of property which figure prominently in his estate has been placed in jeopardy. Prospective buyers, banks as lenders and others interested in capital values would have to be constantly wary of such recurrent forced sales, particularly where broad markets do not exist for the assets involved.

2. Stability of control of business enterprises would be jeopardized in many instances. The necessity for meeting estate and inheritance taxes would make less feasible than ever the keeping intact of large blocks of voting shares to keep control of a corporation within one group. Increased use of nonvoting stocks and various other devices for maintaining control of corporations without ownership of any material amount of stock would be one likely result.

3. Inheritance levies would tend to hamper a return of stable conditions in the real estate market, which is one prerequisite to a resumption of a normal volume of building construction. The death of wealthy individuals holding large amounts of realty would necessitate throwing numerous properties on the market for sale to raise cash to meet taxes, with a consequent likely demoralization of values in the neighborhoods and communities affected. While such properties are seeking buyers on the bargain counter, the incentive to put up new buildings will be correspondingly reduced.

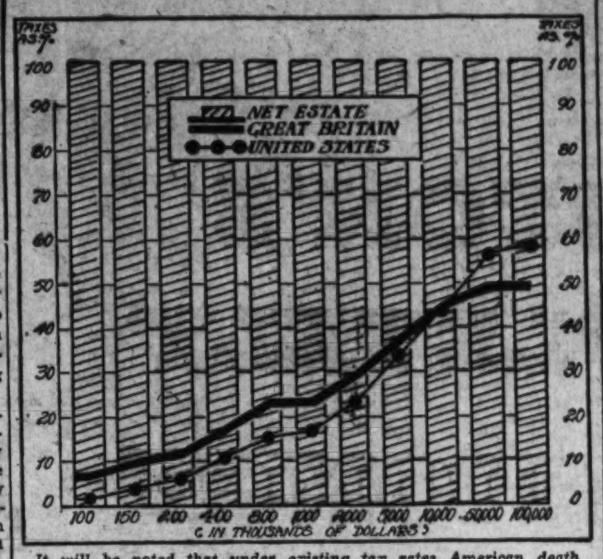
• • • •

THE income from wealth, rather than title to its ownership, is the essential thing in a modern economy. Through income taxation, the Government may absorb such income to any extent desired, right up to the limit of confiscation. Where income taxes are very steeply graduated, therefore, there is all the less reason for levying confiscatory taxes on the wealth itself, in the form of inheritance or as so-called capital levies, for the result is merely to force disturbing sacrifice sales.

Income taxes constitute the most effective method of sharing the wealth, for they enable the Government to make those with large incomes contribute most liberally to defray its current outlays, many of which inure to the general benefit.

In the United States there is a special reason for not increasing inheritance taxation further. Until 1926 the States obtained the lion's share of death taxes. An estate was then granted a credit up to 80 per cent of the total Federal impost on account of payments to the States. Since then, additional Federal taxes have been imposed that give the State governments a dwindling share of the income from estates. If inheritance taxes ranging from 4 to 75 per cent should now be imposed in addition, as proposed, the States will find that they are gradually being forced out of one of the few major sources of revenue that are left them in these times when the Federal Government is so rapidly preempting the field of taxation.

Rates of Progression in Estate Taxes



It will be noted that under existing tax rates American death duties exceed those of Great Britain on the portion of an estate which exceeds $10,000,000.

Daughter of Peer Granted U. S. Entry

Held at Ellis Island on Husband's Charge.

New York, July 30 (AP).—After being detained at Ellis Island since her arrival yesterday from England, Mrs. Calypso Daring Liddell, daughter of the late Lord Revelstoke, was allowed to enter the country today under a tentative six-month permit.

Mrs. Liddell, accompanied by her four children, was taken from the liner Normandie to Ellis Island by immigration officials acting on a complaint of her husband, Capt. Guy M. Liddell, who charged she intended to keep the children in the United States permanently although their passport visas allowed only a one-year stay.

A divorce suit is pending between the couple in London.

A special board of inquiry decided after a hearing, however, that the blonde Mrs. Liddell was entitled to enter this country as a returning resident, since she had a re-entry permit.

The English-born Mrs. Liddell said she visited the United States frequently and expressed indignation at the "outrageous act" which caused her temporary detention.

Morgan Sees Baldwin; Money Rumors Spread

London, July 30.—J. P. Morgan and Robert W. Bingham, United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James, called at 10 Downing street today to talk things over with ruddy, pipe-smoking Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and newspapermen at once heard reports of international currency stabilization and American interest in averting war in east Africa.

Bingham sails for New York tomorrow aboard the liner Majestic. It was his first conversation with Baldwin since he became prime minister.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Out the Wrong Side of the Bed.

NO doubt at all, I got out of the wrong side of the bed this morning. The day looks unutterably gray, breakfast was a farce and a delusion, and I feel immensely sick of writing literary remarks to the effect that Mr. Joshua Henny has violated all the union rules of composing detective stories, that Miss Lexine Pudderwalk's poetry is marked with charm and delicacy, and that Mr. Hermann Henry Grupp is a young novelist whose power and discernment make him a writer to be watched. No, I'm simply not up to it, thank you.

For last night something got under my skin and began to lay eggs like a chigger. If I had known that Stuart Chase's article in the August issue of Harper's Magazine—"Parade of the Gravediggers"—was going to have so discomforting an effect, I expect I would have avoided it with heartiness. But that would be merely playing the ostrich with head in sand.

And moreover that act, of dubious morality and worse intelligence, is the very one which Mr. Chase deplores in a certain segment of our population. I refer to "Big Business," the "Die-hard Conservatives," the "Rugged Individualists," the "Preservators of 'Liberty,'" the "Status-Quoers," or any other term which has been attached to the system of ideas you already recognize.

• • • •

NOW, personally, I abhor politico-economic conversation. If it is anything above the grade of ward politics (which, from the personalities, is sometimes amusing), it shows in almost every instance an ability to slide and slither around the point which would be the envy of an eel. And I find that, to say the least, unsatisfying.

But when next any friend of mine begins to tell me that the late, or perhaps present, "depression" is just a slight touch of green-sickness in the great business cycle, or that all we need to return to the high pastures of "prosperity" is a little more confidence, or that everything would be all right in a twinkling if the Government would stop interfering, I know what I'm going to do. I'm going to say: "My dear friend, I wish I had your faith in simplicities. It would be really wonderful, and no one should like it more than I, if these things you say were true. But have you read Stuart Chase in the August Harper's?"

And he wouldn't have, and he would hide his face and go away in shame—or at least he ought.

• • • •

BUSINESS men should take the problem of prosperity in business terms. I confess I have never found it anything else but a matter of mordant risibility when I hear captains of industry trying to argue down the capital-goods predicament or the approaching leveling-off of the population curve by means of heady eloquence on "liberty," "rugged individualism," and "the spirit of the pioneer." You don't use a paint brush to stir soup.

And the soup, the hard, factual, statistical, undeniable soup we are in is the subject of Mr. Chase's essay on the jeopardy and imminent decline of that species, or part, of capitalism which he defines as: "A productive mechanism depending for its stability upon a fly-wheel of reinvestment in so-called capital goods." Unwary thinkers may jump to the conclusion that he points to the decline of all capitalism, all private property, all owning your own shirt, and is in fact raising the red flag. Of course Mr. Chase does not mean that. He means only the section of capitalism he defines.

And the figures and findings he produces are precisely the type with which a business man of any stature is accustomed to deal. They must be met half a thousand miles before there is any talk of "enterprise" or "constitutional rights." The graph line must come before Borah.

• • • •

MR. CHASE is so much of a crusader for his type of fact-facing thinking that he will really be glad if I brief his article here. Let me point out at once that the substance is not Mr. Chase's alone. His title, "Parade of the Gravediggers," refers to the conclusions, unanimous in effect of seven books by seven hard-thinking students of business. They are the type of men whom Big Business itself calls in when it wants to know how to run an industrial plant. They are for the most part industrial engineers, of a caliber to earn the respect of even the United States Chamber of Commerce.

And they all declare that we can't possibly go on much longer with traditional capitalism.

ARTHUR H. ADAMS ("a practical business man and a devout believer in the superiority of private enterprise to public") has worked out, after long research, a key ratio of economic activity. Assuming 100 as normal and the system in balance, 90 means danger and at 75 the system is unworkable. In no other depression has the ratio dropped so low. In 1934 it stood at 75, and Mr. Adams says it seems to be heading downward.

A. A. Berle, jr., and V. J. Pederson point out the suicidal danger in the rise of liquid capital. In 1880, 16 per cent of our wealth was in liquid form; in 1912, 20 per cent; in 1926, 28 per cent; in 1929, 38 per cent (and the market was shattered by a million liquid claims); in 1930, 40 per cent. The depression thrust it back to 34 per cent in 1933. But so large a proportion of liquid wealth "constitutes the most violent threat extant to personal property." Yet the business world holds liquidity desirable, and it is growing.

Prof. Walter Rautenstrauch conceives of the United States as one big factory—so much production, so many sales, so much overhead. Any factory manager knows that if overhead gets too high it wrecks his business. To be sure, the power age necessitates an increasing overhead, but is not our 230 per cent greater overhead in 15 years rather exorbitant? It, too, is getting heavier.

David C. Coyle has worked out an optimum rate for the investment of new capital in productive enterprise. We ran far over that rate in the 1920's. Now we must stay slowed down for a while. Any stable condition now must be based on a far larger proportion of national income given over to spending for consumer's goods—i. e., far higher wages and far less return on capital. But "sound finance" would not tolerate that. Deadlock, as Mr. Chase remarks. And capital goods even deader.

Bassett Jones points out the ominous gulf between the still-rising line of debt (the compounding advance of capital claims) and the leveling line of production. The only means of industrial health is to keep these lines together. They're getting further apart.

And Gardner C. Means shows how, in times of depression, maintenance of prices along with cut in production on the part of the "administrative competition" market (the huge corporations: steel products, autos, tires, etc.), in contrast with maintenance of production and cut in prices in the "free" market (food, textiles, oil, etc.), is a force "to aggravate fluctuations in economic activity and to prevent necessary readjustments."

• • • •

HAVE you had enough? Mr. Chase, naturally, goes into a great deal more detail, and you must look up his article to find the full grounds for these conclusions. Reading it, I began to get more and more gloomy.

But it occurs to me that even if I had got out of the right side of bed, in fact if all of us had done that and the world were rosy and the birds musical and the flowers fair and the breakfast coffee tasting like the nectar of the gods, even then these findings and figures would be flying along over our dear innocent heads like ravens of omen.

O'Connor Kin Is Paid $25,000 By Utility Firm

former Secretary of War, as the recipient of $25,000 in fees for help in the campaign against the utilities bill. It showed, too, that with an original investment of $1,800 a subordinate company of A. G. E. piled up a two-year profit of $1,046,000 through service fees charged the operating companies.

Hurley was out of the city and not expected back until today.

Charges "Circus Stuff."

After expressing surprise at $4,000 and $5,000 salaries paid A. G. E. officials with imposing titles, the committee finally struck pay dirt in Burroughs. He—rotund, ruddy and given to flares of resentment at the course and nature of the questioning—reported his salary was $60,000 and previously had been substantially more.

He accused the committee of indulging in "circus stuff" when it registered amazement that he, a vice president of the controlling company, could not recall the changes that had taken place in A. G. E.'s financial structure in recent years.

He challenged Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, to recite off-hand the "set-up of the Government's alphabetical agencies or of only the Tennessee Valley Authority."

Deadlock Prolonged.

Meanwhile, the House Rules Committee, also investigating lobbying on the utilities bill, postponed a scheduled hearing which had been officially described as probably productive of much headline material. It was said to deal with the activities of Bernard B. Robinson, of Chicago, in campaigning against the utilities measure.

The day brought no change in the solid deadlock gripping the Senate-House conference on the utilities bill. Senate conferees insisted that Ben Cohen, Administration aid, be admitted to the conference. House conferees steadfastly opposed this, terming it the equivalent of an Administratioh effort to lobby the conference.

But the center of the day's attention was the Senate committee's effort to locate Hopson and question him on A. G. & E.'s campaign against the legislation. Burroughs and other A. G. & E. officials denied any knowledge of his whereabouts.

Black Threatens Action.

Finally Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, announced:

"If he doesn't come here soon or inform the committee that he is coming we are going to turn over a subpena to every marshal in the United States and to every Government man in the United States to see if we can't get him here."

"I still believe that you'll hear from him," Burroughs said.

Hopson's connection with A. G. & E. was learned from Burroughs. His control lies in the class B stock of the company, all of which is held in a voting trust, Burroughs said, "for relatives of Mr. Hopson and J. I. Mange." Extended questioning revealed that this holding provided sufficient control to elect officers and a majority of the board of directors of the top holding company of the A. G. & E. system.

A. G. & E. Chief in Hospital.

Mange was identified as the president of the company. The committee has been seeking his appearance too, but investigators reported him a patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

Wasser, like Burroughs, was unable to recall the setup of the company and companies in any detail or to give payments made to certain of the subsidiary companies. His work, he said, was to head the accounting activities of the entire system.

Persistent questioning from Schwellenbach brought agreement that the cost of the fight on the utilities bill was passed down and "pro-rated" among the operating companies. Wasser denied, however, that the expenditures tended to increase rates to consumers or to maintain them unfairly at their present levels.

Black asked that the witness spread on the record the names of the cities in which the operating companies were located.

Huge Profit Defended.

"My God," retorted Wasser, "there are 2,000 of them."

Schwellenbach, reading from the record of the Federal Trade Commission's public utilities investigation, brought out the following:

That the E. M. Gilbert Engineering Corporation, owned by the system, supplied services to the operating companies on a basis of cost plus 7½ per cent and that on an investment of $1,800, for furniture and floating equipment, it realized a profit of $1,056,000 for 1928 and 1929.

"You should not judge by the amount charged, but by the services rendered," Wasser said.

Questioned about Hurley's activities, Burroughs said:

"He hasn't been doing anything except he appeared with me before the Rayburn (House Interstate Commerce) Committee.

Doubts Value Received.

He added that he had spent only one day before the committee, but had been here several days ahead of time and Hurley had gone over his statement with him.

"I don't think he did anything on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill except make appointments for me to appear," Burroughs said. "Col. Hurley did try persistently to get me an appointment to appear before the Wheeler (Senate Interstate Commerce) Committee."

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, asked how much time Hurley had spent on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

"Are you trying to figure if we got value received?" Burroughs asked. "I don't know. I consulted him quite a few times myself."

Stimson's Law Firm Sees Utility Bill Void

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 30.—An opinion by former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson's law firm which questions the constitutionality of the Wheeler-Rayburn bill was released tonight by the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, a public utilities holding company.

"If Congress has the power sought to be exercised in either the Senate or the House drafts of the Wheeler-Rayburn bill," said the opinion, prepared by the firm of Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts, "then there would be no business which would not be subject to the exercise of the power of Congress over interstate commerce, irrespective of how local such business might be."

Both drafts of the bill, the opinion said, "clearly offend against the constitutional division of powers between Congress and the States recently enunciated by the Supreme Court in the NRA case."

WASHINGTON'S FIRST COMPLETELY AIR CONDITIONED* HOTEL

ANNOUNCES SEVERAL Modern IMPROVEMENTS TO ITS MANY PATRONS

WASHINGTON is noted for its humid summer weather, yet thousands of visitors come each year to view the sights of their nation's capital. It is for their comfort, as well as the many Washingtonians who visit our dining room and lounge, that we have installed the finest air conditioning system available. We are proud to be the first hotel in Washington to provide this added comfort for our guests.

In addition to air conditioned guest rooms, we have provided circulating ice water in every room. This water is not too cold, but is kept at a constant healthful temperature.

Our dining room and lounge have been rearranged and redecorated.

Our cocktail lounge has been increased in size and remodeled to meet your demands.

CIRCULATING ICE-WATER NOW IN EVERY ROOM

Organization dinners and banquets may be held in either two large banquet or ballrooms, seating up to 300 persons. Also private rooms to accommodate small parties.

We invite you to inspect Washington's most comfortable hostelry, so that you may feel free to recommend it to your friends, knowing that they will be comfortable, regardless of the weather outside.

Richard S. Butler
MANAGER

AIR-CONDITIONED

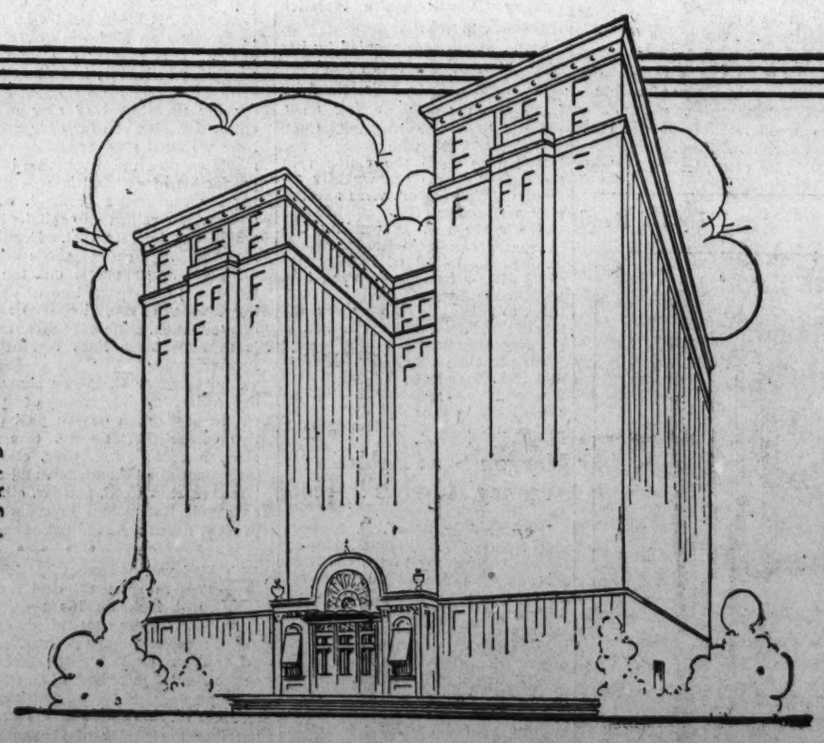
Do not confuse our air-conditioning system with the ordinary "cold air process." It is not cold air, but air which has been washed and the humidity taken from it . . . making it healthy as well as comfortable. We invite your inspection.

THE HAMILTON

14TH AND K STREETS N. W.



This popular lounge, now known as the Rainbow Room, has been made much larger. It is Washington's meeting place for a refreshing highball or cocktail, served from noon . . . with supper dancing from 10 o'clock. A new entrance has been made on the K Street side for the convenience of its many patrons.

Our dining room, unsurpassed for delicious food and efficient service, has been remodeled and redecorated. Many folks, not staying with us, find the Hamilton Dining Room a refreshing retreat. For example, our complete 7-Course Dinner, $1.00.

Hamilton Adds Rainbow Room To Night Spots

Milt Davis Starts Serious Work on His Piano at 10 o'Clock.

There's a new star in the after-dark firmament.

Tonight the Hamilton Hotel's Rainbow Room opens. As a matter of fact, you can sink down in one of the new Rainbow Room's very comfortable lounges and have a Martini any time after 12 noon.

But the premiere of Milt Davis and his Meyer Davis orchestra will come off in the vicinity of 10 o'clock tonight. Milt Davis . . . you will remember . . . is recognized as one of the leading pianists in these Eastern woods . . . and a very competent organist as well. Yes, he's the Davis who was associated with Garber.

The schedule for the new Rainbow Room is intimate music from 5 to 7 and 9 to 10 . . . then the Davis orchestra from 10 o'clock on.

* ** * *

To make room for the Capital's newest rendezvous . . . Manager Richard S. Butler has taken off a sizable chunk of the original Hamilton dining room . . . at the southwest corner of the building . . . which would be the precise corner where Fourteenth and K streets intersect.

If you wish . . . you may enter through the Hamilton lobby . . . or through the K street door, which even now is decorated with a neat new blaze of light to mark the spot.

Last night Boss Butler put the decorators out . . . and spread large quantities of delectable victuals over the new Rainbow Room . . . for a pre-showing of his new retreat to a sizable group of the Fourth Estate. Newspapermen are good judges . . . they liked it. You'll like it.

Advance notice: Vern Wilcox, featured acrobatic dancer at the World's Fair in Chicago . . . will open Saturday night at the Dude Ranch . . . for two weeks. Dolly Dare is back at the Ranch after her slight accident last Saturday. And Thursday night the Kiwanis Club of Prince Georges County will hold its regular "ladies' night" meeting at the Ranch with an interested eye on Sitty Bowman . . . who was vacationing from New York theatrical engagements . . . only to fall right into a Milton Barrett contract. Sitty is a . . . errr . . . movement dancer. Floor shows at 10:30 and 12:30 nightly.

The new bar at the Mayfair is what is commonly called a "honey" . . . They should push it around the floor along with Jack and Joe's piano . . . Imagine reaching in and mixing youself a Wildcat Special or something . . . from this bottle and that bottle . . . Speaking of bars, the customers at Club Habana have learned that Sebastian's mint juleps are an education . . . Sebastian buries the glass in crushed ice . . . and by peering over the bar you can watch the fascinating business of developing a julep from the ground up.

Have just completed an interesting bit of research at the Hangar Club . . . where things usually begin when other spots have stopped . . . By bringing your swim suit you can make a full 24-hour stand at the Hangar Club . . . First you have dinner and dance . . . then cool yourself in the night breezes until the impromptu entertainment begins about 11 . . . and about 2 get into the swing of the evening . . . By daybreak you're ready for a swim . . . which brings on a breakfast appetite . . . and top off the cycle by lazying on Bill Levy's sand beach soaking up sunshine all day long. After all . . . why take a vacation?

No one can lick Ramon on friendly greetings . . . A couple nights ago necks were craning at one of Ramon's Powhatan Roof guests . . . but it turned out he was a likeness of the Kingfish . . . a good one despite the fact he was a little taller . . . and less active . . . Griffith Farms is really one of Maryland's historic landmarks . . . but the original owner would be surprised to see the citizenry disporting themselves over the sweeping lawns . . . dancing to the haunting melodies of Griffith Farms' Hawaiians . . . dallying over cocktails at the "stand-up bar."

Another high-spot week for the Shoreham Terrace . . . with Audrey and Severin . . . smart dance team recently with Ferde Grofe's orchestra in the Windy City and Isham Jones in Philadelphia . . . They're midwesterners making a name for themselves in the East . . . Also at the Terrace: Mart May in a parade of toe dances from the minuet to the modern and Paul Pettit, who left Denmark only two years ago to startle us blase Americans with hand-balancing feats.

Unless time is coming at us differently from last summer . . . tomorrow is August 1 . . . and that means you have only two days left in which to see Gracie Barrie at Maryland Club Gardens . . . and the greatest army of talent undertaken in these many weeks at this popular nearby Maryland spot . . . including the Storm Sisters, who will show you that your interest in the Hula Hula is not gone . . . or at least your interest in the costumes of the islands . . . Howard Montgomery, who really taps on that platform across the pool . . . and Enriueta, very pretty in a gondola out on the water. (Personal note: La Barrie is worth the price of admission.)

Life is brutal at times. Last Friday in this very space . . . your humble scribe went into a lapse . . . and came out of it bearing the Pink Elephant into a hostelry far down the street . . . far from where the Pink Elephant is and has been for lo! these many months. I have been to the Harrington's Pink Elephant many times . . . and so help me, it was not because of having been there once too often that I dropped the Pink Elephant out of the Harrington. To prove it, my elephants always are green. Anyway, the Pink Elephant is still right there where it always has been—at the Harrington Hotel.

The Once-Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Babe's in the Wood.

Fore! Here comes George H. Ruth, the golfer!

* * * *

You remember George. He used to play baseball. "The Babe," they called him in those days. He was a hitter or something. Used to knock out those whatchamacallums. Yes, home runs. Played with the Giants for years. Or was it Brooklyn?

* * * *

Well, no matter. The Babe has turned golfer and there is a decided possibility that he may develop into one of the great drawing cards of the golf links. The Bambino finished far up toward the top of a recent tournament, beating some famous golfers. If he becomes any sort of threat in tournament golf they may have to build bleachers on golf courses.

* * * *

Mr. Ruth packed 'em in the ball parks of America and he may be the man to bring the turnstile, the hot dog and the fresh roasted peanut to the links of America.

* * * *

"Fresh roasted jumbo peanuts! . . . Y'can't enjoy the tournament without a bagga jumbo peanuts . . . Get a souvenir program! . . . Names and numbers of all the golfers! . . . Getta souvenir of the golf match! . . . Who wants a frankfurter and roll?"

* * * *

"Come on, Babe! . . . Slam one down the fairway! . . . Attaboy! . . . Remembah to keep your left arm straight, Bambino! . . . Wow! . . . There it goes! . . . Wotta ball! . . . 425 yards and only a mashie shot beyond the green! . . . Everybody up!

* * * *

"Nice work, Babe! . . . Take your time, boy! . . . Keep your head down! . . . It's only a chip and a putt! . . . Steady! . . . There it goes! . . . Yowie-ee-ee-ee! . . . It's going straight for the cup . . . It's still rolling! . . . Boy, what an approach! . . . It's in! . . . Aw, whatta you know! . . . It stopped on the lip of the cup!

* * * *

"Huh? . . . They put the cup in the worst part of the green! . . . Who? . . . The greens committee! . . . Throw the big bums out!"

* * * *

Believe it or not, this may be far from a flight of fancy. Ruth can drive a golf ball as far as they can be driven and if he steadies down into a good game, he will become one of the greatest attractions golf has ever known.

* * * *

He won't have to be a champion. The crowds will flock to see him and he will thrill 'em in a sand trap just as he thrilled 'em at the plate. The golf clubs of America are in none too good condition financially and the Babe may prove the man to help pay off the mortgages on some of those $1,000,000 clubhouses.

* * * *

Fore! Here comes Mr. Ruth! And officer! Drive that mob back! . . . They're violating the ground rules!

Endowed With Self-Restraint.

Representative Patton, of Texas, says all he got from that utilities man was a box of 5-cent cigars. How a man could smoke some of those 5-cent cigars and not favor the "death" penalty is what puzzles the country.

Federal Judge Frederick H. Bryant, who is sitting in that Malone, N. Y., case, appears to be a jurist who takes the curious attitude that racketeers deserve no better treatment than anybody else.

John Hays Hammond, jr., has invented a device to eliminate the scratching noise from phonograph records. That's bad news. The scratch was really the best part of many records.

Duke of Kent, Marina Get Yugoslav Gifts

Bochein, Yugoslavia, July 30 (AP). The Duke of Kent, with his duchess, the former Princess Marina of Greece, returned to the scene of his romance today to find himself the possessor of a new black vest with 24 silver buttons, a large red silk umbrella, high boots with tassels and a building site.

Marina had a thrill, too. She received a Slovenian costume, complete with shawl of a hundred colors, and jewelry.

The gifts came from the municipality of Bled. The building site was a broad hint that the couple establish a home here.

The site adjoins the villa of Prince Paul, head of the Yugoslavian regency, whose princess is Marina's sister. Prince Paul is their host.

District's Job Program Soon To Aid Relief

Allen to Launch Works Projects in August; Doles Are Cut.

Tacit Federal approval of the plan of Commissioner George E. Allen to launch the District works progress program on Thursday, despite lack of final instructions from Treasury officials, was seen in a reduced relief allotment by FERA for the District for August.

Estimates of the relief needs, submitted recently by District officials to FERA, called for $805,000 of Federal relief funds to supplement District funds. The allotment was cut to $400,000.

Informing District officials of their action, FERA officials explained they had cut the amount so sharply because of the expectation the works progress program would be launched on August 1 and steadily reduce the demands on the relief rolls from then on.

Seen Adequate.

Commissioner Allen said the reduced relief allotment probably would be adequate if nothing occurred to prevent launching and steady development of the works progress projects.

Persons given jobs on the works progress projects are to be taken from relief rolls. It is estimated that by fall between 15,000 and 16,000 persons will be taken off relief and put on works projects.

Highway projects already approved by Federal works authorities are to be the first launched. Five approved projects calling for employment of approximately 1,500 men are ready, it was said. Others which have been approved by Federal authorities bring the total jobs to 3,089 for a year at a total cost of $4,477,862.

Security Wage.

Persons employed on works progress jobs are to be paid a "security" wage which will range from $45 to $79 a month. This exceeds the relief payments to most of those on the rolls and is larger than the amounts paid those on work relief. The former payments averaged in June last $16.21, and the latter averaged $31.22, it was said.

Additional works progress projects, passed by the District approval board, headed by Capt. Howard F. Clark, Assistant Engineer Commissioner and deputy works progress administrator, went forward to Federal authorities for their approval yesterday.

Other projects are pending. The total of those submitted, including those already approved, called for expenditure of $8,287,144 and would, it is estimated, provide employment for 7,715 persons for a year.

CAGEY DEFENSE.

In defending against a contract in which there is a trump suit, it is seldom costly to lead a card which declarer must trump in his own hand. There are exceptions, however, principally when declarer is unable to lead out trumps and needs to make as many of his small trumps as possible by ruffing with them.

I am told of a hand which occurred in a tournament last month in which it behooved the defense to establish and cash their tricks rather than force the declarer.

North, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	1♠	Dbl.(1)	2♡(2)
Pass(3)	3♣	Pass	3◇
Pass	3♠	Pass	Pass
Dbl.(4)	Redbl.(5)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—Strangely enough, a takeout double is sometimes safer than a simple overcall, though the double supposedly shows a much stronger hand. South, by doubling, in this case hopes to find North with a diamond or club suit. If it turns out that North has no suit, South can always rescue with two hearts and be no worse off than if he had merely overcalled in the first place. This deal was played with match-point scoring. In Rubber Bridge the strength of the takeout double should not be tampered with in this manner.

2—With a two-suiter West fears a penalty pass of one spade and wants to get into a better suit, if possible.

3—North has a fair hand, but his only suit has already been bid.

4—This is the opportunity North has been waiting for.

5—East's hand is so strong that he is sure he will not be set more than one and has a good chance to make his contract.

The Play.

South opened the King of hearts, though the nine of spades would have been a better lead had he known of East's void. East ruffed the heart and took the Ace and King of clubs, after which he led a low club and trumped it with dummy's spade seven. North overtrumped.

If at this point North returns a heart in the hope that he will force declarer to ruff, the contract will be made. East will simply discard a diamond and South must win the Ace and thus establish dummy's heart Queen. On the heart Queen East will discard a club, which North or South would otherwise be able to ruff.

Instead of the heart North led back a diamond. This looked like a dangerous play, for if East held the Queen it would give him a free finesse. But North trusted South, who had doubled one spade, would have the diamond Queen. After the diamond lead, East could not have three spades, for he did not have enough trumps to draw out North's and therefore he could never make use of his established club suit.

Thaws Back From Oslo After Year

He Is on Leave From Post at U. S. Legation in Norway.

Couple Now Are Guests of Her Sister, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Two popular members of Capital society have returned to Washington for a visit after an absence of more than a year. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, who have been in Oslo, Norway, where the former was First Secretary of the United States Legation, are now the guests of Mrs. Eldridge Jordan at her home on Q street and plan to remain here until the end of the week.

Mrs. Thaw, who is a sister of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt and Lady Furness, spent several years in Washington when her husband was on duty at the State Department. Her dark, Spanish type is enhanced by the severely simple manner in which she arranges her black hair, and her creamy complexion is offset by the striking costumes of intense colors which she affects. Since leaving Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Thaw have been stationed in London, as well as Oslo, and have a host of friends in England and on the Continent, where

Mrs. Thaw spent most of her girl-

Mr. Thaw is at present on a leave of absence in this country, having reported to the State Department several days ago. On Sunday, he and Mrs. Thaw will leave on a motor trip, visiting Pittsburgh, Mr. Thaw's home town.

Mrs. Jordan is planning to remain in Washington through the summer, taking short trips to visit her friends at their summer homes, preferably at seaside places, as she is very fond of surf bathing.

On Friday Mrs. Thaw's sisters, Mrs. Vanderbilt and Lady Furness, will sail aboard the Europa to spend some time in Paris. Like their sister, they have lived abroad most of their lives, their father, the late Mr. Harry Morgan, having been for many years a member of the foreign service, so they will be swept into a whirl of entertaining the moment they set foot in Europe.

However, these two young women, internationally known for their beauty and charm (they are twins, and very much alike in appearance) are going to Europe, not for pleasure alone, but on business. They have opened an ultra-smart shop in New York and will attend the openings in Paris to see what they can find to bring back with them when they return early in September. It is a venture which is absorbing their interest, and their friends in this country have discovered that they prefer to plan for their shop rather than spend their idle hours in partying.

Landeses to Give Farewell Party

Bryans, Virginia Reynolds to Be Honor Guests.

Commander and Mrs. John S. Bryan and Miss Virginia Reynolds will be honor guests at a farewell party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Bert Ray Landes at their home, Belle Haven, in Alexandria. Guests will include Col. and Mrs. H. L. Cooper, Col. and Mrs. Julian Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde C. Lamond, Mr. and Mrs. R. Renna, of New York and Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. James F. Macoughtry.

Party Will Precede West Indies Cruise

Miss Dorothy Bibb, daughter of Mrs. M. M. Bibb, and Miss Martha Cannon, will sail Saturday night aboard the SS Columbia for the West Indies and South America. They will be entertained at a farewell party at the home of Miss Bibb Friday night.

Society Leaders Off for Europe On Normandie

Senor Terrassa, Mrs. Beale, Countess of Granard and the Edges Sail.

Prominent members of society are still Europe-bound, and the exodus to the Continent will probably continue into August. Sailing on the French Line flagship Normandie from New York at noon yesterday were Senor Don Juan Terrassa, Spanish commercial attache here, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, the Countess of Granard, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Evans Edge, and Mrs. Vincent Astor.

Senor Terrasa returned to Washington by plane several days ago from Mexico, where he had been visiting for two months. He will go to his native country for a vacation.

Mrs. Beale will arrive in Paris at a time when society there is looking forward to the most interesting wedding of the summer—the marriage of Miss Josette Laval, daughter of M. Pierre Laval, premier of France, to Count Rene de Chambrun, nephew of the French Ambassador to Spain, August 23. Mrs. Beale is a friend of the de Chambrun family.

The Countess de Granard, who is a sister of Mr. Ogden Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, is returning to her home in Ireland after a brief stay in this country.

Mr. and Mrs. Edge are returning to France, where Mr. Edge served as United States Ambassador a few years ago.

Dern, Family Planning Trip To Philippines

The Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern and their family are making plans to leave their home, Highwood, about the middle of September for the Philippines, where they will spend some time visiting in Manila.

The Secretary, Mrs. Dern, and their son, Mr. James Dern, who is spending his vacation with his family, will leave by train for the West Coast. They will stop in Salt Lake City en route to San Francisco, where they will spend several days before boarding a Navy cruiser.

In the meantime Mrs. Harry Baxter, eldest daughter of the Secretary and Mrs. Dern, and Miss Betsy Dern, will go to New York, where they will remain a few days before sailing for the Canal Zone. They expect to visit friends in Colon and Balboa, who will show them the many interesting sights of that famous old section, and they will also be entertained at Union Club. They will then board the Army transport Grant and continue up the West Coast and then across to Hawaii, where they will spend several hours in Honolulu and a short motor trip through the country.

Then Mrs. Baxter and Miss Dern will continue aboard the transport to Manilla, P. I., where they will join their parents for a several weeks visit.

S. Pinkney Tuck Here To Pass Several Days

The first secretary of the United States Embassy in Paris, Mr. S. Pinkney Tuck, who arrived in New York several days ago, came to Washington yesterday to spend several days. Mr. Tuck is on a short holiday and will return to Europe in the near future.

Lucylle Austin Becomes Bride Of Mr. Hepburn

Ceremony Is Performed in Presbyterian Church of Chestnut Hill, Pa.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 30.—Miss Lucylle Austin, daughter of Mr. Richard L. Austin, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., was married this afternoon to Mr. Philip Hepburn, of Haverford, Pa., son of Vice Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn. The ceremony was performed in the Presbyterian Church of Chestnut Hill by the Rev. Corydon C. Tyler.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a robe de style of ivory tone tulle made over ivory satin with a simple tight-fitting bodice and a long, full skirt. Her veil of rose point lace, which extended from the shoulders, was held in place by sprays of orange blossoms, and was arranged with a close-fitting cap of tulle, fastened with a double band of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white bouvardia and gardenias.

Mrs. Austin Battles, of Philadelphia, was matron of honor. She wore a gown of deep apple green embroidered mousseline de soie, fashioned with a voluminous cape extending to the hips. A large leghorn hat, trimmed with green ribbon, and a bouquet of yellow and orange Japanese lilies completed her costume.

The flower girl, Lorraine Lukens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis N. Lukens, jr., of Chestnut Hill, wore a yellow organdie dress with a leghorn hat trimmed with yellow flowers. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of Claudius Pernet roses and delphinium.

Mr. Arthur J. Hepburn, jr., of Baltimore, was best man for his brother, and the ushers included Mr. Charles J. Hepburn, jr., Mr. Thomas Hart, and Mr. Philip Dechert, of Philadelphia; Mr. Bladen Lowndes, jr., of Baltimore; Mr. Charles Hall, of Cambridge, Mass., and Mr. Edward A. Powell 3d, of New York.

A reception followed the ceremony at Bal-Na-Crai, home of the bride's father.

Edwin C. Wilson Home After Leave

Will Resume Duties in State Department Unit.

Mr. Edwin C. Wilson, chief of the Latin American division of the State Department, who has been on a several months' leave of absence, has returned to his home in Spring Valley and will resume duties at the department.

During his absence, Mr. Joseph E. McGurk, assistant chief of the division, has been acting chief.

Carrie Clagett To Be Married On September 7

Wedding to Floyd Lankford, Jr., to Take Place in Collington, Md.

Holy Trinity Church in Collington, Md., will be the scene of an interesting wedding September 7 when Miss Corrie Clagett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fielder Bowie Clagett, of Locust Hill, Prince Georges County, Md., becomes the bride of Mr. Floyd Lankford jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Lankford, of Baltimore, Md.

The Rev. Carl E. Grammar, D.D., of St. Stephen's Church, of Philadelphia, who is a great-uncle of Miss Clagett, will perform the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Frederick Cooke, D.D., rector of Holy Trinity Church. A reception at the Clagett home in Upper Marlboro, Md., will follow the ceremony.

As her attendants the bride-elect has selected her cousin, Miss Silvine Clagett, as maid of honor, and Miss Sarah Page Claggett, her sister, as a special maid of honor. Of the six bridesmaids, four are cousins of Miss Clagett. They are Miss Margaret Claire Duckett, of Mitchellville, Md.; Miss Elizabeth Jacobsen, of Towson, Md.; Miss Juilette Bowie, of Landover, Md. and Miss Alice Carter Bowie, of Baltimore and Mitchellville. The other attendants will be Miss Eloise Sasscer, of Upper Marlboro, and Miss Frances Stanley, of Hyattsville, Md.

Mr. Richard Lankford, of Baltimore, will be his brother's best man. Announcement of the ushers will be made later.

Matilda Garner Is Wed at Home In Jeffress, Va.

She Becomes the Bride of Grafton Greenlaw, of Fredericksburg.

Leesburg, Va., July 30.—A wedding of interest to a wide circle of friends in Northern Virginia took place Saturday evening at 10 o'clock at Riverview Farm, Jeffress, Va., home of Mrs. Pattie F. Garner,, when her daughter, Miss Matilda Garner, became the bride of Mr. Grafton Narcessor Greenlaw, of Fredericksburg, Va., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Greenlaw.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. D. Poe, of Oxford, N. C., before an improvised altar of cedar. Large baskets, filled with white, pink and yellow gladioli, completed the house decorations.

Before the ceremony, Miss Laura V. Chandler, of Virgilina, Va., sang.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her mother, wore a gown of white chiffon. Her long tulle veil was caught into cap effect with clusters of orange blossoms, and she carried lilies of the valley and white roses.

Miss Frances Garner, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a lovely gown of pink mousseline de soie and carried snapdragons and Shasta daisies. Miss Julia Afina Yancy, of Bakerville, Va., was the bride's other attendant.

Mr. Hunter Greenlaw, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man.

A reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony, when the couple were assisted in receiving by the former's mother, who wore a gown of white crepe; Mrs. Raeford Rockwell, of Chase City, Va., sister of the bride, dressed in flowered chiffon; Miss Kathleen Goodloe, of Fredericksburg, Va., in a blue organdy frock, and Mrs. J. W. Pleasants, of Virgilinia, Va., in flowered chiffon.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Greenlaw left for a wedding trip to the New England States, the bride wearing a brown crepe ensemble with white accessories. They will reside in Fredericksburg.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Miss Helen Ricks, of Blacksburg, Va.; Miss Elizabeth S. Carmichael, Lexington, Va.; Miss Mildred Russell and Miss Wilma Garner, Leesburg, Va.; Miss Kathleen Goodloe, Fredericksburg, and Mr. and Mrs. George Pugh and Miss Lillie Pugh, of Danville, Va.

Washingtonians Attend London Ball, Guests Including the Prince of Wales

Mrs. Johnston Occupied Place at Hostess' Table.

From London come accounts of the most brilliant season in years; Americans in great numbers entertaining in smart hotels, and Americans who live in London entertaining the visitors at gay parties.

One of the gayest balls of the season was that given recently by Mrs. Beatrice Cartwright at the Carlton Hotel. Six hundred guests danced from 11 until 5 o'clock. At 5 o'clock breakfast was served and the party went on again. At the hostess' table were the Prince of Wales, a great favorite with American hostesses; Mrs. Ormond-Lawson Johnston, the former Mrs. Lyman B. Kendall, of Washington, and Mrs. Ernest Simpson, the former Miss Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, a niece of Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington. Members of the United States Embassy staff also were present, including Mr. Marschal Johnson. From Washington there also were Mr. Clarence Hewes, who sailed for Europe on the maiden return trip of the Normandie, and who will continue a trip around the world before returning to the Capital in the autumn; Miss Caroline Nash, who spends a part of each winter here, and Mr. William Taylor.

Johnstons Going to Spa.

Mrs. Johnston, who is probably the most popular American hostess in London, and Mr. Johnston will leave London shortly for Marienbad, where they will spend several weeks at the famous spa. On their return to England they will move from their apartment at 7 Park lane to the home in Mayfair which they have recently purchased.

Mr. Hewes recently entertained at a luncheon at Claridges, when his guests included Mrs. Arthur Glasgow, whose daughter, Miss Marjorie Glasgow, was married yesterday to Mr. Ambrose Christian Congreve at St. Clement Dane's Church. Lady Ross, a frequent visitor in Washington; Mr. Arthur Bradley Campbell, son of the Marchioness of Huntley, and Mrs. W. Harry Brown. Mrs. Brown and her son, Mr. William H. Brown, have been in England for some time and will visit on the Continent before returning to this country.

Miss Nash, Mr. Hewes Among 600 Dancers at Carlton Hotel.

Tea at House of Commons.

Mr. Durham Rodgers, who has recently returned to Washington after spending two months in London, tells of an interesting tea which he attended on the terrace of the House of Commons. Mr. Rodgers' host was that brilliant member of Parliament and crack squash player, Capt. Victor Cazalet, and his sister, Miss Thelma Cazalet, also a member of Parliament, who visited in Washington last year. Among the guests that afternoon were the former prime minister of Great Britain, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, fresh from her tennis victory. Also Lady Davis, of Paris, and the young Princess Bismarck, and two members of the Harvard tennis team. Lady Astor stopped to chat with the party.

Beautiful Eyes Depend on Care And Treatment

More Attention Than Ever Is Now Focused on Allurement.

By Dudley Harmon.
Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

THE EYES have it this season! Never before has so much attention been focused on their care and treatment.

Tired, dull eyes, with a network of wrinkles around them, will make any girl, no matter how pretty, look lifeless and weary. So let's set to work and see what can be done to improve their appearance. It's important to keep them clear and bright and to nourish the skin around them to keep it firm, smooth and youthful. Then, much can be done by the discreet use of cosmetics to emphasize the color of the eyes, give them expression and increase their apparent size.

A well-established cosmetics house has a complete line of beauty and health treatments for the eyes which would be well worth your while to see. It's simply amazing what one or all of these various preparations can accomplish in the way of toning up and beautifying not only the eyes themselves but also the skin around them. First on the list comes a balm, which, used regularly, will strengthen the eyes and keep them clear and sparkling.

SEND a two-cent stamp today for a resume of summer aids to beauty recommended by this column in the past two weeks. Names of shops where products may be purchased are given in this leaflet. Address Miss Harmon in care of The Post.

And here's an important point: For swollen lids and puffiness under the eyes, bathe them with a pad of cotton saturated with this preparation. After several applications you will see the puffs and swelling gradually go down until the eyes are back to normal again.

Wrinkles and crowsfeet do more than anything else to give one a tired, harassed and old expression. And they're so unnecessary! Consistent treatment with a special eye wrinkle cream put out by this house will soften laugh lines, frown lines and even crowsfeet. Just smooth a little on the eyelids and under the eyes, molding gently from inner corners outward. A jar of this magic cream costs only $1.50.

Most women depend to a great extent for their charm on eye make-up. And they are right for, used judiciously, it undoubtedly gives one great glamour and mystery. Remember that the first rule is that eye make-up must be invisible. A little eyeshade smoothed lightly on the upper lid will enhance the color of the eyes and increase their apparent size. Furthermore, it is not of the cheap variety which makes a person look loud and theatrical. It comes in black, brown, blue, violet and green and costs $1.

The lashes, too, must have their share of attention. Few things will make a man's heart beat faster than a maze of long and tangled eyelashes looking up into his face. To increase their length and darken them, apply just a little of the mascara put out by this house to the lower lashes. Complete with mirror and eyelash brush (give your lashes length and sheen by brushing them regularly) this comes in an attractive black enamel brush for $1. The shades are suited to all colorings, as they come in green, blue, brown, violet and black.

Fitted Bag Is Roomy.

THIS SAME STORE has some grand fitted overnight bags—which look like a million dollars and cost only $22.50. It is lined with black silk stitched in various colors and is very, very chic indeed. The enamel fittings come in brown and ivory, powder blue and gold, and green and gold. The items include a hair brush, clothes brush, various bottles for your creams and lotions and a mirror. You can use all these on your dressing table when the suitcase is not in use. Although it's called an overnight bag, it's so roomy you can really get a lot more in besides a nightgown.

Call Dudley Harmon, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Lack of Skilled Workers in Some Lines Is Found in Missouri Job Survey

Mrs. Charley Tidd Cole, in charge of women's activities for the Works Progress Administration in Missouri, discusses plans and projects for guiding women back into industry with Miss Mary Weber, who directs women's work for the WPA in Alabama.

Program of Training Women for Employment Is Described by Director of State Activity; Alabama Projects Aid Needy Artists.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

TRAINING WOMEN to be absorbed back into industry and back into the normal channels of employment in the business world is an undertaking now being successfully carried out by Mrs. Charley Tidd Cole, State director of women's activities for the Works Progress Administration in Missouri.

In Washington to confer with Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, assistant administrator of the Works Progress Administration, in charge of women's activities, Mrs. Cole yesterday told something of the projects now well under way in her State.

Mentioning that she and her staff had made a special effort to "build projects in line with the demand," she pointed out that the chief difficulty was in training inexperienced and unskilled individuals, who comprise the majority of those still on relief rolls.

Occupations Surveyed.

"Trained workers are disappearing from our lists," she said, "but the unskilled women must be given instruction in lines of work for which there will be openings in the future."

With this in view, relief heads in Missouri have made a survey of occupations to determine which ones are overcrowded, and which ones will need employes.

As a result of the survey, it has been discovered that while the supply is much greater than the demand in some lines of work, there is an actual dearth of skilled workers for others.

"There are still too many stenographers, saleswomen, and factory workers for the available jobs in Missouri," Mrs. Cole said, "but there aren't nearly enough home laundresses, trained cooks and maids. Our chief problem is guiding women into channels of work where they can find employment."

She pointed out that there are approximately 21,000 women certified for work on the relief rolls in Missouri, and she explained that in order to be "certified for work" a woman had to be the economic head of a family, or unattached—with no means of support, or a widow with dependents.

Weaving Projects Popular.

Weaving projects are proving particularly popular with women on relief rolls, she said, as well as work in sewing rooms. In connection with the latter she mentioned that community centers had, in some cases, developed around the "Type 2" sewing rooms (where any woman on the relief roll could come and sew under supervision).

"We have discovered that women who come to the sewing rooms generally begin to look to the supervisor for advice on almost every subject connected with homemaking," Mrs. Cole said. "The supervisor, then, soon finds herself in the position of a sort of community center director and the sewing room itself becomes a center of community life."

Mrs. Cole was also enthusiastic about the libraries that had resulted from relief projects. She explained that entertainments were frequently given by those on relief rolls, the admission to which would be a book.

"In this way three or four thousand volumes—enough to start a library—were collected," she said.

Miss Mary Weber, in charge of women's activities of the Works Project Administration in Alabama, is also in Washington to confer with Mrs. Woodward. Discussing her work she reported that a project for the employment of artists, who are on relief, is in progress in Alabama where 11 painters and sculptors are employed. Eligibility is determined by a State advisory committee and the work produced by the artists is the property of colleges, high schools and grade schools. Serving on the committee are the directors of the State museum and three artists. Materials are purchased by tax supported institutions (schools, colleges and city halls) and the finished product becomes the property of the institution that finances materials.

"One artist on relief has made a miniature, now in the State musem, and some of his work received recognition at the Century of Progress," Miss Weber said. "Another is making plaques of famous men in Alabama history for the State department of archives and history. Water colors are being painted for the public schools and one artist is doing a series of six murals depicting "The Cotton Scene." This will hang on the walls of the home economics department of the University of Alabama. One of the women working on this project has two paintings now in the permanent collection in the Luxemborg Gallery."

Miss Weber further explained that another group is employed in making pottery out of native clay.

"Its first contribution will be cereal bowls and jugs to the nursery schools of the State," she said.

One of the most interesting projects in Alabama was planned by a land owner, according to Miss Weber.

"He permits 50 colored women, who are on relief rolls, to go into the field and cut cane for making chairs, settees, and baby cribs," she said. "They were unskilled in the beginning, but he taught them how to make this rustic furniture, which is sent to the homes of persons on relief and to the State Industrial School for Girls."

ECONOMY MENUS for TODAY

By Dorothea Duncan.

Balanced Menus Suggested for Housewives Seeking to Save Money.

AN AFTER VACATION pocketbook is as flat as the proverbial pancake. It is up to the housewife to do something about it, and she can if she starts in at the right angle. Let's cut the cost of our menus. It isn't as difficult as it sounds, even if you have a family of young huskies to feed.

There are plenty of attractive fresh fruits and vegetables in season and they are moderately priced. Meat can be dispensed with once or twice a week, and its absence will go unnoticed if you choose your meat substitutes wisely. Cheese, eggs and milk will give adequate protein and each of these articles lends itself to many pleasing disguises.

Top milk can be used for cereal and fruit or berries as well as cream. Be sure though if you are feeding children to include the skim milk from the bottom of the bottle in cooked dishes or beverages for them, as it is absolutely necessary that they should consume a quantity of whole milk daily.

Today's menus are planned for the woman who is trying to save money and at the same time offer her family a well-balanced diet.

BREAKFAST

Stewed fresh blackberries
Dry cereal with top milk
French toast Currant jelly
Coffee Milk (for children)

LUNCHEON

Girl Loves "Very Fine Boy" to Whom Friends Object; Asks Advice.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWO TH: For a year I have been in love with a very fine boy. He has a substantial position and plenty of ambition. He has charm and appeal and is liked by everyone.

• • • •

I go out with him only occasionally, due to the fact that he works very hard and has little time off from his job. My friends object to my going out and being seen places with him, because he is Jewish. They say I am ruining my reputation. I can not understand their attitude.

• • • •

Will you be kind enough to advise me as to what to do in this case? It is most puzzling to me. Thank you sincerely. K. C.

Think for Yourself.

DEAR K. C.: In a matter so intimate as choosing between one's friends, on the one hand, and the man one loves, on the other, it seems to me one should follow the dictates of one's own intelligence; that one must be guided by an intuitive divination of what is best to do.

• • • •

It may be your friends are persons with a decidely provincial social outlook. They may look with primitive distrust and suspicion upon all whose traditions and creed differ in the slightest degree from their own conception of what is orthodox. I can think of no other explanation for their belief that you are ruining your reputation by associating with this "very fine (Jewish) boy," provided he is as admirable and fine as you testify; and provided he has proven himself to be to you a sincere and honorable friend.

• • • •

There is a possibility, of course, that your friends are seeing the situation more objectively than you. Because you are in love, you may rationalize out of existence any evidences of neglect, and magnifying any trifling attentions far beyond their importance. You may condone this man's intermittent courtship on the ground that he has work to do; your friends may see it as the trifling of a philanderer.

• • • •

However, if your friends are so biased as to hold the notion that to be a Jew is to be socially unacceptable, I believe you can well afford to ignore their attitude. You will involuntarily do so, if you are a person of character and common sense, capable of making a discriminating choice of friends. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

1. How did the expression "Hobson's choice" originate?
2. What is understood by a Scotch marriage?
3. What are the "eyes" of a ship?

Check Here.

1. A choice without an alternative. The expression is said to have originated in the practice of an English livery-stable keeper, Thomas Hobson, who would allow a patron to take only the horse nearest the stable door.
2. A marriage by mutual agreement betwen a man and a woman without being formally solemnized. Such a marriage is recognized by Scotch law.
3. In nautical language, the foremost part in the bows of a ship.

Beauty Parlor for Tahiti.

Up to now, women in Tahiti have had to do their permanent waving and nail polishing at home, but it won't be that way always, according to a report of the Associated Press. Yesterday plans were completed for the first beauty parlor on the island. It will be located in Papeete.

Poetry Bookshop Closes.

Proof that a bookshop can't prosper on the sale of verse alone is borne out by the fact that the Poetry Bookshop, in London, recently closed its doors. Opened by Harold Munro in 1913, the little shop struggled to weather the financial storm for twenty-odd years without even a modicum of prosperity.

3 Grand Prizes To Be Awarded In New Contest

Weekly Recipe Competition Resumed; 12 Winners to Get $1 Each.

TWELVE $1 prizes a week will be awarded in The Post's new recipe contest. But that's not all. At the end of two months three grand prizes will be awarded to the three women who have contributed the most outstanding recipes during this time. The Washington Post and the National Electric Supply Co. will provide three beautiful gifts for three lucky women. A Sunbeam mix master will be awarded as first prize, a smartly styled G. E. Hotpoint coffee maker as second prize and a Dominion sandwich grill, one of those indispensable appliances that will cook waffles, bacon, chops, etc., right at the table, as third prize.

This means that every Post reader has an opportunity of winning a $1 prize and the chance of being awarded one of the grand prizes at the conclusion of the contest.

Get busy and enter your first recipe right away. The text of the contest this week is quick breads. This includes all breads that are made without yeast or yeast powder. The winning recipe may be for muffins, gems, popovers, biscuits, or their numerous variations.

Be sure to mail your recipe by Friday at the latest, for all recipes to be judged for awards must be received by Saturday. The prize winners and winning recipes will appear in Tuesday's edition of The Post. The new contest subject for next week will be announced at the same time.

Anyone may compete except Washington Post employes. Simply write out your recipe and send it to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post.

When you send in a recipe this week, also include a stamp for one of the three helpful bulletins that Dorothea Duncan is offering her readers: Summer drinks, sour milk and cream recipes, and a list of brand names of prepared foods which reduce kitchen labor. Be sure to state which bulletin you would like to have.

WHAT TODAY MEANS

"Leo."

If July 31 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 12:15 p. m. to 2:15 p. m. and from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m.

People of a contrary disposition are likely to find this a rather trying day, as level-headed persons will not be inclined to humor them. It might be will to remember, "haste makes waste," so be deliberate in your movements, if you wish to save yourself many useless steps. In business try to adjust yourself to any unexpected change in your daily routine, should the occasion call for it, without displaying any signs of irritation, otherwise a disagreeable argument might arise.

If a woman and July 31 is your birthday, you are too frequently prompted by a spirit of restlessness, and headlong energy than is desirable for the safeguarding of your personal interests, so try to curb these traits. All forms of amusements, especially outdoor sports, should find favor in your eyes. Since you find your greatest relaxation in the proper sort of diversions, it is right that you should seek them. It will be wise for you to establish a rule never to make a promise unless you are confident it can be kept, otherwise you may find yourself continuously in hot water. Needlework, pastry and candy making, poetry and prose writing, stenography and office clerical employment, are lines of activity in which you should do well. Marriage may solve most of your problems.

Puerperal Fever Precautions Outlined

Careful Examinations by a Competent Physician Are Advised.

Hygienic Surroundings During Convalescence Important.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

LONG before William Harvey discovered the circulation of the blood, puerperal fever, or as it was commonly called, childbed fever, was a much-feared complication of pregnancy. Medical history records thousands of epidemics of this vicious infection as well as the struggles of the early obstetricians against its ravages.

Probably the most powerful essay from the pen of that distinguished physician, Oliver Wendell Holmes, was his polemic on the contagiousness of puerperal fever. The essay was read before a small medical society in Boston in February, 1843, and laid down rules for the conduct of confinement which, if strictly followed by the physicians of the day, would have resulted in the saving of thousands of lives. Needless to say, as with many new procedures, the medical profession was slow in adopting Holmes' principles. As the science of bacteriology vindicated his position, Holmes must have taken great pride in later years in writing ("The Professor at the Breakfast Table"): "By the permission of Providence I held up to the professional public the damnable facts connected with the conveyance of poison from one young mother's chamber to another's—for doing which humble office I desire to be thankful that I lived, though nothing else good should ever come of my life. I had to bear the sneers of those whose position I had assailed, and, as I believe, have at last demolished, so that nothing but the ghosts of dead women stir among the ruins."

There are a few conditions in which a temperature may follow delivery which are not related to septic infection (childbed fever). For example, many cases will show a rise in temperature of one or two degrees. This may be due to bruising along the birth canal, to deficient drainage, and not infrequently to intestinal stagnation. Infections of the urinary tract, in the breasts, or about the nipples, in the respiratory tract, sinuses, etc., may be attended with fever. No one of these, however, is a true septic infection and none should prove in the least degree alarming.

Childbed sepsis, on the other hand, is frequently insidious in its onset. Two or three days after delivery the patient may feel ill and the first obvious symptom may be sensations of chilliness or even a protracted chill. This is followed by a rise in temperature that may be fluctuating. The pulse is relatively rapid. The patient appears quite ill, gives a picture of great apprehension and usually of mental depression. All this means that some virulent organism has gained access to the uterus and is probably spreading through the lymph channels of the pelvis to adjacent structures. Extension of the infection to the peritoneum (peritonitis) is marked by spreading pain with great tenderness over the abdomen. Sometimes large vessels are involved in the inflammation and general septicemia (living bacteria in the blood) still further complicates the situation.

Prevention lies first in frequent, careful examinations by a competent physician during the months of pregnancy. Every sign of acute disease must receive attention. The patient must be instructed in good hygiene and warned against the use of vaginal douches. The mother should be attended by a competent physician who is himself clean and who will use every modern precaution against infection. And clean, hygienic surroundings for both mother and baby during convalescence should be the rule. During active confinement and subsequent thereto no one who has an acute or chronic cold or other type of respiratory disease, an inflamed wound, or infectious disease should be permitted to come into contact with the patient.

Childbirth must be surrounded with so many safeguards that untoward complications will be reduced to a minimum. Life presents no greater tragedy than the sacrifice of a young mother from causes that could have been avoided had proper precautions been observed.

Roads Chief Denies Move To Aid G.O.P.

Dr. Tabler Says Further Democratic Ousting Not Contemplated.

30 Witnesses Tell Quiz Maryland Highways in Poor Condition.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., July 30.—Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the State roads commission, today denied from the witness stand in circuit court here that it was the intention of the commission to replace Democratic road officials in various counties of the State with Republicans.

His testimony was given in the suit in which the Cecil County commissioners are contesting the dismissal of Joseph T. Richards as county road supervisor. Richards, a Democrat, was dismissed by the State commission and William M. Cameron, a Republican, was given the place.

Prior to Dr. Tabler's testimony today, the roads commissioner offered more than 30 witnesses who testified that the county roads were in poor condition. Last week, counsel for the county commissioners offered a score or more of witnesses who testified that the condition of the roads was improved under Richards' regime.

Democrats Retained.

Dr. Tabler, in response to a question from counsel for the roads commission, testified that the commission had retained Democrats in five counties — Caroline, Queen Annes, Kent, Frederick and Charles.

In response to another direct question, Dr. Tabler replied that it was the intention of the roads commission to put all roads in Cecil County under supervision of one man "if the court did not interfere." Richards supervised only county roads, another official supervising maintenance of State roads in the county.

Dismissal Follows Study.

The commission chairman testified that Richards' dismissal followed a study of the cost of maintenance of county roads. Dr. Tabler said that his study had convinced him that the condition of the county roads was "out of proportion" to the cost of maintaining them.

He said that the cost in Cecil County had been $156 per mile, which, he said, was considered too high. Citing cost figures for other counties, he said that the cost in Queen Annes County was $112, in Talbot, $123; Caroline, $91, and in St. Marys, $96.

The court hearing into the matter will be continued tomorrow.

Tour Date Is Set By Horticulturists

Hampshire County Area Will Be Visited.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 30.—The summer field meeting and tour of the West Virginia Horticulture Society will be September 4, the executive committee of the society decided at a meeting here yesterday.

The tour will include Hampshire County, W. Va., orchards, passing through the Levels section in the morning, lunch at the Sunrise Orchard packing house, near Romney; the Jersey Mountain Orchard and the Edward Leatherman's mountain plantings, 18 miles beyond Romney, at Rada, where some outstanding adaptations of orchard practice will be observed. Dr. E. C. Auchter, Washington, and former Gov. John J. Cornwell, of West Virginia, have been tentatively scheduled to make brief talks.

The society will ask Representative Jennings Randolph to find out from the Interstate Commerce Commission the expiration dates of the "emergency rates" of $1.25 into the East, and $1 into the Midwest and South, granted to Northwest apple growers. The $1.25 rate was granted nearly two years ago.

Williamsburg, Restored, Held Above Wealth

Virginian Pays High Tribute to Rockefeller, Jr., in Radio Talk.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, July 30.—High tribute was paid to John D. Rockefeller, jr., for the restoration of Williamsburg by Wilbur C. Hall, Virginia conservation chairman, in a radio address here tonight.

Rockefeller, Hall said in tracing the historical development of Virginia, "has restored this ancient seat of colonial rule from the wreck of dead years very much as the City of Pompeii has been reclaimed from the lava and ashes of Vesuvius."

The Williamsburg area, the conservation head declared, "fraught with the destinies of the young Republic, unfolds as a living page of history beneath the eye of the interested and entranced visitor." Besides Williamsburg he included Jamestown nad Yorktown in the "cradle of the Nation."

"With her traditional background and Old World culture, Virginia offers to the world today an ancient loveliness unimpaired, together with every modern advantage," Hall said. He outlined the scenic attraction of the State and asserted the skyline drive, "or artificial construction," ranks rightly with the natural and other wonders of the Old Dominion.

"Virginia may never have the largest population, the greatest number of industries or the most wealth, as wealth is measured, but she has and will have the greatest treasure of enduring values," the speaker continued. "It is something apart from material things, something that cannot be acquired by effort—it is atmosphere."

Folk Festival Due In Virginia Aug. 14

White Top Conference to Convene at Marion.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Marion, Va., July 30.—The Southwestern Virginia towns of Marion, Wytheville and Abingdon are lending their aid to plans for the White Top folk festival events scheduled for August 14-17.

John Powell, noted Richmond composer-pianist, who has been identified with the festival since its start, has been engaged by the Helen Trinkle Music Club of Wytheville to appear in recital there on the evening of August 14, when a group of compositions based on native folk modes or themes will be offered.

The White Top Folk Conference will meet in connection with the summer session of the Southeastern Folklore Society at Marion College, Marion, August 15.

The Barter Theater of Abingdon, Va., under the direction of Robert Porterfield, will give the premier performance of a folk play, "The Hill Between," by Lulu Vollmer, at Marion, on the evening of August 15. The author will be present for this first performance, which will include local folk musician dancers in addition to the cast.

Dr. Kincaid Gives Praise To Roosevelt

Professor Finds His Status Now Stronger Than Ever Before.

Sees Some Measure of Recovery; Criticizes Monetary Policy.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 30.—In an appraisal of the present administration given at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club, Dr. Elbert A. Kincaid, professor of commerce and business administration at the University of Virginia, asserted that the present position of President Roosevelt is even stronger than before.

There has been some measure of recovery either because of or in spite of the New Deal, said the speaker. The codes have been bitterly assailed by the opposition as the cause of delayed recovery, but they exist no more. The President can say to the opposition, "What have you to offer better than the codes which you are willing to submit to the people at the next election?" To this question, they have as yet formulated no answer and none will be presented.

Main Issue Overlooked.

With all of his mistakes, declared Dr. Kincaid, Roosevelt was nearer right than the opposition at any time and is now.

After criticising the weak monetary policy of the country and expressing his resentment of price-fixing under codes, the speaker declared that the main issue must not be forgotten.

"The bulk of our wealth is concentrated in about 200 corporations. We have a vast unemployed proletariat, people who vote, but own nothing and have little hope of owning anything. In Italy the former control the government, in Russia the latter.

"Th President has asked the people to place in their Government, by lawful methods, control over both sets of forces. If they knew that the control was in the Government, then neither side could hope to dominate the other, hence we need not fear Fascism nor Communism.

"Every time the depression deepened the number of radicals and the demand for radical legislation increased. The President has given ground to radicals, but he has held them in check.

"The great weakness of the opposition, the Hoover and the Grass-Roots philosophy, consists in this: If private enterprise is to continue private, it must make the full dinner pail a reality which does not fade away in a crisis.

Must Pay Price.

"In other words, capitalism must not expect the Government to pull it out of each collapse at the cost of the whole people without paying the price—greater power to the people.

"If private capital is to be concentrated more and more in a few hands, while the vast majority have no property and yet vote, then private capital must provide against participation in great wars and industrial maladjustments, for the American proletariat is too well educated to starve for the sake of States rights, or private property, or any other old-time ideal.

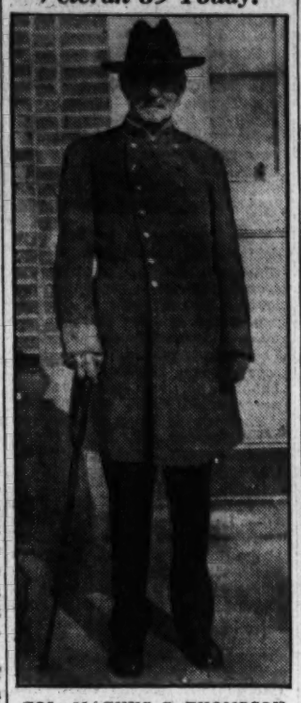
"The President has tried to steer a middle course between Communism and Fascism, and to do this the Federal Government had to exercise vast powers, since no State nor aggregate of States could deal with the situation. If we do not want the Federal Government to have such vast powers or to employ them, then we must have an economic system that does not collapse because of great wars or other disturbing forces. The choice is so plain that one can read as he runs."

Horses Trample Boy Working on Harness

Frederick, Md., July 30 (AP).—Trampled by a team of horses Monday while trying to untangle their harness, 13-year-old Roland Gosnell, jr., of Taylorsville, is in a serious condition in Frederick City Hospital.

The boy is reported to be suffering from chest injuries and possible internal injuries. The hospital reported tonight that his condition had improved somewhat since he had been brought to the institution.

Veteran 89 Today.



COL. MAGNUS S. THOMPSON, of Leesburg, Va., who at the age of 14 served as a courier to Stonewall Jackson in the first battle of Manassas, will celebrate his eighty-ninth birthday anniversary today. Later he joined the Partisan Rangers of Loudoun County. At the close of the war he was a prisoner in Fort McHenry.

Trade, Farming Show Upswing In Virginia Area

Monthly Business Summary Lists More Favorable Trends Than Unfavorable.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 30.—Favorable developments appeared to outnumber unfavorable business trends in the fifth Federal Reserve District during June and early July, the monthly business summary made public today by the Reserve bank here indicated.

A gain of 5.5 per cent in retail trade, good prospects for agriculture, the fewest number of business failures, both in number and total liabilities, of any July since 1920 and improvement in the lagging construction field were cited as encouraging factors.

Debits to individual bank accounts showed an increase of 12.2 per cent as of July 10 compared with four weeks ending July 11, 1934. Aggregate debits for the first half of 1935 increased 10.7 per cent over the corresponding 1934 period.

Bankruptcies for the six-month period this year declined 27 per cent in number and 47 per cent in liabilities in comparison with the same time in 1934.

Building permits in leading cities nearly doubled for the half-year of 1935 as against the half-way mark of 1934.

Group Seeks I. C. C. Probe By Congress

West Virginia Growers Charge Discrimination in Freight Rates.

Agency Is Dominated by Railway Interests, They Allege.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 30.—Charging the Interstate Commerce Commission is discriminating against them, the West Virginia Horticulture Society is preparing data to support a request for a Congressional investigation of the Commission.

The State growers' organization has been assured by Representative Jennings Randolph, representing the second West Virginia district, that he will demand the investigation, if the formal statement of grievances warrants such action.

The growers are protesting on three grounds. First, they claim the Interstate Commerce Commission has granted both its principal competitors in apple growing, New York State and the Northwest, freight rates which are highly preferential to those sections and which place this apple belt under a heavy disadvantage in attempting to market apples in the South and Midwest.

Rail Domination Charged.

Second, they declared the general level of freight rates, upheld by the I. C. C., is so high that this apple belt is being shut out of markets formerly held.

Third, it is alleged that the commission is dominated by the railroad interests. Established by Congress to be a supervisory body for the public welfare, the I. C. C. has become instead a body to protect the railroads, they charge. They also say the railroads maintain a corps of trained and expert specialists who look after the interests of the carriers, while the growers present their side only at long intervals and then in an amateurish and unskillful manner.

Shipping Rates Compared.

In support of their contention they are being discriminated against the growers of the four-State Shenandoah section say that points in New York have cheaper shipping rates to the Midwest than does this section, although this area is by far the closer to the Midwestern markets. On a table of 13 principal terminal markets of this area, the New York points have lower freight rates than Martinsburg to all except one city, Philadelphia, the local growers complain. The same condition exists where this section is in competition with the Midwestern fruits.

The State society officials say they have been driven to ask the Congressional investigation only after ten years of battling through expensive hearings and appeals have brought no relief.

Mill Workers Sign 'Loyalty' Petition

Efforts of Organizers Fail at Orange, Va.

By the Associated Press.

Orange, Va., July 30.—A young woman and two companions who came here a few days ago to organize employes of the American Silk Mill Co.'s plant into a local of the United Textile Workers Union were absent today as a "welfare committee" formed to combat unionization reported all but nine workers had signed a "loyalty" petition.

Union sympathizers said the trio of organizers were expected to return Saturday. It appeared little organizing would be done during their absence.

Twelve workers have been laid off for the remainder of the week because, mill officials said, of lack of work to warrant their retention. The plant is operating 24 hours a day.

Virginia May Condemn Land For Highway Beautification

Area From Jarman's Gap South Considered by Governor.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 30.—Officials of the State highway department said today any proceedings to condemn property for rights of way on the Parkway drive probably would concern that portion of the route between Jarman's Gap, 9 miles north of Rockfish Gap, and a point 25 miles to the south.

At the same time, Gov. Peery elaborated on his statement yesterday in Washington, where he and Commissioner H. G. Shirley conferred with Secretary of the Interior Ickes, that the General Assembly would be asked to pass a bill enabling the State to condemn additional property for scenic easement purposes.

The Governor pointed out that under the bill he would propose, owners of a 400-foot strip of land on either side of the route for the scenic easement still would have the use of their land, but its use would be restricted.

Under this arrangement the mountain highway linking the Shenandoah National Park with the Great Smoky Park in North Carolina would run in the center of a 1,000-foot strip of segregated property. The State now lacks authority to condemn property for scenic easement, and thus far has not initiated condemnation proceedings for rights of way along the highway route.

12-Year-Old Mother, Daughter Doing Well

By the United Press.

Cumberland, July 30.—Allegany County's youngest mother, 12-year-old Mrs. Bernice Higgins Stotler, is improving following the birth of a daughter at Memorial Hospital here. The child, born July 22, is normal in every respect.

Irvin E. Stotler, the father, is a member of the Civilian Conservation Corps and is 19.

Farm Conclave Reelects Beck To Presidency

Groups of Home Clubs Also Name Officers at Blacksburg Parley.

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., July 30.—Problems facing Virginia farmers received the attention of the Agricultural Conference Board at its meeting at Virginia Tech today, while the Virginia Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs held its annual business meeting and heard Mrs. Janet Stuart Durham, Richmond, urge consumer education for rural homemakers, and Miss Connie Bonslagel, State home demonstration agent of Arkansas, explain the function of the home.

C. Nelson Beck, Charlottesville, was re-elected president of the Agricultural Conference Board; D. E. Shank, Harrisonburg, was re-elected vice president, and W. L. Kirby, Richmond, was re-elected treasurer. Other members elected to the executive committee were G. F. Holsinger, Harrisonburg, and J. R. Horsley, Appomattox, representing general farm organizations; T. J. Andrews, Roanoke; Mr. Beck, farm organizations, and Mr. Kirby, Mr. Shank and W. G. Wysor, from co-operative marketing organizations.

Regional Officers Named.

Mrs. Egbert Thompson, Prince William County, was elected vice president representing northern Virginia of the Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs. Mrs. L. A. Tynes, Tazewell County, was elected vice president representing southwest Virginia; Mrs. Jennie Bass, Campbell County, was elected recording secretary; Mrs. Lawrence Taylor, Loudoun County, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. W. A. Horner, Chesterfield County, treasurer.

State legislation to supplement the national agricultural adjustment act was outlined by Chester Gray, Washington, representative of the National Farm Bureau Federation, at a meeting of the agricultural conference board. Every State, he said, needs a little AAA to correlate the national law to intrastate business done by farmers. This act should authorize the commissioner of agriculture to enter into agreements with processors and individual farmers and make marketing agreements for farm products that stay within the State.

Cites Rural Power Expansion.

As a result of 10 years of work by a State committee, rural electrification in Virginia has grown from 500 miles of rural lines in 1924 to 5,809 miles in 1935, C. E. Seitz, Virginia Tech agricultural engineer, told the conference board. Virginia now leads all Southern States in the percentage of farmers served and all Eastern States in the kilowatt hour consumption per farm.

Mrs. C. Nelson Beck, Charlottesville, in talking on highway beautification pointed out that the people of the State through the building of good roads, are subsidizing the sign board industry. A bill will be presented at the next State Legislature, she said, proposing a tax on signs and a fee on sign companies.

Henry Taylor, State agricultural statistician, gave figures to show that wheat production ranks fourth as a source for Virginia farm income. The State produces about half the amount of wheat required by local mills, but about two-thirds of the Virginia product stays on the farm.

Tobacco Curb Of AAA Voted By Virginians

Figures Show Majority of Growers Favor Arrangement.

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., July 30.—Virginia tobacco growers voted overwhelmingly for continuation of the AAA's crop control program in this State, figures compiled today by John Hutcheson, director of the V. P. I. Extension Service, showed.

The tabulations, made after reports had been received from practically all the important tobacco-growing counties of the Old Dominion, revealed a total vote of 12,780 for crop control, as against 1,198 opposed. This included dark-fired, burley and sun-cured growers. The vote by classes was as follows:

Dark-fired: for, 7,248; against, 523.
Burley: for, 4,746; against, 525.
Sun-cured: for, 786; against, 150.

This gave the Agricultural Administration a favorable vote of about 14 to 1 among the dark-fired farmers, of approximately 9 to 1 among burley growers, and approximately 5 to 1 among sun-cured growers.

Hutcheson said that practically all counties growing any material amount of tobacco already had reported results in the referendum.

Acree Shreve Funeral Is Held in Danville

Danville, Va., July 30.—Funeral services were held here yesterday for Acree Shreve, of Washington, who was fatally injured Saturday when his automobile left the highway near here and crashed into a telegraph pole.

The body was taken today to Beckley, W. Va., where he formerly lived. Samuel F. Shreve, the victim's brother, is in a hospital here recovering from injuries.

20 Paralysis Cases Boost Total to 278

Three Are in Counties Hitherto Free From Disease.

Serum Clinics to Be Set Up in Several Virginia Cities.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 30.—Virginia's two-month total of infantile paralysis cases mounted to 278 today, when 20 new diagnoses were registered with the State health department, 3 from counties that had not hitherto felt the effects of the disease.

At the same time, State officials announced vaccine clinics, at which preventive serum would be given, would be established soon in several Virginia cities, in addition to Petersburg, where arrangements are being completed for this work.

The serum stations will be in charge of Dr. A. G. Gilliam, of the United States Public Health Service, who has visited a number of Virginia cities and towns recently.

Cases recorded today were distributed as follows: Albemarle, 3; Amelia, 1; Charlotte, 2; Cumberland, 1; Dinwiddie, 3; Louisa, 1; Nelson, 1; Nottoway, 1; Pittsylvania, 1; Prince Edward, 1; Pulaski, 1; Roanoke, 1, and Richmond City, 3.

Amelia, Louisa and Pulaski counties had not previously reported a case.

It was pointed out that the fact that Richmond, Roanoke and Charlottesville are hospital centers would account to some extent for the apparent prevalance of the malady in those three cities. Albemarle County has reported 20 cases in all.

Stafford County Bans All Large Gatherings.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 30.—Precautionary moves against infantile paralysis were taken by Stafford County health authorities today when they posted "no gathering" signs and requested officials to indefinitely postpose a scheduled religious meeting.

Although there are no cases of the disease in the county, health authorities deemed it advisable to call off all congregations of large numbers of people.

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., July 30.—Gov. H. G. Kump today ordered Health Commissioner A. E. McClure to convene the State health council to consider ways of preventing the spread of infantile paralysis into West Virginia.

Until the council meets, the Governor requested parents to keep children from public gatherings and to consult family physicians on the best means of protection.

Judge Reserves Decision In Bradford Farm Case

Bel Air, Md., July 30 (AP).—Attorneys trying the case of W. W. Bradford, jr., in his attempt to have the sale of his farm set aside, concluded their arguments late today. Judge Walter W. Preston reserved his decision.

Earlier in the day Bradford produced evidence that he had bought the 153-acre farm in 1925 for $37,000. Later it was sold at a foreclosure sale for $21,500. It is this later sale that Bradford is trying to have set aside by the court under an old Maryland trustee act.

Search for Sunken Treasure Off Delaware to Start Soon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lewes, Del., July 30.—Interest in the treasure ship, DeBraak, which sank off the Delaware Capes 137 years ago with gold bullion valued between $10,000,000 and $40,000,000, was intensified today when it became known that the old pilot ship, Boston, now being outfitted to search for the lost treasure, would arrive this week from Providence, R. I.

The DeBraak, a Dutch privateer in 1798, was carrying the loot of a Spanish pirate ship at the time it sank. Shifting with the sands for over a century, the ship is believed to have been located beyond the mouth of the bay in approximately 90 feet of water.

Aboard the Boston will be Charles H. Colstead, an engineer of Attleboro, Mass.; Richard T. Wilson, of Providence, and Harry Morgan, a diver. They will investigate the hull of the latest find believed to be the DeBraak. Other salvagers searching for the treasure ship have limited their diving within the bay.

Misleading factors to previous treasure-seekers was the story handed down through the generations of Lewes residents that the DeBraak sank so close to shore that cries of the drowning men could be heard at Cape Henlopen Light. Records state that the sloop was well within the harbor when it was overturned by a sudden squall. The boat was 125 feet long with a 30-foot beam.

Phil Spitalny and His Women's Orchestra Will Afford Test of Capital Taste

Comes to Earle As Topline Act Week of Aug. 9

Hailed as Hit in Chicago; The Stars' Vacations; Amusement Chat.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Contrasts in style and method of program and musicianship between two of the foremost orchestras of female instrumentalists now appearing before the American public will be emphasized when Phil Spitalny brings his feminine ensemble to the stage of the Earle Theater for a return engagement, beginning Friday, August 9.

Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears having recently scored an eminently satisfactory week at the box office, as headliners of the vaudeville portion of the Earle's bill, it will be interesting to observe what response is elicited by Spitalny's aggregation of visual and auricular charmers.

The Spitalny group will have the advantage, of course, of superior instrumentation, the membership of the orchestra exceeding that of Miss Hutton's band—inherited, incidentally, from Alex Hyde, who preceded Phil to the boards as a conductor of distaff artistes—by about 50 per cent.

But, on the other hand, Phil is no Ina Ray Hutton out there in front of his orchestra! He doesn't tap dance, he doesn't squirm all over the place and he does not, thank heaven, wear Miss Hutton's revelatory costumes.

He doesn't even do a Noel Coward shower-bath act!

So what?

Music vs. Mooching.

So what we will be permitted to do the week of August 9 will be to draw mental comparisons between a band that ignores the finer aspects of even popular music and goes in for pulchritude and periphery, and one that bears down on the seductive qualities of the world's better musical compositions, for their own sakes, and permits the allurements of the flesh to take second place.

In its field, Ina Ray Hutton's Melodears is a first-rate "showman's" band. Private reports from Chicago, where the Spitalny group has been appearing to great advantage of late, indicate that the present act is by far the best Phil has ever had since disbanding his Goldenrod Orchestra of male musicians.

This is a little difficult for this column to swallow, because Ethel Pastor no longer is with the band. Ethel, to these ears, is by far the best soprano on the contemporary vaudeville stage—if that is where she still is.

However, the point is that these two bookings, Ina Ray and Phil, coming close together at the Earle, will offer a finer test of whether the Washington public wants music as the raison d'etre of its band acts, or merely as a background for gyratory blondes.

Mr. Spitalny and his gals will be up against a little stiff competition when they arrive on the Earle stage, since August 9 also marks the week of the third all-Washington revue, "Going Native," on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater. This is an item of entertainment which attracts capacity patronage to the Fox every August, and it is assumed that this year will be no exception. If Master Spitalny can hold his own against this local offering, then he has a band!

The principals and chorus of the "Going Native" business, since the matter has come up, are busily engaged in rehearsing their respective contributions to what is expected to eventuate into a 22-scene, spectacular offering only a few half-sizes smaller than the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus!

Rehearsals have not as yet reached the costume and "stage business" point of development, but it won't be long now!

Astaire to Air Tunes.

Fred Astaire, easily the most popular dancing comedian in motion pictures, who is at the moment "loafing" on Long Island writing a book on "How to Dance," or something of the sort, will broadcast some of the tunes from his latest film, "Top Hat," over the WEAF-NBC network on Saturday evening, August 10—if Mr. Heiney will pardon the intrustion.

After all, "Top Hat" is a picture, not a broadcast. But about the tunes.

Mr. Astaire will sing "Piccolino," hailed by those who have heard it as a topper to last season's "Continental;" "Top Hat, White Tie and Tails" and "Cheek to Cheek."

These are not all of the song hits in "Top Hat," but since this is only the first of a series of broadcasts Fred will make, the others are being saved for later airings.

In addition to Ginger Rogers, who co-stars once more with the dancing comedian, Helen Broderick, whose likeness appears on this page, also is prominently cast in "Top Hat."

Tonight, in its Garden Theater, the Arts Club of Washington will present two one-act plays, Irish in theme, under the direction of Edna Ellis Hilton. The playlets will be "The Shadow of the Glen" and Lady Gregory's "A Workhouse Ward." The casts of the two pieces will be composed of Lee Barbash, Miner Ellis, Andrew Dent and Edna Ellis Hinton. During intermission, Dorothy Sherman Pierson will sing a group of Irish songs, accompanied by Helen Camp Grimes at the piano.

Mr. Fields' Soft Answer.

There is nothing like the complacency of greatness to bulwark one in hours of anguish.

It is Mr. Leicester Wagner, one of the more observant of the West Coast commentators on the cinema and its people, who dedicates one of the United Press wires to a thumbnail description of that illustrious mime, Mr. W. C. Fields, writhing on a bed of agony.

Tossing on his pallet of pain, W. C. Fields is trying to get some sleep. His back gives him agony and it's hot. He doesn't want visitors and he doesn't want to answer the telephone—just a tall, cool one for him.

The telephone rings. His manservant answers it. It is Irving Thalberg, asking Mr. Fields to play the part of Mr. Pickwick in "Pickwick Papers."

The manservant taps Mr. Fields on the shoulder. He shudders, opens his eyes and grunts: "What?"

"A man on the telephone wants to talk to you. Its very important."

"Who is it?"

"Mr. Thalberg."

"What Mr. Thalberg?"

"Mr. Irving Thalberg."

"What does he want?"

"He wants you to play a part in 'Pickwick Papers.'"

"Give him an evasive answer. Tell him to go to hell."

W. C. Fields groans, turns on his side and tries to go to sleep.

Thus does greatness defy the guy with the power to hire and fire!

Samuel Goldwyn has signed Paul Cavanagh and Helen Westley for featured roles in "Splendor," co-starring Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea. Camera work on the new picture is scheduled to begin two weeks after the completion of "Barbary Coast," in which Miss Hopkins and Mr. McCrea also are appearing, with Edward G. Robinson. Paul Cavanagh will be remembered for his recent work opposite Mae West in "Goin' to Town," and Miss Westley, as a character actress of the first rank who has recently transferred her partial allegiance from the Theater Guild, of which she was one of the founders, to the cinema, to appear in such homely classics, for example, as "Anne of Green Gables" and similar genre dramas.

"Splendor" is the original screen play by Rachel Crothers, noted playwright, which may inaugurate a new system of dealing between producers and authors. Miss Crothers is to receive royalties, just as she would for a stage play, instead of the traditional lump sum usually paid authors for their screen works.

Col. Schloss Honored.

In commemoration of 25 years of continuous service as executive director of Glen Echo Park, the National Capital's outstanding amusement center, Col. Leonard B. Schloss last night was presented with a round-trip, all-expense, airline ticket to California by the 200 employes comprising the park's personnel serving under his management.

The park force's expression of affection and esteem in which they hold their boss embraced a similar ticket for Mrs. Schloss. Col. and Mrs. Schloss plan to leave for California immdeiately upon the close of the present Glen Echo season in September. Both were deeply touched by the unexpected tribute paid them upon the rounding out of a quarter of a century of useful service to the pleasure lovers of Washington.

Is Native Son.

The trip to California is particularly apropos in the present instance. Col. Schloss—Gov. Ruby Laffoon, of Kentucky, didn't give him that title not to be used!—was born in San Francisco, just like Maxine Doyle, and it was there that he broke into "show business" by turning down seats for the cash customers in the old Tivoli Theater.

Later he "went out ahead of shows" and finally came East and specialized in the line of amusement work in which he now is recognized as one of the foremost directors in the country.

Congratulations, Col. and Mrs. Schloss, and happy landings!

With accustomed aplomb and a hey, nonny-nonny, and a hotcha-cha, Master Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's Theater, last night announced the inauguration of the engagement of Alice Brady in "Lady Tubbs" for tomorrow morning, instead of Friday, as originally planned. This picture, which has been described by those who have seen it as the best vehicle Miss Brady has had to date in films, will continue indefinitely at the Fifteenth street house. Alan Mowbray, last seen in "Becky Sharp," appears with the star in this Homer Croy story.

Playtime for Players.

Now that the get-away-from-it-all season has arrived, film players are vacationing all the way from Sweden to Hawaii, embracing, needless to say, points between.

Some Hollywoodites are working, summertime or no summertime, and are thankful to be so engaged. They are merely planning vacations, to be taken when they become free to roam the face of the earth at will. Quite a few of the boys and girls, however, already are on their way.

Garbo went to Sweden, as everybody knows.

Hawaii is being visited by Janet Gaynor, who owns a home there, Margaret Lindsay, who will be her guest, and Shirley Temple and her family, who are away for a three-week vacation, the first the tiny star has enjoyed since her sudden emergence as the screen's biggest little star. Dolores Del Rio will visit the islands next month.

Ruby Keeler is remaining in Hollywood, to superintend the erection of a new home and have fun with her adopted child.

Ann Dvorak and her husband, Leslie Fenton, plan yacht trips to Catalina Island, or Lower California, where the fishing is better. The James Cagneys and Preston Fosters will divert themselves in like manner.

Fred Astaire, as already remarked in these dispatches, has rented himself a house on Long Island for three months where he is writing a book on dancing, and how.

Heather Angel and Ralph Forbes are planning an Oregon camping trip.

Many Are Abroad.

Edward Everett Horton has gone to England, where he will enjoy before-and-after vacations while making two pictures.

Among others now in England are Madge Evans, Jean Parker and C. Aubrey Smith. All will make pictures and enjoy an outing or two, while on the other side. Elizabeth Allan, Binnie Barnes and Wendy Barrie, all English, are returning home for the summer.

Robert Montgomery is in Europe, but just for the fun of it and to see the sights.

Edmund Lowe is going to the Orient for two months; Warner Oland to his ranch in Mexico for a month.

"Slim" Summerville and Andy Devine are fishing for sharks off the Mexcian coast and probably hoping they won't catch any!

After flitting about the stratosphere as guest cloudhopper with Wiley Post, Will Rogers probably will motor across the continent to Skowhegan, Me., with Mrs. Rogers, to see their daughter Mary act in that famous summer stock company.

Rochelle Hudson has taken a cottage in Santa Barbara for the summer.

Joan Crawford will stay home in her own back yard, swimming and playing tennis and no doubt wondering if Eddie Melcher is going to drop in again to get his annual supply of columns!

Mary Astor will be found in New York assiduously searching the market for a suitable play.

Joe E. Brown takes his vacation during the World Series, but might be found up Boston way right now with his race horse. Guy Kibbee has just returned home from a trip to the Canadian woods and George Brent is on his way to camp in northern California.

Ranches and Hilltops.

Otto Kruger will vacation on his mountain of trees near Elizabethtown, N. Y., where he will mend his personal fences and cut down the weeds. Kay Johnson and her husband, John Cromwell, the director, will spend August on their ranch in Hidden Valley, which is a swell place for a ranch, and Joel McCrea and his wife, Frances Dee, whom he married while she was making "Rodney," with Walter Huston, in Washington, will rusticate on their ranch, also, in the Santa Rose Valley, 40 miles from Hollywood.

Charlie Chaplin is cutting his new picture, "Charlie Chaplin in Modern Times," so can't play at the moment, and Nancy Carroll is in Reno, unshackling herself from Bolton Mallory.

Katharine Hepburn's official vacation will begin in September, when she will go to Europe for two months.

Ginger Rogers and Lew Ayres got in their car and are driving the length of California—a distance about equivalent to that from New York to Chicago.

Wallace Beery, accompanied by Mrs. Beery, will sail soon for Europe and, if he can talk his mammy into it, Jackie Cooper will be on the same skiff.

Clark Gable is considering both Europe and Hawaii and likely will end up in Utah, where he has a favorite lake.

Lewis Stone and a party will go fishing in Alaska waters on Stone's big yacht, a la Barrymore.

Baby LeRoy? He's staying home, practicing up on his talking

The-Real-McCoy Note.

Me, personally, I, myself plan a sporting two weeks out in the back yard on Gallatin street, whipping the bird-bath for game catfish!

Screen Proselytizes Comedienne

Many habitual picturegoers will find difficulty in recalling Helen Broderick, whose summery likeness appears above, on the screen this side of her sprightly performance with William Gaxton in the Warner Brothers' picturization of "Fifty Million Frenchmen," some four or five years ago. That is a condition soon to be remedied. Miss Broderick, one of the stage's most reliable comediennes, shortly will be seen in support of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in RKO-Radio's production of "Top Hat." Miss Broderick's spectator sports costume, by the way, was created especially for her by Bernard Newman, stylist, for wear in the picture.

Hollywood

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, July 30.

IT IS in the basement of a cotton warehouse on a Southern plantation. It is the day that the Emancipation Proclamation has become known to these not so United States.

A slim girl stands on the stairway in this cotton warehouse, and is talking, pleading, arguing with a colored mob. Today they are no longer slaves. Today they are free.

The colored people shout and stamp, and wave their arms. They do not have to work on the plantation any longer; they do not have to take orders. They do not have to take orders from this slim girl again. Their leader shouts at her, hurls challenges, gives orders. For a moment it seems as if she will be destroyed in this new wild sea of freedom.

But the young girl is Margaret Sullavan, and her soft voice becomes strong and she rises above this high pitch and shouts them all down in this exciting scene being filmed for "So Red the Rose."

• • • •

King Vidor is directing. He has a feeling for characterization and the establishment of a mood. He talks gently to the hundreds of colored extras on the set for this sequence. He likes them, has patience and understanding.

Director Vidor says: "I like working with them. It reminds of the time I did 'Hallelujah.' This was the fine picture with the all-colored cast.

It is Director Vidor who gives the acting instructions. The colored extras take their other orders from Oscar, the bootblack at the studio.

• • • •

OSCAR, who has been at Paramount longer than any executve, is Emperor Jones today. He was given the task of going to Central avenue—the Harlem of Los Angeles—and gathering the colored extras for these sequences. Oscar got many of them the jobs. They take their orders from him. He tells them when to come on the set, when to line up, and even tries to be a bit of a director. After a "take" he will shout to them: "Come on now. Put more feeling in it. Put more feeling in it for Oscar."

One of the colored performers in "So Red the Rose," playing a bit, is Alex Hill, who is George Raft's valet. He hands Raft his clothes, calls him when George is needed on a set, and aspires to be a movie star. Hill was doing the bit in this flicker when Director Vidor gave him a few lines of dialogue to speak in a scene. "I don't work for no $10 and speak dialogue," said Hill. "When I talk, I'm a $35 man."

• • • •

Edward G. Robinson and Miriam Hopkins are doing a scene for "Barbary Coast." Director Howard Hawks is all set up and ready to go. There is a small gathering on the set learning how pictures are made. In one chair sits Rachel Crothers, the playwright, who has written the scenario for Miss Hopkins' next flicker.

Miss Hopkins is in her boudoir sipping champagne. Robinson enters and is told, in a long speech, that he is no longer her lover. Miss Hopkins sips champagne, the genuine stuff, as she talks. Suddenly she sneezes. The scene is spoiled. "I'm sorry," says Miriam Hopkins, "but the bubbles get into my nose. I never could drink champagne."

They do it again and again. Miss Hopkins does drink champagne—practically the entire bottle.

• • • •

GEORGE RAFT and Joan Bennett are playing a scene for "Rich Man's Daughter" at the Columbia studio. They are Paramount players, but many performers from that studio are at Columbia in search of a good flicker for a change.

Miss Bennett has her own hairdresser and her personal maid with her on the set always. George Raft has his valet, who isn't an actor this day. Joan Bennett, smartly dressed, stands in bedroom slippers and plays the scene with George Raft for Director Tay Garnett. Director Garnett stands leaning on a cane. Occasionally, he points with the cane. He seldom directs without a cane. Says Director Garnett: "I've got to have something to do while they are acting, so I play with the cane." At another studio, Groucho, Chico and Harpo Marx are climbing and running about a set which represents backstage at the Metropolitan Opera for their flicker, "A Night at the Opera."

• • • •

The opera is going on, although they are doing everything to stop it. There is a big chase backstage with policemen being called in to capture and arrest Groucho, Chico and Harpo.

The extras, wearing uniforms of the New York police force, are being told what to do. George S. Kaufman, who is sitting in on the making of this flicker, remarks: "It certainly is nice to tell a New York cop what to do for a change. After being told by them to stop, to stand still, to move over, it feels good to be able to tell them what to do." The director shouted: "Hey, you cops, do it right, now!"

With a considerable eye to period settings and the quaint sty'es of the late lamented Victorian era, the Roadside Theater company last night apprehended the spirit and much of the flavor of Paul M. Potter's enduring drama of "Trilby," a colorful and, in its day, daring romance of the studios of Paris' Latin Quarter, adapted from the novel by George Du Maurier.

Although less ancient than many of the lurid melodramas to which the Roadsiders heretofore have devoted their talents, "Trilby," nevertheless, presented several opportunities to hiss the villain that came as complete surprises to those in the audience who were able to recall the seriousness with which this play was received when its pivotal roles of Svengali, Trilby O'Farrell and Taffy were played, respectively, by Wilton Lackaye, Virginia Harned and Burr McIntosh.

"Trilby" since those golden days of the theater of flesh and blood, in other words, has become hopelessly dated and completely outmoded as drama that may be accepted in that respectful and receptive mood which it once commanded.

A Pretentious Production.

The Roadside production is perhaps the most elaborate in point of settings and costumes that this earnest group has presented. Whatever shortcomings there are in a thoroughgoing attempt to capture the full import of the Potter play lie rather in miscasting than in any consideration of material investiture.

Denis Connell, except for a make-up which permits a cherubic and pink-cheeked countenance to peer through the tangled morass of Svengali's clotted hair and beard, gives a varegated and effective performance in the role created and played in all its major revivals by that earlier Washingtonian, Wilton Lackaye. His reading emphasizes the skill of a player whose place in the van of the Capital's resident actors is secure. Carey Lucas, as Triby, improves as the play progresses, her least impressive scenes being her first, in the studio of Taffy, Sandy and Little Billee in the winter of 1895.

These three loyal Englishmen ensconced in the heart of Paris' gay Latin Quarter are played, in the order named, by J. Edmond Veitch, who gives a fine account of himself; Walter McIntosh, whose name perpetuates a memory of the original production, and William P. Jordan, whose demeanor, I regret to report, is altogether too juvenile to lend either conviction or credibility to a role upon which much of the romantic interest of the play depends.

Mr. Rappold Scores.

Ruth Perrott leads the supporting cast as Mme. Vinard, sustaining a French accent and manner in fine fashion, and other important contributions to the enjoyment of the evening are made by Milton O. Hirshfield, Richard Stringfellow, Adele Gusack, Sonje Nordholm and Ralph H. Thayer.

The finest individual performance, next to Mr. Connell's, was offered by John P. Rappold, jr., in the role of Gecko, who achieved no les than a personal ovation for his work in the third act.

Ada Bills' beruffled and expository "can-can," in the second act, won salvos of applause as the one interval of Parisian insouciance that marked the progress of a time-honored play sufficiently well done to merit the capacity house that reveled in its extravagances.

THE successful organization of credit unions among Government employes in Washington during the past year has been a keen and encouraging incentive to the development of these co-operative thrift and loan associations among other groups of people throughout the country, according to C. R. Orchard, director of Credit Union Section, F. C. A.

BAKER.

This statement was made last night in connection with completion by Treasury employes of the organization of Federal credit unions to serve every Treasury employe in the District.

Chartering of the Procurement Division Union, with J. I. Bellow, president, and Morris Weingarten, treasurer, rounds out the organization of eight Federal credit unions in the main building and other divisions of the department. Other officers of the new Procurement union are Maj. Ralph Graves, vice president; Miss B. A. Rogers, clerk, and L. E. Rackley, R. M. Garner and W. E. Hayghe, loan committee members.

Other credit unions at the Treasury are Treasury Building, Internal Revenue, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Public Health Service, Customs Bureau, Public Debt Service, Coast Guard and Bureau of Narcotics, and Disbursing Office.

Emphasizing the opportunity of credit union service to all ranks of employes, Director Orchard called attention to the work being done by the union in the main building, which is devoting special efforts to rehabilitate the credit of employes who have been needlessly burdened with small loan charges and costs in connection with installment buying.

Mrs. Gabrielle Forbush, president of the Main Building group, said that in the three months of operation 475 employes had became members and had saved more than $9,500, while more than $11,000 has been loaned to members.

Credit unions, Mr. Orchard points out, make it possible for members to save money conveniently and safely, especially people of average means who otherwise might not realize that stray quarters and loose half-dollars have been the making of over 3,000 credit unions in America with a membership of over 800,000 people.

Chairman Sirovich, of the House Civil Service sub-committee, will call his group in executive session Thursday on the Sirovich bill.

New Officers Active.

New officers of the District Department, American Federation of Government Employes, who were elected under the changes in the constitution recently, are busy preparing data for the national convention in Cincinnati September 9.

Department President Ira D. Scott, Veterans' Administration, in announcing the following new officers, reminded members of the next meeting to be held at the Hamilton Hotel:

Miss Marguerite Hughey, General Land Office (but a member of Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47), recording secretary; Donald W. Toulouse, Veterans' Administration, corresponding secretary; James A. Baugh, jr., Civil Service Commission, treasurer; and William Ryan, War, sergeant at arms.

Justice Postettes.

Walker Williams (P), Justice, and Mrs. Madeline Williams, USRA, are back at their respective desks after a few days vacation at the home of the latter's parents near Warrenton, Virginia.

Miss Cecelia Cronan, Identification Division, has been confined to her home by illness. Miss Ellen Smith, Bureau of Investigation, is spending her vacation at Atlantic City. Lawrence Chandler, Identification, is visiting in Spencer, N. C.

Heard While Driving.

Traffic policemen gave Mrs. L. B. Moncure (C), Internal Revenue, these directions while she was on a motor trip last week:

"Drive to end of the street and turn over on dirt road."

"Keep straight ahead until you hit the bridge."

"Go right down this street and circle the square."

Library of Congress Postettes.

Walter Cone, Reading Room, has returned from a trip to his home in Nixon, Tex. Jack Starns, Card Division, enjoyed his vacation at his home in Science Hill, Ky.

Miss Florence Brady (C), State Law Index, visited friends in Newport News, Va., recently. Miss Lydia Albertson, Legislative Reference Service, has returned from a vacation which she spent motoring.

Smithsonian employes are saddened to learn of the death of William A. Knowles, property clerk, National Museum, suddenly at his home, 1445 Fairmont street northwest, Monday.

AFTER 11 years' absence from Government service, Arthur T. Upson returns as director of the Southwestern Forest Range and Experiment Station, succeeding G. A. Pearson, who has resigned to devote full time to research, it is announced at Forest Service.

Upson has been in trade extension and research with the National Lumber Manufacturers Association. Graduating in forestry in 1910 from the University of Nebraska, he entered the Forest Service, serving in the Arapaho National Forest. Later he was deputy supervisor at other points.

In 1920 Upson went to the Forest Products Laboratory in Wisconsin where he made important contributions to studies dealing with utilization of little-used species of wood. He wrote "The Production and Use of Small-Dimension Stock in the Chair Industry" and other scientific articles. In 1924 he accepted an appointment with the Manufacturers Association.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

ANOTHER subscriber to the ancient adage that fame is fleeting is Blondy Ryan. The toast of Broadway in the fall of 1933 when his spectacular play was bringing the Giants their World Series triumph over Washington, Ryan gravitated last year to the Phillies and now finds himself with the Baltimore Orioles of the International League. His decline was as rapid as his rise was sensational.

POVICH.

Author of the "They Can't Beat Us" telegram which inspired the Giants to seal their pennant victory of 1933 with a successful road trip while the injured Ryan was left at home, Blondy recovered in time to regain his place at shortstop for the World Series battles with Washington. In that series he could do no wrong, seemingly.

It was the weak-hitting Ryan who drove in the winning runs in two of the games, and at shortstop he was a continual thorn to the Nats. Even when he fumbled a vital double-play ball in the second game of the series in New York, the ball trickled up his sleeve and in a desperate attempt to clutch it again, he accidentally batted it into the glove of Second Baseman Hughie Critz who was able to complete a death-dealing double play.

It was Ryan who finally sealed the Nats' hopes in that series. It was he who flung himself in front of Pinch-Hitter Cliff Bolton's sizzling drive to make a sensational catch in the last inning of the final game and preserve for the Giants the slender lead that Mel Ott's home run had given them. The next season Ryan couldn't hold the pace. The Giants traded him to the lowly Phils, but even that class of baseball was too high for him. Now with the Orioles, Ryan can reflect and fully realize that what goes up must come down.

THERE comes to hand a letter from Mr. S. J. Fishel, of 1925 New Hampshire avenue northwest, who asks:

Has it ever occurred to you that there may be some very strong reasons for Herr Max Schmeling's exorbitant demands for a match with either Baer or Louis? Schmeling knows that the kind of money he is asking for isn't floating around in these times, especially the nontaxable kind.

"Maybe Herr Max has been persuaded that either match would not be to his best interests and he has therefore placed his demands so high as to be out of the question because he doesn't want either match.

"Maybe the fact that Maxie's American manager, Mr. Heil Hitler Jacobs is distinctly a non-Aryan has something to do with it.

"Then, too, not so very long ago, Mr. Max "Benedict" Baer, another non-Aryan, hung one on Herr Schmeling's chin for a ten count and could probably do it again with detrimental results to Aryan supremacy.

"Joe Louis might also be counted on to land a few on Schmeling's chin in the course of a few rounds and when Louis hits 'em they stay hit. Joe Louis, I might add, is also distinctly non-Aryan.

"Could it be possible that Herr Max has been persuaded that it would not be in the best interests of Aryan supremacy if he fought a couple of non-Aryans like Baer and Louis.

"How does it sound to you? Maybe I'm wrong. Schmeling himself is okay. The Teuton Schlager can take it and also hand it out and he'd give us a good line on Louis if he'd mingle with him, but—I, think pressure has been brought to bear on Schmeling. Do you?"

Answer: I don't know.

In Short.

Chattanooga reports that Clark Griffith is seeking a purchaser for the franchise with an eye to moving the Nats' farm to Atlanta . . . and that the Boston Red Sox are likely to buy him out . . . Two days after he was hit on the head by a line drive in Yankee Stadium, Ed Linke began to feel the ill-effects in the form of a black eye and a lame back . . . with Griffith Stadium officials now serving drinks and sandwiches to the press, Shibe Park stands alone as the one American League park that does not cater to the correspondents . . . Red Kress has definitely abandoned his pitching ambitions as a result of his comeback in the Nats' infield . . . he says it was not until he took the mound that he found out how little he knew about pitching . . . Dick Lanahan, who struck out ten Nashville hitters the other day, lost because Tiny Chaplin struck out 15 Chattanooga batters . . . Lanahan, the least regarded rookie in the Nats' camp last spring, is now the best prospect on any Washington farm and will be called for another trial with the Nats before the season ends . . . when the Cleveland Indians were in Washington ten days ago, Walter Johnson was strongly tempted to toss in the towel as manager and retire to his Germantown (Md.) farm . . . his return to the Indians in 1936 is no more probable than a pennant victory by the Nats . . . Johnny Stone broke his streak of six straight strikeouts when he managed to get himself hit by a pitched ball in an appearance as a pinch hitter yesterday . . . I see by the papers that Primo Carnera, on his return to his native Italy, says he was drugged during the Joe Louis bout . . . What he really means is that he was slugged.

Walker, Punch and Skill Gone, Bravely Insists He Can Fight

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Michael Patrick Walker, one-time middleweight champion of the world, is the latest to join the "I'm-still-good-enough-to-lick-anybody-in-the-world" Club, the latest victim of that terrible delusion that afflicts every athlete, but particularly prize fighters, that their day is not done that their sun has not set. Michael Patrick, better known as Mickey Walker fought a young Swedish light heavyweight last night named John Anderson, is one of New York's smaller out-door parks before 6,000 customers in a six-round bout and ended by making a spectacle of himself. He was soundly whipped and humiliated by a man who, though a good club fighter, wouldn't have lasted two rounds with him when Mickey had it. Don't these boys ever learn? Wasn't Mickey at the ringside the night Benny Leonard tried to fight Jimmy McLarnin and old-timers who had seen Leonard fight at his best turned their heads away so as not to see an illusion shattered?

Was there ever a fighter who was really through who managed to come back in a new fight generation and hold his own? I never heard of one. Michael Patrick belonged to the generation of the Golden Decade, the Million Dollar Gates, the big ballyhoo . . . Who were his companions? He fought in the days of Dempsey and Tunney, of Harry Wills, of Delaney and Berlenbach, of Harry Greb and Tiger Flowers and Jack Sharkey, of Louis Firpo and Sam Mandell and Johnny Dundee, and Sid Terris and Jimmy Slattery and Dave Shade. Where are they now? Are any of them still pulling on the mittens and answering the bell? Not one.

All of them are retired, and Greb and Flowers are dead. Then what could possibly make Mickey Walker think that he can crash the new generation of pugs and still fight?

Is it that insuperable ego that is built into every fighter, or which dwells there normally? Is it that treacherous sensation of general well-being that makes them say: "Well I am as good as I ever was! I feel great. I can lick most of the

O'Mahoney Wins Over Don George

Riot Follows Awarding of Bout to Irishman.

By the United Press.

Braves Field, Boston, Mass., July 30.—Danno O'Mahoney, husky, fair-skinned young Irish soldier, tonight became undisputed heavyweight wrestling champion of the world when he threw Ed Don George before the largest crowd ever to witness a wrestling match.

The match ended in a free-for-all fight in which city and State police rushed into the ring to halt the riot.

Referee James J. Braddock, heavyweight boxing champion, awarded O'Mahoney the necessary one fall after 1 hour and 30 minutes of grappling. The award was made when George failed to return to the ring by the count of 20.

No sooner had Braddock announced his decision than members of the George camp rushed into the ring and slugged at Jimmy. Braddock retaliated by flooring his aggressor with a right hand to the chin. Immediately other handlers and a few irate fans swarmed into the ring and collided beneath the flood lights in a welter of waving arms and thwacking fists.

Ostermueller Is Wild But Effective

Washington Uses Five Pitchers in Effort to Check Visitors.

Parade to First Falls Eight Short of Equaling Record.

By Shirley Povich.

MERRILY they strolled along at Griffith Stadium yesterday, did the Nats and the Red Sox who wore out the base lines with 22, no less, walks. The Nats were merely out for the exercise, but the Red Sox were out for the ball game and won it by the inflated score of 11 to 4.

When a hit was needed, the Nats weren't hitting. In fact when a hit wasn't needed, they weren't hitting either. Fred Ostermueller, who issued 13 bases on balls to the Nats, issued only four hits, and thereby was enabled to go the route.

Washington used five pitchers and the only one who didn't walk at least a few Boston batters was Henry Coppola, who pitched the last inning. Coppola, however, made amends by pitching a triple and a single to the two weakest hitters in the line-up and allowing two runs before he got the side out.

Nine Sox Walk.

Nine Red Sox were walked by Washington's wild men of the mound and eight of these walks figured in the scoring. But the Washington pitchers and Ostermueller failed by eight bases on balls to equal the all-time league walking record of 30.

After the third inning, when the Red Sox had acquired a 4-1 lead, the Nats were never really in the ball game and the 2,000 fans in the park refused to become demonstrative even when all of those bases on balls by Ostermueller put the Nats in scoring position. Disappointed as inning after inning dragged by and no vital hits were forthcoming, the fans registered only boredom as the Nats continued to draw walks.

Hayes Is Wild.

Whitey Hayes, who headed the parade of Washington pitchers, could get only one man out before he was taken out himself. Facing four batters, he walked two, pitched a single to Joe Cronin and had two balls on Rick Ferrell when Manager Bucky Harris got him out of there.

Harris tried another rookie, Elden McLean, with much the same results. McLean issued Boston's third and fourth walks of the inning before he could get the side out. Aided by the passes, the Red Sox scored two runs on but one hit.

But the Nats got that run back from Ostermueller without the aid of a hit in the first inning after the first two Washington hitters were passed, and thus there were early indications of what kind of a ball game it was going to be.

Pettit and Russell.

McLean lasted until midway in the fourth. He had given the Sox two more runs in the third on Johnson's triple, a walk to Cronin and a passed ball by Holbrook, but when he pitched successive doubles to Bishop and Almada, Harris removed him in favor of Leon Pettit, who turned the job over to Jack Russell at the end of the seventh with Boston leading, 8 to 2.

The Nats didn't get a hit off Os-

Johnson's Fate To Be Settled This Week

Will Confer With Bradley in Detroit; Ruth Not Likely to Get Job.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, July 30.—Walter Johnson's career as pilot of the fifth-place Cleveland Indians depends on a conference at Detroit this week-end with Alva Bradley, president of the club.

Bradley said today the Detroit conference "doesn't mean it has been definitely decided to come to the parting of the ways with Walter, however, our directors feel that we have a tremendous investment and we want to get down to brass tacks."

Consider First Duty.

He said the directors agreed that their first duty is to "the Cleveland public." Johnson, who became manager of the Indians in 1933, said in Chicago: "I will be guided entirely by Bradley's wishes as to my future with the Indians. His word is law with me."

Bradley refused to comment on possible successors to Johnson in case the conference results in a change of skippers. Asked about a report that Babe Ruth had been considered for the berth, Bradley remarked: "There is absolutely no truth in it."

Ruth has told intimates he hoped to return to major league ball as a manager, possibly with the Tribe, but he declined to discuss it for publication. A report in some sports quarters said New York and Cleveland banking interests considered acquiring control of the Cleveland Club and placing the home-run king at its helm.

Macks Give New Yorkers More Woes, 6-5.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 30.—Connie Mack's clubbing Athletics further damaged the Yankees' pennant hopes today, winning, 6 to 5, for their first victory in six games with the New Yorkers here this season. It was the Yanks' ninth defeat in the last 12 games.

A home run by Paul Richards with one on in the sixth pulled the A's up from behind and handed Red Ruffing his ninth defeat. Pinky Higgins hit his fifteenth home run in the second and the A's clubbed Ruffing for three more on two singles, a double and three walks in the fourth.

Lowly Browns Beat Raging Tigers, 8-6

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 30.—The St. Louis Browns, showing no favoritism to American League leaders, showered Schoolboy Rowe and the Detroit Tigers with a 12-hit barrage today to take the series opener, 8 to 6.

Russ Van Atta got credit for the victory, although he retired in the sixth inning after successive singles by Greenberg and Goslin and a long fly by Rogell had given the Tigers their third run and endangered the early five run lead of the Browns. Knott took up the mound duties, but went out in the ninth in favor of Thomas when the Tigers threatened again.

A three-run rally in the seventh spelled defeat for the schoolboy, toiling for his tenth victory. Joe Sullivan, left-hander, finished the game, setting the Browns down in order.

Rippy Is Lone D. C. Golfer To Qualify

Adds 74 to First Day's 74 for Total of 148; 3 Others Fail.

Nordstrom Shoots 145 to Annex Medal by Single Stroke.

By Dave Herman,

A Staff Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 30.—A 31-year old bread-slicer blade salesman, Lloyd Nordstrom, of Davenport, Iowa, cut a wide swath in the National Public Links Golf Championship here today, and won the medal with a smashing 36-hole total of 145, five over par for the appropriately named Coffin Municipal Course.

While the hopes of many municipal stars lay in state tonight, all boxed and sealed and ready to be shipped to their homes tomorrow, Nordstrom, the blonde, happy-go-lucky Viking who paced the field of 197 golfers with a beautiful 71 the opening day, loomed as one of the toughest challengers for the championship in match play which opens tomorrow.

Two Tie for Second.

With the opening day leaders hot in pursuit, Nordstrom, his woods, irons and putting blade working like magic, shot the second 18 holes in 38-36—74 to nose out Albert (Scotty) Campbell, the 21-year-old Seattle flash, and Mike Balega, of St. Paul, 19-year-old Austrian clerk at the University of Minnesota postoffice, by a single stroke. Campbell, back in form, fired an even par 70 for a 146 total, and Balega added a 72 to his first day score of 74.

From Washington, D. C., came the challenge of 22-year-old Claude Rippy, District Municipal title-holder, who tied for third place with Lieut. Kenny Rogers, of San Antonio, Tex., with a total of 148, three shots from the sharpshooting Nordstrom.

Rallies on Last Nine.

Tied for second place with a 74 Monday, Rippy made a glorious last nine rally late today, reeling off an even par 34 after taking a 40 on the outgoing side.

Rippy, captain of the Washington Harding Cup team, showed his mettle under fire, and shot with such unerring accuracy on the last nine that he immediately established himself as a sturdy contender for the individual laurels.

Alone marches Rippy to uphold the prestige of the Nation's Capital. His teammates, Bobby Burton, Ted Burrows and George Malloy, fell in the heat of the firing, victims of Coffin's slick greens, narrow, rolling fairways, treacherous hazards and woods.

Cards 79 in Last 18.

An 84 staring him in the face as he teed off today, the bespectacled lad shot a 79 for a 163 total, four strokes too many. Scores of 159 or better qualified.

Fives on the two short holes, the third and fifth, proved Burton's downfall, causing him to go out in 43. He made a game come-back, shooting the last nine in 36.

Malloy finished with 80—88—168

Primo Drugged In Louis Bout, He Charges

Calls Negro Second-Rater; Asserts He Felt Fine Until 2d Round.

By the United Press.

NAPLES, Italy, July 30.—Waiting until he set foot on native soil before he made his charges, Primo Carnera, former heavyweight champion, who arrived today from the United States on the liner Conte di Savoia, said he was "drugged" before he was knocked out in the sixth round of his recent bout with Joe Louis, Detroit Negro, in New York.

"I never felt better in my life than the moment I stepped into the ring against Louis," said Carnera. "I was sure of victory, especially after the first round when Louis' blows failed to hurt me. However, in the second round I suddenly became ill, and my legs trembled and the ring whirled around me. It was impossible for me to keep my arms in a position to ward off the Negro's blows. Even a baby could have defeated me. I do not know what it was but I was certainly affected by some foreign substance which placed me at the mercy of the Negro."

Carnera termed Louis a "second-rater" and said that in a fair fight he was positive that he could easily

Ebony Lady Wins by 2 Lengths, Sets Suffolk Downs Record

Victor Beats Bold Lover In Stretch

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 30.—Ebony Lady, black daughter of the famous Flying Ebony, was two lengths to the good of Bold Lover today in the Yannis, the day's feature of 1 mile for 3-year-olds and upward, to set a new track record of 1:38.1.

The winner was the second choice in the betting to Bold Lover and went postward at 5 to 2, while the favorite was an even-money selection.

With the Greentree rider, Joe Wagner up, Ebony Lady led away from the gate and hung on to her lead until the back stretch was reached. Here Wagner pulled her back, surrendering the lead to Bold Lover, which held command until the stretch turn was reached and the winner was turned loose.

Hardware Is Third.

Hardware was badly placed on the first turn but Bert Wimmer pulled him clear of the interference, and in the final stages he closed well to take the show position by four lengths from the fourth-place Royal Blunder. The latter was no competition for the leaders. Wise Prince, at 7 to 1, was fourth coming into the stretch but quit under pressure from Royal Blunder.

The crowd of 12,000 bet $55,744 on the race and the winner paid $7.60.

Boerner's Horses Win.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., July 30.—R. N. Boerner's stables here carried off two firsts, a second and a third at the second annual horse show held at Westminster, Md., over the week-end.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RICH STRIKE, $6.80, $4.40, $3.20; ABOVE BOARD, $12.00, $6.40; ATTAUQUECHEE, $17.20.

RICH STRIKE moved up on the outside in the first quarter-mile, swung to the outside of SKOTCHY after rounding the far turn, took command before reaching the stretch and lasted to hold ABOVE BOARD safe. The latter, under slight restraint early, closed stoutly through the closing furlong. ATTAUQUECHEE was prominently placed throughout and held on willingly in the final drive. DR. TRAPROCK, within striking distance of the leaders, was unable to make up any appreciable ground when placed under punishment. THE REW, away fast, lacked speed to maintain his position. SIR ROLLIE never was prominent. SKOTCHY, unruly at the post, faltered in the stretch run.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Chatham. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:10. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROPHY, $3.60, $3.40, $2.80; JOE JAY, $27.80, $9.40; CANTIE, $3.40.

BROPHY took command in the run to the first turn, drew clear straightening out on the back stretch, was rated along under steadying restraint and was being eased up at the end. JOE JAY, in nearest pursuit of the winner from practically the outset, continued in determined fashion to the close. CANTIE moved through on the inside down the back stretch and held on gamely to the end. PROHIBITION was unable to reach the leaders. COURT GOSSIP closed some ground through the stretch.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:42. Off at 3:46. Winner, Mrs. Val Crane's b. or br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLAIMANT, $117.20, $34.80, $14.60; VOTE BOY, $4.20, $3.40; TRUE CHARM, $5.00.

CLAIMANT, steadied along in pursuit of the pace, responded gamely to punishment and, closing stoutly through the stretch, was up in the closing strides to wear down VOTE BOY. The latter, hustled to the front soon after the start, fought it out with CLAIMANT, disputed for that and drew clear, but was unable to withstand the bid of the winner. TRUE CHARM closed gamely under hard urging in the last quarter-mile. LOVE LOST showed good speed for the first half-mile, tiring slightly thereafter. LEANA G. was unable to make up any ground under punishment. CURRANTS was unable to reach the leaders.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HUG AGAIN, $3.20, $3.00, $2.60; CHILIAD, $5.00, $3.60; MEROVECH, $4.60.

HUG AGAIN, permitted to settle into her best stride and moving up on the outside, responded gamely when called upon, but was barely up in time to wear down CHILIAD. The latter, quickest to begin, opened up a good early lead and fought it out courageously, just failing to hold on long enough. MEROVECH went into contention in the opening furlong and held on gamely to the close. ZULU LAD came through on the inside at the stretch turn, loomed up threateningly at the furlong pole, but was unable to reach the leaders in the drive.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000. The Hyannis. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:48. Off at 4:50½. Winner, P. M. Pike's blk. m. (5), by Flying Ebony—Plum. Trained by T. Horning. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:38 1-5 (new track record).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EBONY LADY, $7.60, $2.60, $2.40; BOLD LOVER, $2.60, $2.40; HARDWARE, $2.60.

EBONY LADY, in nearest attendance of the pace, wore down BOLD LOVER when reaching the stretch and drew out steadily in the last furlong. BOLD LOVER went into command at first turn, was steadied along under slight restraint, was placed under punishment when the winner challenged and was unable to keep pace in the final drive. HARDWARE, under slight reserve early, closed willingly in the last three furlongs. ROYAL BLUNDER never could enter into serious contention. WISE PRINCE, taken up when straightening out on the back stretch and again at the far turn, faltered in the last five-sixteenths. GOLDEN FATE suffered some interference in run to the first turn, moved up on the outside down the back stretch, but faltered after going a half-mile.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:22. Off at 5:25. Winner, M. J. Beauchamp's b. m. (6), by Sun Briar—Teapot. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN TEATIME, $5.80, $3.00, $3.00; MERELY, $7.00, $3.80; CAERLEON, $2.20.

SUN TEATIME, a forward factor from the start, fought it out for the lead with EPITAPH through the first quarter-mile, disposed of him and dominated the running to the end. MERELY, well placed all the way, fought it out with good energy to the finish. CAERLEON, under hand ride throughout the quarter-mile, METAURUS came to the inside at the stretch turn and, though looming up threateningly, was unable to improve his position under punishment. EPITAPH showed early speed, but faltered in the last five-sixteenths.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:54. Off at 5:56½. Winner, J. U. Gratton's br. g. (4), by Pompey—Bourbon Girl. Trained by W. I. Irvine. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:13, 1:39 3-5, 1:46 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE POMPEY, $7.60, $4.20, $3.00; CENTER LANE, $6.00, $4.00; LAST ROMANCE, $3.00.

PRINCE POMPEY, hustled into a good lead in the first quarter-mile, was rated along under slight restraint and, holding on gamely at the end, just lasted to hold CENTER LANE. The latter moved up on the outside leaving the back stretch, closed with a rush in the furlong and was overtaking the winner rapidly at the end. LAST ROMANCE, well placed all the way, was unable to improve her position in the drive. SANTERNO closed some ground. HERKIMER weakened after a display of early speed. BIG SHOW was far back throughout.

Brewers Rout Gichner's, 11-1, to Clinch Industrial Pennant

James Holds Iron Works To 7 Hits

Mates Collect 17 Blows; Catch by Russell Is One of Features.

THE Heurich Brewers clinched the second half of The Post Association Industrial League race yesterday afternoon by crushing Gichner's Works, 11 to 1.

RUSSELL.

Walter Jones, former Virginia Athletic Club hurler, held the Ironmen to seven hits while his mates were collecting 17 off Jess Jessep and Tribby.

The Brewers will meet the Southwest Market Tuesday and even if they fail to stap the Marketers will still be able to win.

Russell Makes Fine Catch.

Everett Russell, former Tech High star, came through with a shoestring catch of Love's looper to left with Ironmen on base in the fourth for one of the features of the game.

The Brewers got to Jessep for four runs in the sixth, when the Heurichs came through with four successive hits—a triple by Fee Collier and singles by James, Wingate and Oertel.

British Net Team Whitewashes U. S.

Van Ryn in five sets for the necessary third point.

The Americans were a discouraged lot, but were able to see one glimmer of sunlight in Budge's red hair.

"I think he has made a great showing for his first time over and he undoubtedly is the one to build future teams around," said Harry Hillman, Dartmouth College track coach and trainer of the U. S. team. "Give him a little more speed afoot and he will be one of the world's greatest players."

Hillman already has Budge practicing sprinting starts and weaving like a halfback. His failure to move quickly enough, combined with the fact he was at times as erratic as a cornered colt, cost the Coast youngster any chance of beating Austin.

He made 26 outs and nets in the opening set and then hit the corded webbing 14 times in the second set. Budge displayed the brilliant brand of tennis of which he is capable in the third chapter, when he blazed 18 placements off both hands past Austin, but in the fourth he again reverted to slam-bang tactics and ran up 25 errors.

Twelve double faults, most of which came where they hurt, destroyed whatever chance Allison had against Perry. In the first set, which Allison won, the British star committed 25 errors. When Perry once settled down Allison simply was fighting for a lost cause. Perry particularly rose to great heights in the final set where for a stretch of four games he looked like nothing human, allowing Allison only four points.

The Americans will have two days' rest before catching the liner Manhattan the latter part of the week.

Perry will arrive in New York August 13, preliminary to his defense of the American singles championship.

Held to 4 Blows, Nats Are Defeated

termueller until the fourth, when Red Kress singled to left. One of their four hits was a fluke double by Jake Powell that dropped unmolested between Joe Cronin and Roy Johnson in short left field. Nine of the 13 Nats left on base were left on base in the last four innings, during which Ostermueller twice negotiated the third out with the bases full.

Berkeley Takes Two, Increases Loop Lead

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 30.—Berkeley added to its lead in the Bi-County Industrial League here over the week-end by taking a pair of contests, one from Millville, 7-3, and another from Blairton, 11-7. In the only other game played the second place Millville team downed the cellar-holding Bakerton nine, 12-0.

Both of Berkeley's victories were free-hitting affairs with the early leads piled up by the winners proving too much for the opposition to overcome. Millville secured its win over the Bakerton outfit by means of the six-hit hurling of Gaither, who was backed up by excellent clouting on the part of his teammates.

Minneapolis Beats All-Star Nine, 4-3

Rallies in 7th and 8th to Win Before 8,000.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, July 30.—Joe Hauser's home run in the seventh inning set the stage for an eighth-inning rally by Minneapolis today and the league leaders went on to nose out the American Association All-Stars, 4 to 3, before 8,000 fans.

Trailing by three runs as the seventh opened, Manager Donie Bush of the league leaders, sent Hauser in to pinch-hit for Bill Perrin, pitcher. The slugging first baseman poled the first ball thrown for a homer over the right-field wall, scoring Al Leitz ahead of him.

That put Minneapolis back in the ball game, which up to that point had been mostly an All-Star affair, chiefly because of Ted Gullic's stick-work. The Milwaukee outfielder had a double and a home run to his credit that netted the Stars two of their three runs.

Front Royal Beats Culpeper Club, 2-1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., July 30.—Culpeper Athletic Club, leading the Valley League for the second half of the season, after winning the first half, lost here this afternoon, 2-1, to Front Royal. The game was a pitchers' battle between "Rosy" Waugh, the local's erstwhile schoolboy pitcher, and the veteran "Lefty" Jewett, the former having the edge over his opponent. Waugh allowed three hits, all singles, up to the eighth inning, when two singles and a sacrifice scored a run. Culpeper evened the count in their half of this inning by virtue of a single, double and stolen base, but were victims of a "break" in the ninth, when the first alien hitter tripled and when an attempt was made to catch the runner off the bag he was hit by the throw, the ball going to the outfield while the runner scored. Due to a ruling by Umpire Settles, Culpeper will protest. The locals claim that he failed to call time when Lacy was safe on an error and the visiting club's players, while arguing over the play, allowed the runner to reach third. However, he was sent back to first.

Hazen, Waller Named Judges of Horse Show

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., July 30.—Melvin C. Hazen, District of Columbia Commissioner, and John Waller will judge the horse show which is to be part of the annual field day to be held August 9 at Haymarket by the Bull Run Grange.

During the morning games and races will be staged, and a band concert will be held at noon, and the tournament will be held in the afternoon. Later in the afternoon a baseball game will be played between the Warrenton Wonders and the Haymarket team.

Business Men Score.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., July 30.—A crowd of approximately 2,000 people saw the team from the Business Men of Warrenton defeat the team from Warrenton Wanderers, in the Donkey baseball game played last night on the Stuyvesant Field, by score of 3 to 0. The game scheduled for a week ago was at that time rained out.

Rippy Is Lone D. C. Golfer To Qualify

Adds 74 to His First Day's 74 for Total of 148; 3 Others Fail.

and Burrows had the same total, the result of a brace of 84s.

The District Harding Cup team total was 647.

Burrows had a grand chance to erase his poor score of the first day. He went out in 39, 3 over, but cracked wide open on the next five holes, and took a 45 on the last nine.

Six Three-Putt Greens.

Rippy actually had a wonderful chance to win the medal, but he was guilty of too many three-putt greens—six of them to be exact, five coming on the first nine.

Rippy three-putted the first, second, fourth, sixth and ninth. On the third, a 138-yarder, the Washington boy sent his drive 2 feet from the pin for a birdie deuce. On the ninth Rippy split the middle with his tee shot, his iron second went out of bounds, and, after reaching the green with his third shot, he proceeded to three-putt. The result—a 6, just when it looked as if he might bag a birdie.

Out in 40, four over par, Rippy started back 5—4—4—3, even par. He trundled in a 15-footer for a birdie 3 on the fourteenth, parred the next two holes, but ran into another three-putt green on the seventeenth, taking a 5. His 34 tied with five others for low on any nine during the tournament.

Mitchell Cards 73.

Defending champion Dave Mitchell, tall, curly-haired and handsome, rapped out a 73, after going out in 35, and finished with a 150 total. Mitchell scored like the champion he is, and looks dangerous, although he is yet to overcome his "Jonah Hole," the tenth, where he took a six. He had a seven there yesterday.

Charlie Ferrera, of San Francisco, 1931-1933 champion, who says he'd like to trade his golf sticks for a job, came back with a fine performance—a 74—to erase the memory of his first-day 80. Charlie qualified because he went back on the putting standard.

Coffin's "Mourners Row," the favorites who failed to qualify, included Carl Kauffman, the 35-year-old Pittsburgher, three-time champion, who had 80-81—161; Al Anderegreen, Chicago star, who was good enough to qualify for the National Open, but whose 83-77—160 wasn't good enough for a match play today, and Johnny Banks, another Chicago star, with 165

Par, which wasn't touched yesterday, was equaled twice today. Scotty Campbell did a 70 in the morning, and the young San Antonio airman, Kenny Rogers, who flew over the course with the greatest of ease, came in this afternoon with a 36-34—70, with a 4 on the short eighteenth hole. He was the fellow who tied with Rippy at 148. Rogers has been playing golf only four seasons.

Medalist Nordstrom richly earned his laurels. For the 36 holes he was off the fairway only four times. He had one three-put green, that coming today on the second hole, where he took a 5. His lone birdie of the final round was made on the fourth.

Two Teams in Tie.

The Harding Cup team battle proved to be the toughest in history when San Antonio and Louisville, the first-day pace-setter, tied with 612. Los Angeles, two-time winner, was two strokes to the rear. Washington's total of 647 was far down the list.

Eleven players tied at 159 started out to play off for nine places, but darkness snapped them at the end of the first hole. Six, scoring fours, already have won their places. The remaining five will play for the three places tomorrow.

Sixty-four will compete tomorrow in the "suicide" first and second round matches.

Rippy, Washington's lone hope, draws Balega as his first-round opponent tomorrow morning at 11:15. Balega tied for second place at 146.

Welsh Spends 24 Hours in Bed After Match; Cancels Threat

By John R. Vosburgh.

AFTER spending 24 hours in bed Monday as the result of his five-set match with Ralph McElvenny, Barney Welsh unsteadily regained use of his legs yesterday, staggered fairly well through 18 holes of golf and will get back to tennis today, barring a sudden change for the worse.

His threatened one-week boycott of the game, self-imposed, will come to a sudden close this afternoon after two complete days of faithful observance. Barney feels it is important that he get in shape for next week's big open tournament at Rye, N. Y., in which he is entered.

The McElvenny match was more or less the last straw for Welsh, or rather for Welsh's legs, for it marked the completion of their eleventh straight tournament. Consequently, when that No. 11 tournament, which happened to be the local Public Parks affair, finally closed after five sets Sunday, Welsh was on his "last legs," literally as well as figuratively.

He got home O. K. and they got him to bed all right, but the next morning when he tried to get up he was about as weak as an American Davis Cup team playing against England.

So the sick man remained horizontal for the rest of the day and finally succeeded in arising yesterday morning.

"Physically tired is all I was," says Barney, "just physically tired."

Valley League Batsmen Led By Lowery

Culpeper Third Baseman Tops Virginia Loop With .405 Average.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

HARRISONBURG, Va., July 30. Goldie Lowery, the slugging Culpeper third sacker who is a familiar figure to all semi-pro baseball fans in Virginia, set the pace for the Valley League hitters in the first half of the season with the lusty average of .405.

Lowery, who was shifted from the outfield to third, poled out 30 hits in 74 times at bat during the 21 games. He had a goodly number of extra base wallops and drew many passes.

Next to him comes Bob Baker, Harrisonburg center-fielder from the West Point Chesapeakes, who batted .377, making 23 hits in 61 trips. Third is Goodwin, Front Royal third baseman, with an average of .371. One point behind is Connell, Waynesboro catcher. Fifth place honors go to Ray Baker, Front Royal first baseman, with an average of .362. Clemmer Harris, fast Staunton outfielder, is sixth with .356, his fleetness of foot earning him many hits.

Marvil Leavel, Harrisonburg first baseman and one of the two veterans of the original Valley League still playing after 12 years, places next among the regulars with an average of .352. He has poled out the most hits, 31—one more than Lowery—and has been at bat the most times, 88.

Moore, Humphries Tied.

Moore, Charlottesville's hard-hitting centerfielder from Washington and Lee, and Humphries, Culpeper's light-hitting shortstop, are tied with the most runs, 19. Lowery is next with 16, while Rapp, Harrisonburg third sacker; Harris, Staunton, and Reitz, Charlottesville first baseman, follow with 15.

Following are the averages of the 74 players who hit .200 or over during the first half of the Valley League, as compiled by William Von Olhausen, of Harrisonburg, league statistician:

Johnson to Know Fate This Week

ble successors include Steve O'Neill, present Indian coach; Owen Bush, manager of the Minneapolis club; Arthur Fletcher, coach of the New York Yankees; Roger Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Browns, and Willie Kamm, veteran third baseman ousted by Johnson earlier in the season.

Bradley asserted that Johnson had "done much for the club in getting rid of some players who were undesirable as a result of their habits.

"I have often wondered how Walter carried on in the face of all the tough luck he has had," he said. "I can't recall any manager encountering the list of casualties in a single season that has fallen to his lot."

He said any "fair-minded man would have to take all these things into consideration in weighing Walter Johnson's future. It seems it has been just one darn thing after another, with the result we are 9½ games behind the pace. Candidly, I figured we would be on top or close to it at this stage of the race."

4th Straight Knockout Scored by Joe Rivers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 30.—Joe Rivers, Washington featherweight who recently gained fame with a knockout victory over Mike Belloise there, scored a fifth round K. O. over Frankie Martin, New York feather, here last night in the feature bout of the V. F. W. relief fund show.

Martin provided Rivers with keen competition until the fourth, when he was twice sent to the floor. A looping right ended the fight shortly after the start of the fifth round.

Rivers, who also has scored knockouts over Joe Foggeltti and Jimmy Tramberi in recent fights left for his bay training camp, where he is preparing for a forthcoming bout in Washington.

Young Netmen Upset Grant And Bryan

Seeded Stars Defeated in Meadow Club Singles by Prusoff, Buxby.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., July 30 Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, diminutive National Clay Court champion, and Robert Bryan, of Chattanooga, both seeded favorites, were the victims of upsets today as the meadow Club's Annual Invitation Tennis Tournament advanced into the quarter-final round.

Gregory Mangin, National Indoor champion and recent Seabright winner, came near joining Grant and Bryan on the sidelines, but managed to eke out a victory over Sam Lee, Stanford University captain, in three sets. Lee had Mangin at match point twice in the second set of their match, but once a net cord-ball saved Mangin and the other time Lee knocked out a backhander. The scores were 1—6, 9—7, 7—5.

Teasing Shots Decisive.

Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, Wash., who occupies a notch in the national ranking ten places below Grant's No. 10 spot, upset the litle Georgian by 7—9, 6—3, 6—3, scores when Grant found he couldn't handle those teasing soft shots which dropped just over the net when he was back at the baseline.

Steady back court play by Martin Buxby, former University of Texas star, of Miami, Fla., upset Bryan, who was seeded eighth among the meadow Club favorites. Bryan was far below his customary form, especially off the ground, and he was easy for Buxby, bowing out at 6—2, 8—6.

Frankie Parker, top-seeded favorite, dusted off Guy Cheng, Chinese Davis Cup star, with the loss of only two games, winning at 6—1, 6—1.

Clifford Sutter, of Detroit had to come from behind to beat the intercollegiate champion, Wilbur Hess, but he came back strongly and triumphed at 3—6, 7—5, 6—1, to gain his play in the round of eight.

East End Nine Wins Over Remington Club

Warrenton, Va., July 30.—East End Athletic Club, of the Fauquier County Baseball League, and the Remington Baseball Club played a ten-inning game in Warrenton yesterday to decide a 12-to-11 victory for the East End players, while Warrenton's Wanderers defeated the Remington Athletic Club, 4 to 1, at Remington. The Rappahannock All Stars, leading the league, with but one game lost this season defeated Midland 8 to 2. Springs Athletic Club pulling out of a losing streak defeated Rectortown 5 to 2.

Carnera Drugged In Bout, He Claims

defeat him. The Italian giant explained the reason he waited until he reached Italy to first mention the fact that he believed he was "drugged" was because he feared he would provoke the ire of American promoters by such charges.

By the United Press.

Garrison, N. Y., July 30.—Primo Carnera was "scientifically drugged" when Joe Louis hit him, Bill Brown, member of the New York State Athletic Commission, said today in answer to charges Carnera made in Italy that he had been drugged in his battle with the Detroit Negro.

"Louis did as sweet a job of eliminating Primo as I ever have seen—and Primo didn't have to be drugged to be out on his feet by the second round," Brown said.

"Primo's charge is the silliest thing I have ever heard. He was scientifically drugged when Louis hit him in the first round."

Brown said the commission probably wouldn't investigate the Italian's charges.

"But perhaps we may ask him to prove them if he ever returns to this country," he added significantly.

Miss Trenary to Play Mrs. Bopst in Net Finals

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 30.—Miss Trenary, Martinsburg, W. Va., and Mrs. Bopst, Frederick, reached the finals in the ladies' singles in the Cumberland Valley Tennis Tournament yesterday, the former defeating Miss Ludwig, Hagerstown, 6—4 and 6—2 and the latter defeating Miss Drumm, Martinsburg, 6—3 and 6—1.

William Krotzer, defending junior champion was eliminated by McCardell, Frederick, 6—1 and 6—1, while Gardner defeated Denslow, 6—4, 2—6, 8—6, while Homer, Martinsburg won from Green, Hagerstown, 6—1 and 6—2. In the doubles, Wright and McLaughlin defeated Schueller and Kidwell, 6—0 and 6—1.

Hosemen on Top.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 30.—The Hose Co. No. 4 ball club won its fifth straight game over the week-end, defeating the Cherry Run, W. Va., club on the latter's diamond, 9-4. It was the third straight win for Kenny Rentch, No. 4 flinger.

Martinsburg Takes Two Wild Ball Games

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 30.—The Martinsburg A. C. defeated Snyders All-Stars at Snyders in two games over the week-end, 13-10 and 11-4. The first game was a particularly free-hitting affair with the runners banging out a total of 18 hits, including a homer by Poisal.

Brunswickmen Retain Tie For Lead

Beat Walkersville, 3 to 2; Frederick Conquers Church Hill.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., July 30.—Brunswick downed Walkersville, in the Tri-County League, 3 to 2; Cedar Grove defeated Mount Airy, 9 to 6; New Market took the measure of Point of Rocks, 9 to 6; Frederick set back Church Hill, 14 to 5; Damascus ran away with Wakefield, 12 to 1, and Middletown triumphed over Jefferson, 3 to 1.

Brunswick's victory over the Glade Valley team enabled the Railroaders to hold on to first place in the pennant race, on even terms with Frederick, while Walkersville was shoved into the second division in a tie with Damascus, New Market and Wakefield. The Railroaders pulled the game from the fire in the last half of the ninth when Mahone singled, stole second and scored on a wild throw by Jolliffe.

U. S. Steel Corp. Cuts Loss for June Quarter

But the Net Is $6,112,734 Less Than for Same Period Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 30.—The United States Steel Corporation today declared a dividend of 50 cents on the preferred stock. The corporation has paid a similar dividend in each quarter since January, 1933, when the dividend on the senior shares was reduced from $7 annually.

The corporation reported total earnings of $14,117,864 for the quarter ended June 30 after ordinary operating expenses, against $12,428,449 for the March quarter and $21,082,389 for the June quarter last year.

After interest, depreciation, depletion, overhead expense on iron ore, etc., there was a deficit of $762,493 against a deficit of $2,173,891 in the first quarter and net income of $5,350,240 in the second quarter of 1934.

After providing for the preferred dividend the total deficit for the June quarter was $2,563,898 against deficit of $3,975,206 for the preceding quarter and surplus of $3,548,836 for the June quarter last year.

The dividend on the preferred shares is payable August 30 to stock of record August 2. With this payment dividend accumulations on the stock, which is entitled to $7 annually, will amount to $13.75 a share.

Shipments of finished steel products for the three months ended June 30 amounted to 1,768,751 tons against 1,785,248 tons for the March quarter and 2,373,409 tons for the June quarter last year.

Millers Protest Federal Invasion

By the United Press.

Minneapolis, July 30.—Continued interference of the Federal Government in business threatens "serious impairment of our ability to serve you, if not the ultimate destruction of your investment," the board of directors of General Mills, Inc., warns stockholders in their annual report. James F. Bell, chairman, charged that the Government has "invaded business to an unreasonable, unwarranted and unconstitutional extent."

Con. Gas Net Is $34,818,604

$2.10 a Share for Year Against $2.57 for Preceding Period.

New York, July 30.—The Consolidated Gas Co., of New York and subsidiaries report a consolidated net income of $34,818,604 for the 12 months ended on June 30, after all deductions, except minority interests, equivalent, after such minority interests and preferred dividends, to $2.10 a share on 11,476,527 no-par common shares. This compares with $40,354,091, or $2.57 a common share for the preceding year.

For the June quarter, net income was $8,186,873, or 48 cents a share on the common stock, against $7,480,014, or 41 cents a common share, in the 1934 period. For the first half of 1935, net income was $22,013,211, or $1.45 a share on the common stock, against $22,904,186, or $1.52 a common share, a year ago.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. reports a net profit of $124,758 for the second quarter of 1935, compared with a loss of $595,770 in the first quarter of 1935. The net profit remained after all charges, including depreciation and depletion.

City Ice & Fuel Co. of Cleveland operating in 23 States and in Canada, reports for six months ended June 30 last, net income of $376,206 after taxes, depreciation and all other charges. This compares with $1,403,678 for this period last year.

M. A. Hanna Co. and subsidiaries, six months ended June 30, net profit $948,821, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 50 cents a common share compared with $706,050, or 25 cents a share in the same period last year.

What the Stock Market Did.

	Tue.	Mon.
Advances	261	481
Declines	393	177
Unchanged	176	179
Total issues	830	837

Stocks—The market absorbed a substantial volume of profit taking with little damage to prices, as the closing average was less than half a point under that of Monday. Trading continued active with a total of 1,681,080 shares.

Bonds—A brisk rally in amusement issues was the feature of the market, Keith, Paramount and Warner Bros. all scoring advances. Governments held steady. Transactions were $10,529,000.

Curb—Oil stocks rallied sharply, Gulf and Humble gaining 2¾ points each. Trading was active with a total of 232,000 shares.

Grains—Wheat prices eased off under profit taking, July closing at 90⅝, down 1⅝. Corn was steady and July oats made a brisk advance of 3 cents to 39⅞.

Cotton—Futures sold lower under selling on favorable crop reports. October closed at 11.46, off 4 points.

Coffee—Spots were unchanged with Santos No. 4 at 8, and Rio No. 7 at 6¼. Futures were barely steady.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.20 for spots and refined sugar at 5.10 for fine granulated. Futures were slightly lower.

Bar gold—London prices declined 2d to 140s 5d ($34.82).

Harahan Is Elected Nickel Plate Head

Cleveland, July 30 (AP).—The board directors of the Nickel Plate Railroad elected W. J. Harahan president today. Harahan was elected president of the C. & O. Railroad and the Pere Marquette, affiliated roads, last Tuesday. He succeeds as president of the three railroads the late John J. Bernet, who died recently.

Harahan maintains residences both in Cleveland and Richmond, Va., but spends most of his time here.

Gen. Motors Contract.

New York, July 30 (AP).—Alison Engineering Co., division of General Motors, has awarded a contract to the Austin Co. for production and development of liquid-cooled aircraft engines at the Speedway, Indianapolis, Ind.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Resist Profit Taking and Short Selling in Active Trading—Bonds Turn Dull—Wheat Again Declines.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 30.—Financial markets seemed less active, but that was largely because of the price irregularity among stocks and the dullness in bonds. Stock turnover was close to one and three-quarters million shares, with the tone firm in the final trading. Commodities were a shade easier. September wheat in Chicago closed ¾ of a cent lower at 91⅞ cents a bushel.

Stocks were well tested in the morning. For an hour or so selling of leading issues was heavy enough to send the ticker a few minutes behind floor transactions in reporting the dealings, but unable to make much headway in cutting down prices the sellers soon abandoned the attempt. Intermittent profit taking went on, but it was offset by enough new buying to hold prices fairly well. Sentiment in Wall Street continues bullish on balance.

Some diversion was created by a sortie among the airplane shares. Hope of larger orders on Government account provided the urge. Gains of a point or so were made in most of the air shares. Douglas Boeing and United were the most active. Motor stocks were erratic. Sperry joined the airplanes. Auburn spurted for a while and some of the oils hardened. General Asphalt, an old-time favorite that has been sluggish for years, was unusually active and advanced more than a point.

Steel shares were firm in tone, but some of them gave up fractions. Inland, Republic and Otis reached new tops, but steel common and preferred held back. Public utilities were undistinguished, except for Pacific Lighting, which continued its rise. Irregularity was marked among the amusements, chemicals, merchants, farmers, foods, rubbers, tobaccos and metals.

New York Central and Southern Pacific led a less active railroad share market. Pennsylvania, B. & O., Santa Fe and Great Northern also were active. The rail group now is at the highest level since the second week of January. Price changes in the main were narrow. Had it not been for selling ex-dividend 2 points, Santa Fe would have touched a new high price.

Money markets continued dull and unchanged. The season is now here when, if any worthwhile expansion in bank credit is to take place in business this year, signs of it should appear. Bankers report little inquiry, now that the force of substitution of bank loans for bonds has spent itself. In spite of slack demand for bank credit, business activity seems to be expanding, and certainly is growing in several important industries.

One explanation is that many business concerns still are well heeled with cash. Much of the big rise in demand deposits in the past two years has been business men's money awaiting employment. Another reason is that a good deal of increase in production can come about without appreciable rise in pay rolls or intercorporation expenditure.

This week's statement of reporting member banks of the Federal Reserve System in 91 leading cities shows few changes in the trend prevailing over the past several years. Bank credit was cut down on both the securities and commercial sides.

A decline of $27,000,000 in so-called commercial loans was reported and of $37,000,000 in security loans. For the first time in several weeks the rising trend of demand deposits was checked, and a fall of $74,000,000 shown. The item nevertheless stands $2,789,000,000 higher than a year ago, which is a measure of the potential inflation that exists.

Among foreign exchanges the discount on three-month French franc futures, which was 19 points last week and 17 points yesterday, dropped to 14½ points today on optimistic feelings that the Dutch situation was clearing up after a week in which the central bank had been subjected to a further drain of $89,000,000 from its gold reserves. The guilder itself was lower, but held a safe margin above the gold point. The exchange market generally was less active and fairly steady.

Washington R. T. June Net Is Up Sharply

$5,493 Compares With $777 in Same Month Last Year.

Net income of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. was $5,493.36 in June, according to the report submitted to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday. The figure represents a marked advance over June last year when the net income was only $777.20.

Net income also rose by $14,599.77 for the first half of this year for the same company, as compared with 1934 first half. Net income for the first half of 1934 was only $10,639.26, against $25,239.03 for the first half of 1935.

Total passengers carried declined from 391,119 during May to 385,390 during June, a seasonal decrease.

Operating revenues increased from $33,775.35 in June, 1934, to $40,266.46 this June, a gain of $6,491.11.

Operating expenses and taxes increased during the same period from $30,883.73 to $33,044.08, a gain of $2,160.35.

For the half-year period, the operating revenue gain for comparable years was from $210,511.54 to $232,559.30, an increase of $22,047.76.

Operating expenses and taxes increased during the same period from $187,012.90 to $196,750.20, a gain of $9,737.30.

Fight Develops In Rock Island

New Management Sought by Financial Groups on Committees.

Chicago, July 30.—Carter H. Harrison, jr., chairman of the protective committee for the preferred stock of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., announced today that his group looks with disfavor upon the reported plans of representatives of several insurance companies and savings banks, now serving on other Rock Island committees, to force a change in the Rock Island operating management. This change purports to involve a successor to James E. Gorman, president of the road, who is also serving as one of the three trustees, whereby Mr. Gorman would relinquish his active duties as executive officer but retain a connection with the road.

Mr. Harrison stated that, in the opinion of his committee, a change now would inevitably lead to disturbances in the spirit of the organization, as well as perhaps have an adverse effect upon traffic relationships. His committee represents more than 4,000 holders of more than 200,000 shares of preferred stock, or about 40 per cent of the Rock Island preferred.

He pointed out that drought, floods and other extraordinary events beyond the control of the management have markedly contributed to the present low earnings of the road and that, unless there are some facts in the situation with which the committee is not familiar, a major change in operating personnel, such as has been suggested, will be opposed.

M.C.Bouvien Is Dead; Dean of Wall Street

New York, July 30.—The death of Michel C. Bouvien, 66 years a member of the New York Stock Exchange and dean of Wall street brokers, is announced by the Exchange. He was 89 years old, but directed the affairs of his firm up to the time of his death and until very recently appeared daily on the floor of the Exchange. Funeral services will be held at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Foreign Trade Of U. S. Drops

Favorable Balance Is 29 Millions Against 172 a Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

Despite a June gain in United States exports, the Nation's foreign sales in the first six months of 1935 were shown by Commerce Department figures today to have declined slightly from the 1934 period.

The department, in its monthly foreign trade report, attributed the export decline to a falling off in raw cotton and other crude material exports and said that an import increase was partly caused by the drought of last year.

The June, 1935, export total of $170,193,000 was 3 per cent over May, 1935, and slightly under June, 1934. June, 1935, imports of $156,756,000 were 8 per cent under the previous month, but still substantially higher than in June, 1934.

The six-month export decline compared with a comparatively steady increase of imports, with the result that the United States' favorable balance of trade for the 1935 half-year period was but $29,422,000, compared with $172,210,000 for the same part of 1934.

Budd Mfg. Seeks RFC $5,000,000

Philadelphia, July 30 (AP).—The Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Co. announced today it is asking its stockholders to approve a $5,000,000 loan under section 13B of the Federal Reserve Bank.

The management said additional working capital is needed because "we believe that we are facing a period of business improvement and we have booked for next year an increased volume of automobile body business."

Tobacco Titans Inaugurate War On Process Tax

P. Lorillard and Morris Get Federal Writs to Bar Collection.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 30.—The P. Lorillard Co., one of the "big four" cigarette group, will not pay its July processing taxes due today, having obtained injunctions in the Federal courts of Virginia and New Jersey restraining the Government from attempting to collect the AAA tobacco processing tax. The company estimates the monthly tax at $200,000, or more than sufficient to cover the present annual dividends on the common stock. The amount of the tax will be left in the custody of the Federal courts until the constitutionality of the agricultural adjustment tax is finally decided.

Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., large manufacturers of cigarettes, also have obtained an injunction in Virginia barring collection of the process tax. While no official announcement has been made it is understood in tobacco trade circles that other large cigarette producers are considering a determined fight on the tax, the opening move of which will be Federal court injunctions.

Packers Seek Injunctions.

Chicago, July 30.—Five large packing firms filed suits in the United States District Court yesterday for injunctions to bar the further collection of processing taxes on hogs on the ground that the AAA is unconstitutional. The taxes falling due amount to several million dollars.

The firms which have filed suit are Armour & Co., Swift & Co., the Illinois Meat Co., P. Brennan Packing Co. and Oscar Mayer & Co. The Cudahy & Wilson packing concerns are expected to join the group.

Another New High For Bank Stocks

New York, July 30.—New York City bank stocks registered a substantial gain during the past week, reaching a new high for the year during the closing day, the aggregate market value of 16 leading issues, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, amounting to $1,546,465,000. The 16 issues eased off slightly at the close of the day, however, the aggregate value being $1,543,731,000 compared with $1,488,783,000 at the close of the previous week, a net increase for the week of $54,948,000, or 3.69 per cent. The new high compares with a low point for the year of $1,226,175,000, reached on April 30.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 4.45 per cent compares with a yield of 4.62 per cent on July 19. The current market value is now 1.26 times the known book value against 1.21 times at the close of the previous week.

Hawaii Issues Call For Bids on Bonds

New York, July 30 (AP).—W. C. McGonagle, treasurer of the Territory of Hawaii, has issued a formal call for bids on $4,430,000 Hawaiian refunding bonds, for which proposals will be received by the Bankers Trust Co. of New York up to July 31.

Bidders will be required to name an interest rate not to exceed 2½ per cent. The bonds are tax exempt and non-callable.

M.-K.-T. Reports Loss.

New York, July 30 (AP).—The Missouri-Kansas-Texas lines had a net loss of $2,704,736 for the six months to June 30, compared with a deficit of $1,422,340 in the like period of 1934.

Wheat Sells Off; July Oats Jump

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 30.—Wheat prices underwent another setback today as profit taking and hedging sales predominated in a rather nervous trade. Speculative buying was light although fear for the condition of spring wheat led to purchase on the dips. The ensuing rallies were not strong, however.

Wheat closed ½ to 1⅜ cents below yesterday's finish, September 91¾@91⅞, and corn was ¼ to 1 cent off, September 76⅛@76¼. Oats closed ⅛ lower to 3 cents higher, July scoring the maximum gain permitted for one day. Rye lost ¾ to 1¾ and barley was unchanged to a cent higher.

Gray Silver's Funeral Today In Martinsburg

Friends to Bear Democratic Leader to Grave in West Virginia.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 30.—As messages of condolence poured into the home today, final preparations for funeral services for Gray Silver, 65, nationally-known farm economist and Democratic political figure in West Virginia for more than a quarter of a century, who died at his home here suddenly Sunday, were completed.

Simple rites will be conducted from the South Queen street home here tomorrow morning. The Rev. Dr. S. R. Diehl, Presbyterian pastor, in whose church Silver long served as a deacon, will conduct the services. Burial will be in a suburban cemetery.

Acting pall bearers will be Postmaster Whiting C. Faulkner, Trammell Hollis, Attorney C. Ralph Beall, Edwin W. Miller, Allen R. Emmert, Frank C. Thomas, L. Felteau Wilson and Maj. John N. Parks, all close personal friends of the deceased. Honorary bearers will be chosen from among the large group of distinguished out-of-town friends who are coming for the rites.

Messages from many personages came to the family following Mr. Silver's death. Among them were condolences from Edward A. O'Neal, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, which Mr. Silver helped to found; Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, who spoke of Mr. Silver's "contributions to the welfare of agriculturists of our country;" Gov. H. G. Kump of West Virginia; J. B. McLaughlin, West Virginia commissioner of agriculture; Judge C. K. Kump, of Romney, W. Va.; Clarence E. Martin, former president of the American Bar Association, with whom Mr. Silver in earlier years shared offices here, who said he was hurrying home from California to attend the rites; former Gov. John J. Cornwall, of West Virginia; former West Virginia Commissioner of Agriculture Howard M. Gore; former United States Senator Henry D. Hatfield; Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace; Chester Gray, former associate of Mr. Silver, of West Virginia; Attorney Charles J. Faulkner, jr., of Chicago.

Andrew J. Foble.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cambridge, Md., July 30.—The funeral of Andrew Jackson Foble, Eastern Shore business man, has been arranged for Thursday afternoon at his home here. Burial will take place in Cambridge Cemetery.

Starting in business here in 1870, Mr. Foble long had been interested in civic affairs. For a number of years he served as president of the Cambridge Female Seminary. He helped organize the Cambridge Water Co., and was a stockholder in the company for 38 years.

He was one of the oldest past chancellors of the Knights of Pythias in the United States, and in 1878 was the youngest past chancellor in the county.

Five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Foble celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. She survives with an adopted son, A. J. Foble, jr.

Frank Warren.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., July 30.—Funeral services for Frank Warren, 68, well-known painter who was fatally injured when his automobile was struck by a train, Friday, will be conducted at his home. Burial will be in Massawango Cemetery.

Silver Spring Citizens' Group Launches Clean-up Campaign

Copies of Anti-Dumping Law Are Distributed to Business Men.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Determined to rid the business section of unsightly and insanitary conditions caused by the dumping of trash and refuse, the Silver Spring (Md.) Citizens' Association is sending a copy of a "dumping ordinance" adopted by the county commissioners in 1929 this week to each business house in the territory.

The ordinance states that "it is unlawful for any person or persons to dump, place or cause to be dumped or placed within 100 feet of any public highway or street within the limits of the Montgomery County suburban district, any garbage, offal, tin cans, trash or waste matter whatsoever."

It further states that no person shall dump any trash or waste matter within 100 feet of any building used or occupied by human beings within the limits of the county suburban district.

Business houses will be asked to post the copies of the ordinance in conspicuous places in their stores.

In a further effort to beautify the town, the association has obtained permission of vacant lot owners to post "no dumping" signs. The movement is sponsored by the organization's clean-up committee, of which Mrs. C. W. Mitchell is chairman.

Because of a complaint by Herndon M. Normandy, 6806 Eastern avenue, Takoma Park, D. C., in the holding of the Takoma Park American Legion Post No. 28 carnival near his home, Commander E. Brook Fetty announced yesterday that the affair will be held on the vacant property at the corner of Maple avenue and Carroll street Takoma Park, D. C., instead of the original site.

The event will open at 6 p. m. August 3 and be held daily until August 7, inclusive. It is the aim of the organization to raise enough funds to send the drum and bugle corps of the Sons of the American Legion to the annual convention at Ocean City, Md., in September. This group, consisting of 52 boys, was formed by the post to add occupation and supervised recreation to their spare hours.

Bingo will be the featured game, with attractive awards for the lucky players. Homemade cakes, candy, soft drinks and ice cream will be sold.

The committee in charge of arrangements includes W. A. Mauger, E. C. Thomas, Frank Troll, D. D. Lamond, D. W. Twiddy and E. Brooke Fetty. The Ladies Auxiliary to the post will be represented by Mrs. H. P. Ware, Mrs. Joseph E. Bateman, Mrs. L. F. Cavanaugh, Mrs. J. W. Shadle, Mrs. George Graves, Mrs. Earl Thomas, Mrs. W. A. Mauger, Mrs. E. B. Fetty and Mrs. L. E. Beacock.

Although the weekly day encampment for Girl Scouts at Silver Spring, Md., is half over, girls between 10 and 18 still may register for the camp which meets today at 9 o'clock in Jesup Blair Community Park, according to an announcement by Mrs. J. A. Kurz, director.

Approximately 140 girls from Takoma Park, Silver Spring and Northwest Washington have enrolled and will receive their badges August 21 when a court of awards will be held. The girls bring their own lunches each Wednesday and from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. are busy with nature study, handicrafts, games and other activities.

August 14 has been designated as Visitors' Day, when work accomplished during the camp will be on display and special dramatics will be given. Mrs. John Guill, president of the Takoma Park Horticultural Club, also will give a demonstration on garden flowers at that time.

Approximately 200 members of the Montgomery County granges are expected to attend the Maryland State Grange Field Day, Thursday, at the U. S. Government Experimental Farm, Beltsville, Md.

As a feature of the program, a speed-ball game will be played by teams representing Montgomery and Frederick counties. Albert A. Ady, gatekeeper of the Maryland State Grange, will head the Montgomery County delegation.

The monthly meeting of the Rockville Chamber of Commerce will be held Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Fire Department Building, according to an announcement made yesterday by S. M. Hamilton, secretary.

Historic Mansion To Go at Auction

First Maryland Governor Owned 1694 Home.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 30.—The home of Maryland's first colonial Governor, Sir Francis Nicholson, said to have been built in 1694, is to be sold at public auction, it was announced today.

The colonial building is to be disposed of by John T. Marchand, of Washington, executor of the estate of his brother, Francis T. Marchand, who bought the house in 1875. He lived there until his death last year.

Under the Marchand will filed for probate in Anne Arundel County Orphan's Court, the deceased directed that his estate to be divided, one-third to his brother, John T. Marchand; one-third to another brother, George E. Marchand, and the other third to be distributed to two neices, Mrs. Catherine Del Valle, and Mrs. Philip Welch.

New Washington Shrine Is Sought

Bill Introduced to Restore Alexandria Building.

An Alexandria building once used by George Washington as his town home and office would be restored as a national shrine under a bill introduced in Congress yesterday by Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia.

The measure called for appropriation of $35,000 to finance the project. The Secretary of the Interior would have charge of the work.

Smith reported the building formerly stood at Pitt and Cameron streets.

Institutions Visited.

Richmond, Va., July 30 (AP).—Four State institutions in the Richmond area were visited today by Gov. Peery and members of his budget advisory commission. They are the State Industrial Farm for Women; the State Penitentiary Farm in Goochland County; the Industrial School for Boys at Maidens, and the Industrial School for Girls at Bon Air.

Dead Baby Shown to Mother, Who Sobs in Cell: 'Not Mine'

Footprints May Reveal Identity of Tot in River.

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., July 30.—They brought a dead baby into 21-year-old Pauline Carter's jail cell here today, forced her to stare into its face and then asked her if it was her daughter.

Sobbing, the girl shook her head. "It doesn't look like my little baby," she said, "go away and leave me alone."

The drowned child was found in South River at Waynesboro yesterday. Tonight, following the girl's denial that it was her child, officers planned to compare a footprint of the tiny tot with one taken when the Carter girl's daughter was born in Jefferson Hospital, Roanoke, July 15.

"I am confident this is her baby," Dr. Glenn C. Campbell, county coroner, said. "She probably doesn't recognize it because the water changed its color, but it seems apparent this is her child."

Arrested in Waynesboro Sunday, the young woman has been in jail here since. Under questioning of officers she maintains her innocence of drowning the baby, which she admits was born to her out of wedlock in the Roanoke Hospital two weeks ago. No charge has been made against her.

Chapter XVII.—Mystery of the Blond Twin.

In the case of the De Autremont brothers, there is an illustration of how special agents anywhere may take up a trail on an instant's notice as efficiently as though they had worked on the case since its inception.

On the night of October 11, 1923, southbound Southern Pacific passenger train No. 13 had just pulled out of the small station of Siskiyou, Oreg., and approached Tunnel 13—this double appearance of 13 in one of the West Coast's major railroad tragedies has caused many a roundhouse argument about superstition.

Out of the darkness of the tunnel two young men suddenly caught the grab rail of the engine ladder and clambered swiftly to the gangway. Engineman Bates turned from the throttle with the knowledge that someone was behind him; he stared into the menace of drawn revolvers.

"Pull 'er down to a stop!" a bandit commanded. "Just inside the other end of the tunnel."

Obedience was necessary. The train stopped at the tunnel mouth; here a third man was waiting. In his hands was a shotgun; beside him was a collection of dynamite sticks, capped and attached by a long wire to a blasting machine.

The unusual stop brought curiosity to Dougherty, the mail clerk; hurriedly he went to the half-open door to investigate. Instantly the bandit raised his shotgun and fired, the charge ripping past Dougherty's head, but not striking him. Instinctively the mail clerk recoiled, and with a mechanical action pulled shut the door of the mail car, locking it. The man outside shouted for him to open up. Dougherty refused.

"You'll open up all right," the bandit answered. He ran forward and placed the charge of dynamite under an end of the car. Then, returning, he pushed the plunger of the blasting machine. Instantly there was a roar of detonation; the heavy mail car rose and settled again, one end a mass of wreckage and the body of Dougherty within so badly mangled that identification was later possible only through the metal tag he wore on his wrist.

Killing Proves Useless; Mail Car Won't Move.

Now the tunnel was thick with gas and smoke. Just then a brakeman appeared, his lantern winking an irregular course along the train. The two bandits in the engine cab saw him approaching and took no chances. Their guns flamed. The brakeman fell dead.

"Uncouple that car and let's get going!" the two bandits called to their comrade. The third outlaw leaped over the body of the dead brakeman, squeezed between the cars and performed his task. Guns pressed close to the fireman and engineer.

The engine crew tried to obey. The explosion had derailed the mail car; it could not be moved.

The three bandits now truly became madmen. Their ghastly plan had miscarried; with flight before them, they paused only long enough to kill the defenseless engineer and fireman. Then they leaped from the train and the trio disappeared into the thickness of surrounding forests.

The man-hunt which followed was one of the most widespread in the history of America. Sheriffs, police officers, postoffice inspectors and the Bureau of Investigation all joined in a concerted effort to catch the bandits. At last their abandoned hide-out was discovered, deep in the Siskiyou forest; the men, of course, were gone. One piece of evidence, however, had been overlooked. A pair of overalls had been left behind and in one of the pockets was found a money-order receipt which had been issued to a man named Hugh de Autremont who lived nearby. Investigation then disclosed that Hugh and his twin brothers, Ray and Roy, hand disappeared about the time of the train hold-up.

Detailed descriptions were obtained, together with photographs, and set forth on "Wanted" notices which were circulated over the entire world. The descriptions were not limited to the English language; six tongues were used in an effort to cover thoroughly every possible means of identification. They offered, from various sources, $15,000 in rewards.

Soldier in Philippines Is Robber in Disguise.

Naturally, every police force in America picked up suspects. At last, after nearly four years, a United States soldier serving in the Philippines noticed a similarity between the picture of one of the men on the "Wanted" poster and a soldier who called himself James C. Price. Price was arrested and questioned—and was found to be Hugh de Autremont, following which he was returned to Oregon for trial. The trail of the twins, however, remained as vague as ever. Hugh had given no information regarding their whereabouts.

Now new notices were printed and distributed, containing the pictures of Ray and Roy. Finally, in June of 1927, a woman called the office of the Bureau of Investigation in Columbus, Ohio. She told the special agent in charge that she had learned from someone else that two persons resembling the fugitives had been seen in the vicinity of Portsmouth and Ironton, Ohio, but since had moved to Steubenville.

A special agent carefully reread the files in the De Autremont case. At Portsmouth, he found the original informant. All the man knew was that he had chanced to read a newspaper retelling the story of the Siskiyou train robbery and remembered that two men with whom he had worked several years before rather resembled the De Autremont twins.

"They called themselves Elmer and Clarence Goodwin," he told the special agent. "One of them is dark, like you say all the De Autremonts were, but the other is real blond. Why, his eyebrows are as yellow as a canary."

"How's their height?"

"Well, we were all measuring one day, and one was a little taller than the other."

In view of the hundreds of false tips concerning the De Autremont twins, this information pointed to a cold trail. Bureau of Investigation training, however, demands that a special agent continue to persist until every lead is proved to be fact or false. The special agent began a round of places where Elmer and Clarence Goodwin had been employed in the vicinity of Portsmouth.

Records were examined; they listed the men as being of different ages, their height as different and their birthplaces as Mena, Ark., when that of the twins was known to have been Williamsburg, Iowa. Now the special agent had a clue. He knew that Hugh had been born in Mena; this was indication that the so-called Goodwin brothers had allowed their subconscious brains to trick them into using the first familiar name which popped into their heads as a fictional birthplace.

Officer Now Becomes Merely a Farm Hand.

Further investigation brought forth a doctor who had examined the men and taken their height. Stripped, they had measured exactly the same; evidently one was wearing lifts in his shoes. It also was learned that the Goodwins had been employed to tear down an abandoned furnace and that one was familiar with explosives. By this time the special agent was determined to have a look at these men. He went to Steubenville.

However, he did no such obvious thing as stroll into the steel mill where they were employed. If Ray and Roy had eluded capture for four years, it was because they possessed that strange sense common to so many criminals which allows them almost to feel the fact that they are being watched. The special agent took no chances Among other things, he had learned that Elmer Goodwin had married and was living with his wife and baby on a farm near Steubenville, near his place of employment in a steel mill.

The routine of the Bureau of Investigation regarding occupational disguises here came into play. The special agent had been reared on a farm; he now went back to the work of his boyhood and got a job as a farmhand in the locality. He knew how to pitch hay and yell at horses; no one suspected him to be anything except what he appeared to be. Finally he found a chance furtively to observe Elmer Goodwin, he of the blonde hair and pale eyebrows. That night, as the special agent secretly wrote his report, he added:

"I feel convinced that Subject Number Two, Elmer Goodwin, has consistently bleached his hair and eyebrows expectly enough even to deceive his wife. An effort will be made tomorrow to take the brothers into custody."

The aid of the police was enlisted in making the arrest. It was planned to pick up Ray and Roy when they reported for work on the night shift at the steel mill. However, Roy showed up an hour early, in an attempt to get a job for a friend. He was arrested, of course, but this brought complications. Now, if Ray sensed trouble when his brother did not return, a Nationwide hunt must begin all over again.

Agent Alters Disguise And Captures the Twin.

Another phase of the special agent's prior life had included experience as a street railway claim agent. Immediately he became such and drove to the supposed Elmer Goodwin's home. Concealed in the big car were armed detectives. With an acquaintance of Roy de Autremont's, the "claim agent" went into the house. The acquaintance broke the alleged news that Roy had been hurt in a street car accident.

"The doctor said you'd better come to his office," said the "claim agent," "so that if there's suit over it we won't have any difference of opinion about the injuries."

The killer did not hesitate—until he got to the automobile and the detectives had closed in on him. Then he whirled on the special agent.

"If I'd known who you were I'd have killed you!" he snarled. This was not news. The special agent had considered all that in making his plans.

The arrest brought confirmation of the fact that Roy de Autremont, otherwise Elmer Goodwin, had bleached his hair and that he had done it sufficiently well to deceive even his wife. Incidentally, upon their examination at police headquarters, the men were found to be more alike than the average twins, in spite of Ray's blond hair and eyebrows and Roy's scrawny, newly grown mustache, which gave him a decidedly foreign appearance.

Roy de Autremont was found to have a scar at the tip of the left forefinger, a very faint scar back of the joint of the right little finger and a decided scar on the back of his head; the right toenail showed a bad abrasion. These identical marks were also present on Ray de Autremont's body.

A still further coincidence was the fact that in spite of the long lapse of time since the robbery and murders, Hugh had been captured so recently that his trial was only in its third day when the Bureau of Investigation shot forth the news that it had caught the twins. All three were sentenced to life imprisonment in Oregon State Penitentiary with three murder indictments and two indictments charging robbery of the United States mail held pending against them, to forestall any efforts at clemency.

DOES YOUR HUSBAND CALL YOU GROUCHY?
He's truthful if not tactful. Manlike, he is bewildered by your offishness and irritability. He can't understand what you have to be blue about. He wishes that you'd snap out of it. He'd do anything he could to help you. If he knew how good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was, he'd go straight to the nearest drug store and buy you a bottle.

Mrs. Barbara Spears

"My husband says I am my old self again," says Mrs. Barbara Spears, 799 Elma Street, Akron, Ohio. "I was tired and all in with no appetite. Had no pep and was in poor spirits. Your Vegetable Compound eliminated that awful tired feeling."

Don't try your husband's patience too far. Get a bottle from your druggist NOW. It probably will help you, because nearly a million American women know from personal experience that it helps them.

On the Air Today

Following close on announcement of the return to the air of the Atwater Kent series this fall comes word now that the Sigmund Romberg hour will make its 1935 premiere Tuesday, September 10, and undoubtedly will be heard locally from WRC. The program is expected to be essentially as last winter, featuring Romberg himself, directing a large orchestra with soloists and choral groups.

If the Eddie Duchin auditions are a correct yardstick, contraltos have cornered the radio market. All seven of the audition winners, from Washington across the country to last week's winner in Los Angeles, have been throaty songstresses. Similarly, tenors have been in the minority, two having won as compared with five barytones. The national finals will be held in New York this fall.

Bill Coyle received his trophy yesterday noon. The cup, awarded by the Henry Kaufman advertising agency, is a tribute to WMAL's youthful announcer who, for a period of one year at least, will carry the responsibility of being Washington's ace commercial announcer. At the suggestion of the donor, the huge silver cup will be on display in the studios of WMAL for one year. Next summer another award will be made and Coyle will be able to take his trophy home to the Coyle mantel. Warren Sweeney and Larry Elliott, who placed second and third in the judges' ratings, were guests of honor at yesterday's luncheon.

Maryland's Eastern Shore is to be glorified in a new series of programs starring John Charles Thomas. The premiere is set for tonight, WMAL, at 8. The new show is called "John Charles Thomas and His Neighbors" and replaces "Home On the Range," in which the operatic star was cast as a singing ranch owner. Thomas spent his boyhood in "the Shore" section and now has a summer home there. Frank Tours will direct the orchestra and supporting Thomas will be Willie Morris, soprano, and a quartet.

Wriggling, squirming, hissing and spitting, all are promised as a part of the procedure from the Staten Island Zoo. The business of extracting the deadly snake's venom will be handled by Dr. Carol Stryker, director of the zoo. A measly little 6-foot "spitter," kid brother of the king cobra, will be interviewed by Dan Russell, N. B. C. announcer.

A second group of "Six-Gun Justice" thrillers takes to the air tonight, WJSV, at 8:30 o'clock, portraying characterizations of the picturesque life of the cattle country of California. Carson Robison's Buckaroos afford a lighter background for the dramatizations. Wilbur Hall, the author, is an old cowhand himself.

Post Carrier Salesman Bill Falk, 3446 Connecticut ave.

BOYS WILL BE MEN

. . . what SORT of men?

MONEY isn't wealth, son. Yet, if you want wealth, you must know the value of money . . . just what it means . . . how it should be spent . . . how it should be saved.

ALREADY, you know a good deal about money. You know it represents the reward for labor . . . and that the amount of that reward is governed by the amount of work you do. It's well to know that . . . it's necessary to know it . . . but many lads your age will never learn it. Money to them is merely something to spend as quickly as possible . . . for fun.

OUT ON THAT newspaper route of yours, you're learning quite a lot about money . . . and economics. Now, economics is a big word . . . and it's a big subject too. But it isn't a dry one. It is the study of business . . . how men and women . . . and boys like yourself . . . earn a living.

YOUR'E making your own living . . . quite probably buying your own clothes, providing yourself with spending money . . . putting away a part of your earnings for college. You're not wishing for wealth . . . you're working for it . . . as a Post Carrier Salesman.
